WOMAN ENDS HER LIFE IN LEAP FROM 15TH STORY

Mrs. Arthur Ellicock, 57, Jumps From Fire Escape at the Greystone Apartments—Body Found in Alley.

LEFT CARD BEARING NAME IN HALLWAY

Subject to Nervous Attacks Since Death of Son in Plane Accident Three Years Ago, Husband Says.

Mrs. Lillian Ellicock, 57 years old, wife of Arthur Ellicock of 5838 Cabanne avenue, ended her life by jumping from the fifteenth floor of the Greystone Apartments, Newstead and McPherson avenues yesterday afternoon.

Mrs. Ellicock entered the apartment building office at 3:15 p. m., and asked the elevator operator to take her to the tenth floor. She left the elevator at that floor, and is supposed to have tried the rear hall door, leading to the fire escape landing. This door was fastened, as was the corresponding door on each of the next four floors.

At the fifteenth floor, Mrs. Ellicock found the door open, stepped outside and jumped. Her body was found in an alley north of the building.

Left Note on Card. In the hallway she had left a jacket, her glasses, and a purse containing two cards. One bore her name and address, the other the words, "Call Alexander, undertaker."

Her husband, who is an architect in the employ of the city, identified the body at the morgue. He said Mrs. Ellicock had suffered intensely from the heat in recent weeks, and had been under treatment for a nervous disorder. She had been subject to nervous attacks, he said, since the death of their only child, a son, three years ago.

Son Killed in Plane Crash. The son, Clarence M. Ellicock, 24 years old, a graduate of the University of Michigan, was killed when serving as a demonstration pilot at Lynchburg, Va., his plane crashing at the dedication of the municipal airport there.

Mr. and Mrs. Ellicock had been married 20 years. He went out of the house at 2 p. m. to clean his automobile, and Mrs. Ellicock went for a walk, saying nothing to indicate that she did not expect to return.

JAPANESE WANTS WASHINGTON AND LONDON PACTS SCRAPPED

Big Navy Advocate Declares Opposite 1933 Naval Conference Will Fail.

TOKIO, Aug. 26. (Sunday)—Failure of the 1935 naval conference unless the Powers agree to abrogation of the Washington and London naval treaties was predicted last night in an address by Admiral Hoshizuma Suetsugu, commander of the combined Japanese fleet.

"The basic policy of the Japanese Navy," he said in an address before the Great Asia society, "is abolition of the present ratio system of limitation, and establishment of the principle of equality in armaments. If the other Powers reject these two fundamental demands, rupture of the 1935 conference appears unavoidable."

Admiral Suetsugu is the most active leader in Japan's "Big Navy" faction, a powerful influence upon current governmental and political affairs.

He advocated fixing a maximum global tonnage within which each Power would be permitted to build what it deems necessary for its security.

He declared, the world situation was vastly changed since Japan accepted the 5-5-3 ratio at Washington, and justified a fundamental revision of the limitation scheme. It was learned from official sources that fundamental naval policies remain to be decided at a series of Cabinet meetings early in September.

ROOSEVELT-SCHALL ROW 'CLOSED INCIDENT'

President Says Senator Gave No Facts About "News Control;" Only Abuse.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25.—President Roosevelt today told Senator Schall (Rep., Minnesota), that the latter had failed to substantiate his charge that a Government press agency was being formed and said "the incident is closed."

Roosevelt sent the following telegram to Schall:

"Yesterday I sent you a telegram in good faith beseeching you to make a statement that persons in the administration were planning some form of press or radio government-controlled news agency designed to supersede private agencies."

"As any such plan would be contrary to the administration's policy, I requested you with the utmost politeness to give me the facts behind your charges."

"Today I received from you a vituperative two-page letter which gives no facts and does not answer my simple request. The incident is closed."

Schall in a recent radio speech said it was the intention to supplant existing wire news services. In reply to Roosevelt's first message Schall wrote in part:

"You ask me for 'information' concerning what you yourself have done. Are you attempting to secure the facts so that you may be in a position to refute yourself?"

"For me to chronicle all of the attempts of your administration to throttle the press and free speech— all known to you and approved by you in advance—would be but to recite incidents with which you are entirely familiar. It is wasteful for the fact that I see in your request for 'information' an attempt on your part to appear as a victim of your own bureaucracy instead of your chief organizer. I would be inclined to ignore your telegram."

Schall referred to what he termed "the press censorship bill" passed by the House and killed in the Senate during the special session last year. He said that under it a publisher not approved by the administration could have been sentenced to 10 years' imprisonment, and that Chairman Sumners of the House Judiciary Committee had stated the bill was introduced at the request of the "Executive."

CONCERN FOR DUTCH QUEEN

Holland Physicians Phone Advice to Norway Where She Is Ill.

THE HAGUE, Holland, Aug. 25.—Queen Wilhelmina's subjects are worried over the state of her health.

Her physicians conferred today and again tonight, telephoning the results to Aasgaardstrand, Norway, where the Queen was taken ill five days ago while touring Norway.

The Dutch press has refrained from publishing alarming reports but a fact that Queen Wilhelmina is an energetic, outdoor type has been unable to throw off her illness has caused general concern. The recent deaths of the Queen mother and Prince Consort Henry were thought to have contributed to her present condition, described as one largely of exhaustion. Reports from Aasgaardstrand tonight were that her condition had taken a turn for the better.

OHIO FARM STRIKE FLAREUP; MAYOR'S HOME IS BOMBED

Leader of Union Taken From Officers, Beaten and Warned to Get Out of Town.

HE RETURNS AND ISSUES CHALLENGE

Guarded by Strikers as Anti-Union Crowd, Armed With Clubs, Dares Him to Show Himself.

By the Associated Press.

McGUFFY, O., Aug. 25.—A shouting, cursing crowd of several hundred men, women and children paraded past the home of Okey Odell, union strike leader tonight, daring him to emerge.

"Come on out, Odell," they shouted as the agricultural workers' union head lay in an upper room, a pistol near his hand, recovering from a beating he received when he was abducted early today after the Mayor's home had been bombed.

About 20 of Odell's friends, armed with shotguns and revolvers, guarded the house, and the crowd made no attempt to enter.

"I'll kill the first man who tries to get me," Odell said. It was reported he had been warned by non-union sympathizers to leave town tonight.

The crowd, riding in 40 trucks and automobiles, headed toward Alger, a village four miles west of here. The men were waving heavy clubs.

Strikers on Guard. Later shots were heard in the direction of the Scioto Land Co., one of the major onion growers, and deputies immediately started for the scene. They reported strikers, armed with shotguns, had fired the shots to show Gladys Dyer, a striker, who they were guarding, that they were on the job. Dyer is one of the men reported to have been ordered to leave town.

Meanwhile, nine groups of former Kentucky residents who had joined the strike after working in the onion fields, sought transportation back to their former homes. A striker was arrested on charges of assault with intent to kill after the automobile caravan of demonstrators had left McGuffey. Kline Wies, son of a strike leader, was taken into custody on an affidavit by Ray Harden, foreman of a land company, who charged that Wies threw a brick that hit Ora Craig, a non-striker, during the parade.

Thinks 19 Deputies Enough. A National Guard observer, sent here after the outbreak last night, was assured by Sheriff Wilbur McCall that his staff of 19 deputies could control the crowd. Five of the deputies followed the crowd toward Alger.

Three strike leaders, Lawrence Gross, Ben Corbin and Floyd Collins, were warned to leave the village, which claims to be the world's largest shipping point for onions, before morning. Collins was removed by his friends, who said he was ill and could not defend himself.

Charles Johnson, father of 11 children, said he had been threatened with the bombing of his home unless he left. He said he refused to leave.

Sporadic outbreaks have marked the Scioto march since it began last three months. Last night, after a bomb damaged the home of Mayor Godfrey J. Ott, anti-union men took control of this village of 700, and Mrs. Ott said: "It's about time."

Odell, who had been arrested in connection with the bombing, was taken by a crowd from a deputy sheriff's barracks, clubbed, spirited from town, threatened and released. He "hitch-hiked" his way back to town, obtained a revolver and stationed himself on his front porch. "Come and get me," he challenged.

Undisturbed there, Odell, accompanied by his brother, Tunie, then strolled unarmed down Main street, where a few hours before 15 trucks and automobiles loaded with non-union sympathizers held sway.

He exhibited a deep gash beside his nose and asserted he was kicked in the ribs by his captors as he lay on the floor of a truck. He was a bit defiant.

"I think the strike of the onion workers is just starting," he said. "This doesn't scare me a bit."

Late this afternoon he went to bed, haggard and worn, with a revolver under his pillow and a half dozen friends at his doorway.

"I'll kill any man who comes in and don't belong here," he said. Authorities obviously were apprehensive as night came on, fearing further violence.

Miljah Odell, brother of Okey, and

HUGE NAZI RALLY TO URGE SAAR TO REJOIN GERMANY

600,000 Gather for Coblenz Demonstration at Which Hitler Will Speak Today.

By the Associated Press.

COBLENZ, Aug. 25.—Six hundred thousand Germans, it was estimated, converged on Coblenz today for tomorrow's great loyalty demonstration, arranged in the interest of Saar adherence to the fatherland.

Chancellor-Fuehrer Hitler, Nazi Minister of Propaganda, Goebbels and Franz von Papen, special envoy to Austria, will speak. Hitler is expected to make an impassioned plea for national solidarity, urging Saar residents to demonstrate smotheringly their will for reunion with Germany at the plebiscite Jan. 13.

Residents of the rich industrial region will decide by their vote whether to return to German sovereignty, remain under the present League of Nations' mandate or be joined to France.

A radio hook-up was ready to carry Hitler's words to all parts of Germany as Goebbels' propaganda machine set the stage for the demonstration.

Hundreds of special trains, thousands of automobiles and countless bicycles brought patriotic Germans to this Rhineland city, while 170,000 strikers, in spectacular mass demonstration arranged by Goebbels, came running with messages from virtually every German city.

NOTORIOUS CORSICAN BANDIT SURRENDERS TO POLICE

Ruthless Three-Year Hunt of French Gendarmes Causes Francois Bornea to Give Up.

By the Associated Press.

AJACCIO, Corsica, Aug. 25.—His resistance broken by the ceaseless hunt of French gendarmes, Francois Bornea, said to be the last of Corsica's "bad bandits," surrendered to police today.

Haggard from three years' dodging of gendarmes in the hinterland, the bandit entered the village of Levis and gave himself up on a charge for murder in 1930.

When French troops and gendarmes, equipped with tanks, launched their bandit roundup in 1931, Bornea, a former gendarme who joined the band of the notorious Joseph Bartoli, fled to the brush. Since then the hunted man had continuously to change his hiding places in shepherds' huts and caves.

"I couldn't stand it any longer," he said on surrendering to the police.

Francois Bornea is one of the many "bad men" of Corsica to be killed, captured or to surrender following the police campaign to purge the island of outlaws. Airplanes, armored cars and machine guns have been used. Joseph Bartoli, bandit king of the town of Palencia, has been slain. Caviglioli also, Jean Jacques Santoni is said to be dead.

COC LIKELY TO BE MADE PERMANENT ORGANIZATION

Action Expected by Next Congress; 382,000 Employed; Cost so far, $500,000,000.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25.—President Roosevelt's Civilian Conservation Corps, officials said today, was almost certain to be made a permanent institution by the next Congress. The law creating the corps expires next March 31.

Proclamation made that legislation for a permanent CCC be made a part of the social security program now being drafted for presentation to Congress.

Forestry service officials said there would be need for the Civilian Conservation Corps indefinitely.

At least 382,000 men, for the camps are at work on national preserves.

Corps directors recently reported an enrollment of 382,000, the largest since its establishment. In all, officials said, about $600,000,000 has been spent on the corps so far.

ANTI-FERGUSON MAN LEADS IN EARLY TEXAS RETURNS

J. V. Allred Ahead of T. F. Hunter for Democratic gubernatorial Nomination.

By the Associated Press.

DALLAS, Tex., Aug. 25.—James V. Allred, 35-year-old Attorney General, led Tom F. Hunter, Wichita Falls attorney and oil man, for the Democratic nomination for the governorship of Texas, in early tabulations of the vote in today's runoff primary.

Returns from 207 of the State's 254 counties, 71 complete, with about two-thirds of the vote counted: Allred, 344,976; Hunter, 317,150.

Hunter has the backing of former Gov. James E. Ferguson, husband of the present Governor, Mrs. Miriam (Ma) Ferguson. Allred is an outspoken opponent of "Fergusonism."

Only Democrats voted in today's primary, the Republicans having made their nominees in the first primary last month. D. E. Waggoner of Dallas, insurance man, is the Republican nominee for Governor.

TWO MEN KILLED IN KINGSHIGHWAY CROSSING CRASH

SECOND ACCIDENT NARROWLY AVERTED

Limited Flagged When Car Is Trapped on Tracks by Gate Lowered Only on One Side.

By the Associated Press.

Two men were killed when a Missouri Pacific passenger train crashed into an automobile at the Kingshighway grade crossing, south of Shaw boulevard, at 5:34 p. m. yesterday. They were:

Harry A. Watts, 28 years old, 3914 Juniata street, airplane pilot. James Everett Pounds, 39, 3407 Vista avenue, gardener.

Watts was dead when taken from the demolished automobile. His head had been crushed, and his right leg broken. Pounds died in City Hospital a half-hour after the accident from a skull fracture and shock. Both were married. Pounds had four children, the oldest 11.

Witnesses questioned by the police said the gates, which ordinarily protect motor traffic from the trains, were not down when Pounds, driving his old-model coupe with Watts as a passenger, started south across the rails. Train No. 4, inbound, and coming from the west side of the street, shattered the machine, which was carried across Kingshighway and thrown under a billboard on the east side of the street.

The railroad's gateman, and claimants of the company who talked with him, maintained that the gate immediately in the path of the automobile was down, and should have prevented Pounds from driving on the track. This will be a question for determination at the coroner's inquest into the two deaths.

Second Auto Trapped. But the crowd which gathered at the scene soon had a demonstration of the dangerous character of the crossing. At 6:30 p. m. the Sunshine Special, outbound, approached the crossing from the east, and the gateman in the tower began flashing a red light and ringing a bell. But he did not lower the proper gate in time to prevent the automobile from the south from driving on the track, directly in the path of the train. The automobile was driven by a woman, a man and a child with her.

The far gate on the north side was down, and the car was effectively trapped, particularly as there was a traffic jam ahead. In this emergency, two claim agents rushed on the track, flagged the "Sunshine" and stopped it, until the track could be cleared.

The crossing, near the corner of Kingshighway and Daggett avenue, is at a point where motor traffic is almost constant. The gates in the tower are four feet apart, which extend from either side of the street to the middle line, on the north and south sides of the tracks. These gates, and two at the Wilson avenue crossing, a short distance south and west, are raised and lowered by levers in the tower on the west side of Kingshighway, south of the tracks.

Explanation of Gateman. The gateman in the tower is notified by a buzzer of the train's approach, and it is then his duty to lower the gates, to ring a bell, which is pulled by a cord, and to flash a red light on either side of the tracks. Tony Starevich, 50 years old, of 2938 Chouteau avenue, was on duty in the tower yesterday afternoon.

"I lowered the southeast and northwest gates first, as I always do," he said to a Post-Dispatch reporter. "The southeast gate protects the traffic coming from the south, and the northwest gate protects traffic from the north. Then I lower the other two gates."

"The car that was hit was coming from the north. The northwest gate, which was down, should have stopped it. The man must have driven around to the left, and tried to cross through the northeast gate, which was not down then."

What Others Say. Witnesses questioned by the police, and two patrolmen who reported that they saw the accident, said the gates in question were not down. Henry Baldwin and Erwin Trunk of Magnolia station were the two policemen who said the gates were up.

GEN. JOHNSON, AT OUTS WITH RICHBERG, READY TO QUIT AS HEAD OF NRA

INCENSED OVER BEING SHUNTED ASIDE IN FAVOR OF BOARD OF FIVE

He May Resign, Go on Indefinite Leave of Absence or Take New Post Roosevelt Is Said to Be Ready to Create for Him.

FUTURE DEPENDS ON OWN DECISION

By PAUL Y. ANDERSON, A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25.—It is unlikely that Gen. Hugh S. Johnson will return to his duties as active head of the NRA for any longer time than it will take him to clean out his desk. He may resign, he may go on an indefinite leave of absence, or he may step into a new position which President Roosevelt is reported ready to create for him.

In any event, as matters stand now, his days as head keeper of the blue eagle appear to be numbered.

In addition to the foregoing, the writer today verified reports of a rift between Johnson and his former chief counsel, Donald R. Richberg. Not only does the rift exist between the two men who were the outstanding personalities of the NRA, but it is characterized by considerable feeling, especially on the General's side.

Board of Five. Under a plan of reorganization drafted by Richberg and thought to have the President's approval, all NRA policies would be determined by a board of five, and the administrator's job would be merely to carry out the board's orders. This arrangement, of course, would greatly curtail the powers heretofore exercised by Johnson. There is no doubt that Johnson is incensed over Richberg's action, and apparently feels that his former associate has sought to undermine him. Richberg, on the other hand, believes that some such change is necessary to save the NRA and Johnson as well. He has told friends that the burden of the Administrator's present job is too much for one man, and that the nature of policy-making requires the balancing of several judgments.

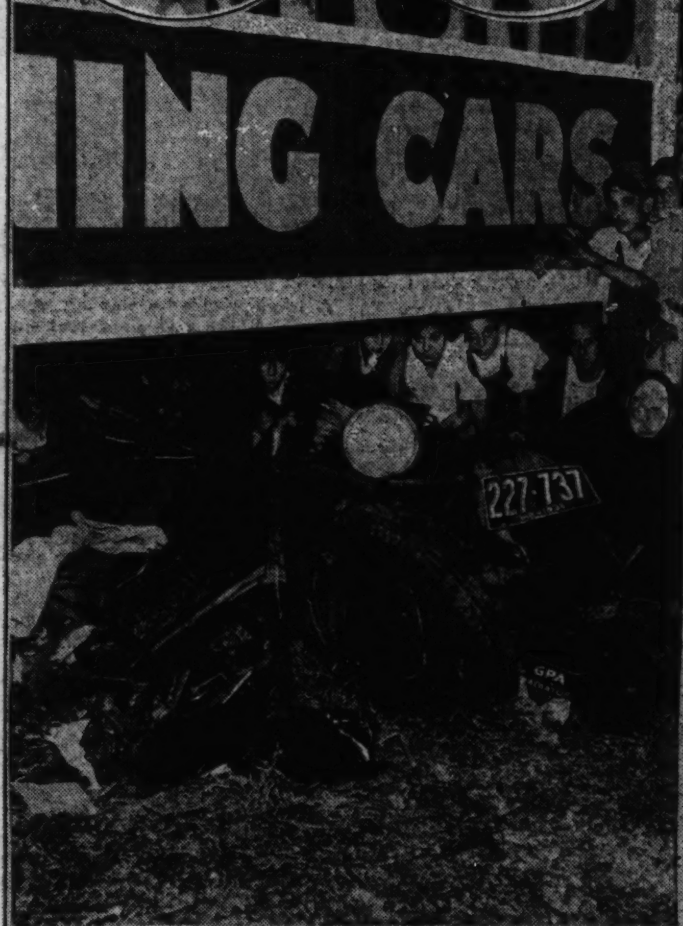

On several occasions President Roosevelt has expressed his admiration of Johnson's work in launching and organizing the NRA and placing industries under codes. From this the inference has been drawn that the President regards the dynamic ex-cavalryman as primarily an organizer rather than an administrator, and that he should now be transferred to a new field requiring the application of his particular talents.

That some such job has been tendered Johnson can hardly be doubted, but the inconclusive results of yesterday's White House conferences of Johnson and the President, and Richberg, Secretary of Labor Perkins and the President, indicate that the colorful custodian of the eagle is reluctant to surrender his bird.

Chance for Delay. The situation is complicated by the fact that Johnson is proud and sensitive, and the President is notoriously shy about wounding the feelings of a subordinate, especially one whom he considers to have rendered loyal and brilliant service. For that reason, the present impasse may continue for some time before anything decisive occurs.

Signs which point to Johnson's retirement or transfer, however, even more strongly that Richberg will not return to his post as chief counsel. At present he is acting as

ROOSEVELT LEAVES CAPITAL FOR HYDE PARK, N. Y., HOME

Expects to Remain There Until Remodeling of Executive Offices Is Finished.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25.—President Roosevelt left here at 11 p. m. by train for his home at Hyde Park, N. Y., where he plans to remain for several weeks.

With the President were Marvin McIntyre, Marguerite Lehand and Grace Tulley, secretaries, his assistants and other helpers necessary to keep up with correspondence that will be forwarded to the summer White House.

A small crowd braved a drizzle to applaud the executive as he boarded his car.

He planned to go straight through to Hyde Park on the train instead of motoring up the Hudson as he did last summer. He will return to Washington after the remodeling of the White House executive offices has been completed.

TURKEY'S PUBLIC ENEMY NO. 1 TO BE HANGED

Bandit Killed 11 Persons at Prayer in Mosque; Later Murdered Three Fellow Prisoners.

By the Associated Press.

DIARBEKIR, Eastern Anatolia, Aug. 25.—Turkey's public enemy No. 1, Haman Agha, is to be hanged at last. He was condemned to death by the Diarbekir Criminal Court after a trial lasting three years. The hanging will take place in public.

Haman Agha and two other brigands in 1931 attacked merchants and peasants praying at a mosque in the village of Banny. It was charged that Haman shot and killed seven persons, and four more died of wounds he inflicted. He took all valuables from the pockets of his victims and fled. Troops and police finally captured him.

Haman is so ferocious he was confined in a special cell in the Diarbekir prison, but, despite precautions, he managed to pick quarrels with three inmates, all of whom he killed.

MAN KILLED BY AUTO THAT DOESN'T STOP

Body of W. W. Wedemeyer, 71, Found Lying in Grand Boulevard.

The body of William W. Wedemeyer, 71 years old, 3621 Lee avenue, apparently the victim of a motorist who failed to stop after hitting him, was found at 9:20 o'clock last night between the street car tracks and the west curb of Grand boulevard about 50 feet south of Carter avenue.

A passing motorist, who stopped when he observed a crowd, told Wedemeyer to Christian Hospital, where he was pronounced dead.

The license number of a resident of Richmond Heights was given to a policeman by a man who said he had observed the car bearing the number drive away as he first saw Wedemeyer in the street. At the home of the Richmond Heights man policemen were told he had been away for three days. Members of the family said they did not know where he was.

MAPLEWOOD VOTES, 627-199, FOR SALE OF LIQUOR BY DRINK

Ordinance Three License Fee of $200 a Year; $10 for 3.3 Beer.

An ordinance providing for sale of liquor by the drink in Maplewood was approved yesterday by a vote of 627 to 199, in an election that aroused little interest.

An annual license fee of $200 for business places selling liquor by the drink has been provided in an ordinance pending approval of sale by the drink. The annual license for 3.3 per cent beer places is $10. Other regulations, such as closing hours and location of saloons near churches, also are defined in the ordinance.

SINCLAIR LEWIS' WIFE EXPELLED FROM GERMANY

Dorothy Thompson Ordered Out Because of Criticism of Hitler Published Two Years Ago.

She Cannot Take Appeal—Comments on Action While Preparing to Leave for Paris.

By the Associated Press. BERLIN, Aug. 25.—A "pleasant young man in civilian clothes" yesterday delivered to Dorothy Thompson—Mrs. Sinclair Lewis—an "invitation to leave" Nazi Germany. Tonight the wife of the Nobel Prize winner, herself widely known for magazine and other writings, was preparing to go to Paris. She had been in Germany only a week.

After the "pleasant young man" call, she went to the American Consul, who secured an extension of 24 hours of the time she may remain in Germany.

The Consul was informed, Miss Thompson said, that "if I didn't leave before tonight, the 'invitation' would be followed tomorrow by an official order from Police Headquarters and I then would be accompanied to the border by two police officials."

No Appeal Possible. "There is, I find, no legal appeal against such an order."

"The fact that a visa was granted me in New York, that I was in Germany entirely legally, that I engaged in no illegal activity of any kind while here or caused any complaints, is no pertinent to the order, which is due to articles I have written about the National Socialist movement during the last three years."

Asserting she had not encountered "the slightest discourtesy on the part of any of the authorities," Miss Thompson said she understood the expulsion order was based on a paragraph of the 1932 law which empowers the Government to expel any person whose activities "have tended to damage the reputation of the country."

First Expulsion Under Hitler. This is the first time since Hitler came into power that the German Government has expelled an American newspaper correspondent for "damaging Germany" in the world press.

Miss Thompson, free lance contributor to American newspapers and magazines, said: "Outsiders are warned that the Germans have the right to any form of Government they choose. I agree with that and personally I have consistently opposed all organized attempts such as boycott which aim to reform this Government from without."

"But National Socialism, on its own claims, is not only a system of German Government but is a world outlook which is frankly directed against the liberal and democratic conception under which a great part of the world still lives and which some of us, curiously enough, still cherish."

"It cannot expect to set itself against the most prized institutions and credos of other countries without encountering robust and energetic opposition."

Writer's Offense Two Years Old. Miss Thompson's offense, apparently, was not any general unfavorable comment on Germany but unfavorable personal impressions of Hitler himself published in connection with an interview she had with him more than two years ago.

"I should like to point out," she said, "that the Hitler article was written some time before Hitler became Chancellor and when he did not enjoy the support of more than 25 per cent of the German people. It is difficult to see how an adverse impression at that time could be interpreted as an attack on Germany."

The Propaganda Ministry said: "It is a mistake to say Miss Thompson has been expelled."

Odell said he knew nothing of the bombing of the Mayor's house. He said he had just returned with two other union strikers from Columbus when the explosion shattered windows in nearby houses and tore one side from the Ott home.

Mayor Escapes Injury. Deputy sheriffs—a special corps of up to 80 has been on duty since the union strike started in June—were changing shifts when the explosion occurred. The Mayor and his wife, asleep, escaped injury. Mrs. Ott declined to estimate the damage, but said the house was "a wreck and everything is a terrible mess."

Odell was arrested immediately after the explosion but deputies declined to divulge the charge. Then a crowd of about 200 men who had patrolled the streets during the night, surged toward the jail. The deputies paid small heed, believing the crowd was attracted by curiosity.

Suddenly, the crowd stormed the jail, captured Odell and rushed him to a truck. The president of the Agriculture Workers' Union, an affiliate of the American Federation of Labor, later said "it was all out and planned."

Truck Driver Accosted. Odell said a deputy who was one of his relatives accosted the truck driver.

"Is Okey Odell on the truck," Odell quoted Deputy Sheriff Lloyd Norman as asking.

"No," the reply. "I shouted, 'he hell I ain't, but Norman left.'"

The return of Odell and the detaining of Lieutenant Colonel John Volke to the scene by Adjutant General Frank D. Henderson, brought quiet.

A news man who was an eyewitness to the abduction told a graphic story.

Eye-Witness Account. As dawn broke, and the echo of the explosion at the Mayor's home died away, he said, "a mob of between 300 and 400 left off patrolling the streets afoot and took to riding in trucks." He continued: "These men were all non-union strikers and their sympathizers. As they rode about they grabbed any persons who refused to ride and took them out of town. Twice I was warned to 'get out of town,' the second time by a deputy.

"Law and order practically was suspended."

"The trucks stopped at the filling station owned by the Mayor for gasoline. The Mayor and his wife were there. I was only a half block away."

"Only one policeman was in town, Wilford Wies. He is the son of a union leader. The deputies, far outnumbered, could do nothing."

The Return of Odell. "No strikers were in sight. The streets practically were deserted except for the trucks."

"That went on for several hours. Then the non-union men and their sympathizers left their trucks. They gathered in groups on the streets."

"Things quieted down. Odell came back to town. He said his life and that of his 3-year-old son, Larry, was threatened."

"He got his .38-caliber revolver. He took a post on his front porch and challenged, 'come and get me.'"

"No one did. Odell and his brother, Tunle, then left their gun in the house and strolled down the street."

"Odell had a deep gash beside his nose. He said he thought he had a broken rib. The men in the truck, he said, kicked him as he lay on the floor."

Demands of the Workers. The outburst today was the most violent of several that have marked the strike of several hundred onion weeder and harvesters in the St. Louis marshland since it started early in June.

The workers demanded 35 cents an hour and an 8-hour day. They asserted they were paid 8 to 12 cents an hour. The growers said their wages were supplemented with grants of the use of houses, domestic animals, plots of ground for gardening. In late weeks, several growers have started eviction proceedings to force striking tenants from these grower-owned houses.

At first, violence was the exception. Then, outsiders sought work. The strikers bolstered their picket lines. Clashes occurred.

Federal Mediator Falls. The growers proposed a settlement. Its terms were refused. A Federal mediator investigated. He conferred with both sides, then returned to Washington, nothing accomplished.

A bridge was bombed; a warehouse owned by Snyder & Sons, a large grower, burned; 20 or more strike leaders were arrested; Okey Odell was sentenced to jail for contempt of court in connection with picketing.

Ten strikers still are in jail at Jenton, Hardin County seat. They are awaiting grand jury action on charges resulting from strike activities.

Cuban Plotters Who Await Execution

Sinclair Lewis Compares Case With Chicago's.

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—The expulsion of Dorothy Thompson from Germany was compared by her husband, Sinclair Lewis, with the incident involving Edgar Ansel Mowrer, Chicago Daily News correspondent, in Berlin.

"Something like Eddie Mowrer, I guess," he said. Mowrer got into difficulties with Hitler over his writings about the Reich, the dispute in particular involving a book. But he left Germany before any action was taken by the Nazi Government. His newspaper transferred him to Paris.

Jewish Agency Tells of Articles Dorothy Thompson Wrote.

By the Associated Press. NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—The Jewish Daily Bulletin says Dorothy Thompson visited Germany in April, 1933, as a special representative of the Jewish Telegraphic Agency to investigate reports of persecution employed by the Nazis against the Jews and political opponents.

"She wrote a series of six articles, 'Hitler the Menace,' which ran in the Jewish Daily Bulletin in New York City, the Buffalo Evening News, the Cleveland Plain Dealer and other newspapers," says a statement issued by the Jewish paper. "In the articles Miss Thompson accused the German Government of denying 'atrocities' but justifying 'reprisals' and of using 'blackmail' to 'combat atrocity propaganda.'"

"In the first article of the series, 'The Brown Terror,' after describing the punishment in store for anyone giving information to correspondents, Miss Thompson declared: 'Scores and perhaps hundreds of people have died in Germany as a result of the Brown Terror. Scores and perhaps thousands have suffered serious and extremely painful injuries from the results of which they may never recover. Tens of thousands have been thrown into prison or into concentration camps for activities which are no crime at all under the constitution to which the present Government took its oath.'"

"Miss Thompson also stated that she had seen the carefully documented records of 307 cases in the city of Berlin alone, in which methods of torture had been used."

a trustee of the union, said, "The only way we'll leave is to go as corpses."

Odell said he knew nothing of the bombing of the Mayor's house. He said he had just returned with two other union strikers from Columbus when the explosion shattered windows in nearby houses and tore one side from the Ott home.

Mayor Escapes Injury. Deputy sheriffs—a special corps of up to 80 has been on duty since the union strike started in June—were changing shifts when the explosion occurred. The Mayor and his wife, asleep, escaped injury. Mrs. Ott declined to estimate the damage, but said the house was "a wreck and everything is a terrible mess."

Odell was arrested immediately after the explosion but deputies declined to divulge the charge. Then a crowd of about 200 men who had patrolled the streets during the night, surged toward the jail. The deputies paid small heed, believing the crowd was attracted by curiosity.

Suddenly, the crowd stormed the jail, captured Odell and rushed him to a truck. The president of the Agriculture Workers' Union, an affiliate of the American Federation of Labor, later said "it was all out and planned."

Truck Driver Accosted. Odell said a deputy who was one of his relatives accosted the truck driver.

"Is Okey Odell on the truck," Odell quoted Deputy Sheriff Lloyd Norman as asking.

"No," the reply. "I shouted, 'he hell I ain't, but Norman left.'"

The return of Odell and the detaining of Lieutenant Colonel John Volke to the scene by Adjutant General Frank D. Henderson, brought quiet.

A news man who was an eyewitness to the abduction told a graphic story.

Eye-Witness Account. As dawn broke, and the echo of the explosion at the Mayor's home died away, he said, "a mob of between 300 and 400 left off patrolling the streets afoot and took to riding in trucks." He continued: "These men were all non-union strikers and their sympathizers. As they rode about they grabbed any persons who refused to ride and took them out of town. Twice I was warned to 'get out of town,' the second time by a deputy.

"Law and order practically was suspended."

"The trucks stopped at the filling station owned by the Mayor for gasoline. The Mayor and his wife were there. I was only a half block away."

"Only one policeman was in town, Wilford Wies. He is the son of a union leader. The deputies, far outnumbered, could do nothing."

The Return of Odell. "No strikers were in sight. The streets practically were deserted except for the trucks."

"That went on for several hours. Then the non-union men and their sympathizers left their trucks. They gathered in groups on the streets."

"Things quieted down. Odell came back to town. He said his life and that of his 3-year-old son, Larry, was threatened."

"He got his .38-caliber revolver. He took a post on his front porch and challenged, 'come and get me.'"

"No one did. Odell and his brother, Tunle, then left their gun in the house and strolled down the street."

"Odell had a deep gash beside his nose. He said he thought he had a broken rib. The men in the truck, he said, kicked him as he lay on the floor."

Demands of the Workers. The outburst today was the most violent of several that have marked the strike of several hundred onion weeder and harvesters in the St. Louis marshland since it started early in June.

The workers demanded 35 cents an hour and an 8-hour day. They asserted they were paid 8 to 12 cents an hour. The growers said their wages were supplemented with grants of the use of houses, domestic animals, plots of ground for gardening. In late weeks, several growers have started eviction proceedings to force striking tenants from these grower-owned houses.

At first, violence was the exception. Then, outsiders sought work. The strikers bolstered their picket lines. Clashes occurred.

Federal Mediator Falls. The growers proposed a settlement. Its terms were refused. A Federal mediator investigated. He conferred with both sides, then returned to Washington, nothing accomplished.

A bridge was bombed; a warehouse owned by Snyder & Sons, a large grower, burned; 20 or more strike leaders were arrested; Okey Odell was sentenced to jail for contempt of court in connection with picketing.

GERMAN PASTORS ARRESTED IN NAZI LOYALTY INQUIRY

Majority Said to Have Defied Reichsbishop—One Imprisoned, 10 Barred From Congregations.

By the Associated Press. BERLIN, Aug. 25.—A new inquisition, reported to be directed at opponents of Nazi Reichsbishop Ludwig Muller's official German Protestant Church, is being conducted by the secret police. They are arresting dissenting pastors, the reports say, and questioning them on three topics: Their attitude toward Muller, their attitude toward the Nazi Government and their belief in Aryanism.

Pastors questioned by the secret police were reported to have defied Muller almost unanimously. They did not consider Muller trustworthy, many are said to have replied; they did not believe his dictatorial position constitutional; they did not think his national synod was legal.

As to Hitlerism, they supported its politics and worldly measures, but they were quoted as saying that "Christ was a Jew before he preached the gospel."

Penalties Imposed. After the questioning—the outgrowth of denunciation by Nazi German Christian pastors or some member of their own congregations—penalties were reported to have been inflicted on rebellious pastors.

A pastor in Saxony named Scharfe was reported to have been imprisoned, while 10 Brandenburg clergymen were forbidden to approach within 12 miles of their parishes.

Members of the Insurgent Pastors' Emergency Federation in Northern and Western Germany have been under increasing pressure from Nazi churchmen. They have let it be known, however, that they will consider no compromise.

"We are prepared to endure any hardship," the wife of one pastor was quoted as saying. "Nothing can shake our belief in God. We know we are in the hands of the Lord who will guide us and our followers through the darkness of these days."

Some Catholic quarters reacted early tonight in the belief that there would be no interference with them by the Nazi party until after the Saar plebiscite next January, lest voters in that largely Catholic district might cast their ballots against reunion with Germany.

However, rumors were current that Mueller subsequently may try to put into effect his announced principle of "one head, one will, one state, one church" by pressing for the establishment of a single church.

"Aryan Nine Commandments." Meanwhile Prof. Jacob Wilhelm Hauer's revived German Faith movement, emulating Nazi eugenicists who yesterday issued 10 commandments "rationalizing" love and marriage, issued an "Aryan Nine Commandments," urging loyalty to the race.

"Honor the deity, but also 'honorable ancestors and thy people' and 'honor the great ones of thy people' are among the commandments."

FOUGHT ROOSEVELT IN 1932; FIRST TO ANNOUNCE FOR HIM

Frank Hague, New Jersey Democratic Leader Promises Support in 1936.

By the Associated Press. SEA GIRT, N. J., Aug. 25.—President Roosevelt today was promised the support of the New Jersey delegation to the Democratic National Convention in 1936 by Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City, leader of the party in the State.

Two years ago Hague led the forces that fought to the last minute the nomination of Roosevelt, recanting only on the final compulsory ballot in the Chicago convention. During the fight Hague said Roosevelt "it would not carry a State east of the Mississippi."

In making his pledge today Hague told Postmaster General James A. Farley guest of honor at a rally here, that the organization had seen the error of its ways. "We were late in getting aboard in 1932, now we're going to be early getting aboard," Hague said.

REPUBLIC STEEL TO ABSORB ONE, MAYBE TWO, COMPANIES. Combine With Corrigan-McKinney and Trucon Would Make $231,000,000 Firm.

By the Associated Press. CLEVELAND, O., Aug. 25.—The merger of the Corrigan-McKinney Steel Co., the Republic Steel Co., and possibly the Trucon Steel Co. will be completed here Monday it was learned tonight. Formal announcement of terms of the combination probably will be made Tuesday.

Officers of the three companies and bankers have been negotiating for months. If the combination is ratified, Republic, third largest producer of steel and second largest independent, will have important additions, greatly strengthening its position in the steel industry.

With Trucon Steel Co. in the proposed merger, Republic would become a $231,000,000 company. Last week, Julius Kahn, president of Trucon, began a series of conferences with Republic officials here, and tonight Trucon, a fabrication company, appeared to be definitely included in the plans.

Plagiarism Suit Over Movie. By the Associated Press. NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—Marcus Linder, playwright, filed suit today in Federal court against the Fox Film Corporation, charging plagiarism, based on the company's production, "Now I'll Tell." He also asks for $100,000 damages, $500 for each showing of the picture and an accounting of the profits.

GEN. JOHNSON AT OUTS WITH RICHBERG, READY TO QUIT AS NRA HEAD

der the President's order as head of the executive council, which is co-ordinating the work of the various recovery agencies, and which will make his first report tomorrow. When his present job is finished, another will certainly be waiting for him.

The growth of his influence with the President may be attributed partly to the similarity of their temperaments. Like Roosevelt, Richberg is suave and even tempered, and a firm believer in the arts of tact and persuasion. He lacks Johnson's electric force and personality, although few men can employ more cutting language.

A factor which contributed to the decision that Johnson should not remain as active head of NRA is the influence of Secretary Perkins. She and Johnson have clashed often, and she was especially incensed when he intervened to settle the San Francisco and Chicago strikes. When efforts were made from Minneapolis to have him act as mediator in the truckmen's strike, she protested vigorously. She believes that such duties belong to her department.

Johnson's future will depend largely on his own decision. It is obvious not only that he can remain in the administration if he chooses, but that the President will go to extreme lengths to find him a congenial job, and one commensurate with his reputation.

Undersecretary of Treasury Coolidge Visits St. Louis

Spends Much of Time in City in Conference at Federal Reserve Bank.

Thomas Jefferson Coolidge, Undersecretary of the Treasury, was in St. Louis yesterday on a visit to the Federal Reserve Bank, where he spent much of the day in conference. He had no comment to make on his visit except that he came here to meet the men with whom he has dealings in Washington.

Coolidge was the guest of St. Louis bankers and directors of the Federal Reserve Bank at luncheon before departing for Washington on an afternoon train.

Tall and athletic in appearance, Coolidge was a Boston banker before he was named to the Treasury post last April. He is a direct descendant of Thomas Jefferson, author of the Declaration of Independence, and is the owner of Gilbert Stuart portraits of the first five Presidents.

In a side-kickish between the factions, Walmsley's old regulars got a court order for inspection of primary registration books in adjoining Jefferson Parish, which usually returns Long majorities. Similar action was planned in other parishes where members of the New Orleans Congressional Districts.

The Federal grand jury which has been investigating income tax returns of Long machine leaders is scheduled to resume its sessions Monday, when members of the State Highway Commission and commission records covering the Huey Long gubernatorial term have been subpoenaed.

Goebbels Tells Them They Must Win Over Those Who Voted Against Hitler.

BERLIN, Aug. 25.—A huge mass meeting of Nazi storm troops late today heard Minister of Propaganda Paul Joseph Goebbels dedicate their organization to the winning over of the nearly 5,000,000 Germans who last Sunday cast votes against Chancellor Hitler.

Goebbels declared "You S. A. men are the most active political guards of the Fuehrer (Hitler). Not only are you also the product of victory, but you are also the product of battle. So you shall remain."

Hitler's "blood purge" of Nazi ranks in June left the storm troops and the country uncertain as to their future. Goebbels' speech dispelled that uncertainty.

200 CONVICTS RIOT FOR THREE HOURS IN PENNSYLVANIA

Finally Subdued After Firing Buildings, Wrecking Machinery in Graterford Prison.

ARMED WITH CLUBS, THEY DEFEY GUARDS

State Police With Machine Guns and Rifles Called In, Herd Inmates Back to Cells.

By the Associated Press.

COLLEGEVILLE, Pa., Aug. 25.—Two hundred convicts rioted for three hours today before State police and guards subdued them and herded them back into their cells at the Graterford Prison Farm of the Eastern State Penitentiary. Not a shot was fired and there were no serious casualties, officials said.

The outbreak was quelled after the prisoners had fired cell blocks and outbuildings, and destroyed new machinery in the industrial plant.

Dr. Guy T. Holcombe, chairman of the board of trustees, estimated the damage at $100,000. He said that the cause of the disturbance had not been determined. An investigation was started immediately.

Although the expansive prison grounds confine more than 1600 convicts, only a fraction of them participated in the rioting, he said. The farm is in Montgomery County, which adjoins Philadelphia. The main unit of the penitentiary, Cherry Hill, is in the latter city and the Graterford prison was built a few years ago to relieve crowded conditions.

Rioters to Be Transferred. The 200 rioters were being held in a wire-enclosed freight siding to night, awaiting transfer to the Cherry Hill prison. Dr. Holcombe said he was awaiting return of Warden Herbert Smith from Quantico, Va., before the transfer.

When the Rev. Joseph Kenny, acting chaplain, approached the enclosure and asked the prisoners to join him in prayer, his reply was cries of "We want food and tobacco."

"This thing broke at 8:45 a. m.," Dr. Holcombe said. "For what reason we do not know yet."

As near as we can find out, one of the trucks inside the prison wall pulled up to the kitchen platform. The truck was loaded with 40 men. The trouble started inside the kitchen and thousands of dollars worth of damage was done. Everything is broken and smashed and the kitchen has been wrecked.

"The rioting spread to C, D and E cell blocks and more damage was done in those blocks. In the industrial plant, operated by the Welfare Department, was thousands of dollars worth of new machinery that had never turned a wheel. Then has been wrecked a barn inside the wall, known as No. 11, was set on fire."

About noon 200 of the prisoners, armed with clubs and bars of iron and tools, who apparently are responsible for the riot, after doing all the destruction they could in the cell blocks, got on a hill and defied the guards to come and get them.

State Police Called. "At this point, Capt. Leitner (deputy warden in charge) called on Maj. Adams of the State police for reinforcements. Forty State policemen arrived in 10 cars and more were held in reserve nearby."

"The rioters on the hill were cowed by machine guns and rifles in the hands of the State police, searched for weapons and then were locked up in cells for such desperate characters."

"Not a shot was fired that I know of, and no one was injured. Except such injuries as might have happened in the scuffle when the State police took charge of the 200 rioters on the hill."

Overcrowding, one of the conditions blamed for a series of outbreaks at Cherry Hill last winter, does not exist at Graterford, officials said.

LOW-RENT APARTMENT GETS PWA GRANT

Ickes Approves $85,000 Advance for Neighborhood Gardens; Work to Be Resumed.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25.—After investigating all "challenges" against the erection of the Neighborhood Gardens, 252-apartment low rent project in downtown St. Louis, PWA Administrator Ickes today advanced $85,000, the first installment of an ultimate $400,000 for construction of the group.

The new apartment, upon which work has already been started, will cost $742,000, with part of the money supplied by the Neighborhood Association of St. Louis and several outsiders. The $400,000 advanced by the Housing Division of PWA will bear 4 percent interest. The legal sponsor of the project is Neighborhood Gardens, Inc., a limited dividend corporation. The building site is bounded by Seventh, Bidle, Eighth and O'Fallon streets.

Work on the project was stopped recently because of difficulty over title to alley space belonging to the Shaw. The alley had been cleared up, the PWA investigated "challenges" by outsiders that the building was the wrong type, that it faced the wrong way, that the corporation was not a limited dividend organization and would not supply low cost apartments. With these challenges rejected by the PWA, work is expected to be resumed at once.

TWO MEN KILLED IN KINGSHIGHWAY CROSSING CRASH

avenue was on the lower deck of a northbound bus which was near the Shaw grade crossing at the time of the accident.

"I heard the crash of the collision and looked up," he said, "and saw the train crossing the street, while the gates on that (south) side were still up. There were two machines between the bus and the train. As the train crossed the street, I saw the gates coming down, and when the last car stopped on the east side of the street, the gates were down. I did not hear any bell rung."

William Weber of 4630A Quincy street said last night that he was driving south toward the grade crossing, with three or four other machines between him and the train, when he heard the crash. "Up to that time," he said, "the cars were moving steadily, and I had to put on my brakes hard, the car ahead of me stopping so quickly. I looked at the gate ahead of us after I heard the crash, and it was very much up when the accident occurred."

Other Witnesses Listed. Other witnesses whose names the police listed were: Edgar O. Leutwiler, 1231 Waldron avenue, University City; Herman Graf, 4952 Fairview avenue; Robert Kapp, 4176A Manchester avenue; and Paul H. O'Brien, 3810 Shenandoah avenue.

Skid-marks left by the wrecked automobile began a little to the west of the painted center line of the roadway. This would seem to show that the machine started across on its own side of the street, and did not swerve to the other side, as suggested by the railroad employee. The gate, when down, reaches fully to the center line.

Identified by Note. Found was employed as gardener at the home of Eugene R. McCarthy, 6481 Ellenwood avenue. He was formerly in the Army air service. He had worked for McCarthy three years, and a memorandum from Mrs. McCarthy, as to work to be done on the premises, was the means of identifying him after his fatal injury.

W. H. GROSS KILLED IN AUTO ACCIDENT NEAR WASCO, CAL.

Former St. Louis U. Football Star, Son-in-Law of Con P. Curran, Left Here Three Years Ago.

William H. Gross, former St. Louis University football star, was killed early yesterday in an automobile accident near Wasco, Cal. In attempting to pass two trucks, he found the road blocked by an opposite automobile coming in the opposite direction. He crashed into the rear truck in avoiding the oncoming machine.

Gross, who was 40 years old and a son-in-law of Con P. Curran, of Norwalk, St. Louis County, was graduated from St. Louis University in 1914. During the war he served in France as a second lieutenant in the Army. Shortly after his marriage 10 years ago to the former Miss June Curran, he spent several years in Rumania, where he was in charge of drilling operations for the Standard Oil Co. Later he did similar work in Texas.

He moved to California about three years ago, where he was employed at Los Angeles, Cal., as a salesman by the California Talc Co. Curran was notified of the accident yesterday by his daughter.

Gross was the son of the late Jacob Gross. Besides his widow, he is survived by three children: four brothers, Linton, Robert and Francis of St. Louis, and the Rev. Mark Gross, S. J., of Detroit, and four sisters, Mrs. John Farrelly and Mrs. E. B. Smith of St. Louis, Sister Ann Rachel Gross of the Sacred Heart Order at St. Charles, and Mrs. D. T. Kelley, Santa Fe, N. M.

WEALTH OF MARY PICKFORD, DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS DROPS

Assessed Valuations of Their Holdings Show Great Shrinkage From Last Year.

By the Associated Press. HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Aug. 25.—A drop in the taxable wealth of Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks was disclosed today in the records of the County Tax Collector and County Auditor. The pair have kept secret the progress of a possible reconciliation after a separation of 14 months.

The records showed that the taxable wealth of Miss Pickford in Los Angeles had dropped three-quarters of a million dollars in the last year, while the wealth of Fairbanks here went down about two-thirds of a million. These figures are based on assessed valuations.

Mary Pickford's assessed taxable wealth in Los Angeles is recorded as $1,850,770, compared with $2,683,390 last year. Fairbanks' assessed valuation for holdings in Los Angeles was $1,065,530, compared with $1,696,930 last year. Miss Pickford, it was shown, has extensively increased her real estate holdings.

TEXAS 'RAIN-MAKER' FIRES BOMB AND SHOWER FLOODS

Now He Plans to Drop His 'Moisture Producers' From Plane in Drouth Region.

By the Associated Press. WAXAHACHIE, Tex., Aug. 25.—James Boze, professor rainmaker, put one of his "moisture bombs" into a mortar near here late today, pointed it toward a threatening black cloud in the heavens, let it fly, and rain followed within 10 minutes.

Boze originally intended to drop his bombs from an airplane. Boze said that immediately after the return of his pilot, Wilfred Bottemfield, they would take 600 bombs into the air and release them in an effort to flood the drouth-stricken area.

BUS TAKES FIRE IN TUNNEL

25 Passengers Unhurt Walk Back to New York.

By the Associated Press. JERSEY CITY, N. J., Aug. 25.—A New York to Atlantic City bus with 25 passengers aboard caught fire tonight in the Holland Tunnel several hundred feet from the New York portal a short time after it had been turned back at the Jersey City end of the tunnel by inspectors of the New Jersey Public Utility Commission because of defective brakes.

The passengers left the bus and walked through the tunnel to the New York side. No one was hurt. The fire, said to have been caused by overheated brakes, was put out with fire extinguishers. After an hour's delay, the passengers resumed their journey on another bus of the same company.

SAYS TAXI DRIVER HIRED HIM TO SHADOW ALCOHOL TAX MEN

"Operative 645" Causes Arrest of "Operative 1018" for Impersonating Federal Officer.

Ray, Dowell, 23-year-old taxicab driver, was arrested yesterday on a warrant charging impersonation of a Federal officer in connection with his alleged employment of Raymond Benny, 4810 Olive street, as a "special operative" to investigate activities of Alcohol Tax Unit agents.

Benny, who is 32 years old, complained to authorities, according to Assistant United States Attorney Statler, after he had spent some time about $70—most of which he said was paid to Dowell—and had worked for a month as "Operative No. 645." He became suspicious when his $160-a-month salary was not forthcoming and when Dowell, as "Operative No. 1018," failed to present him to his superiors.

Benny's activities, according to Statler, included making out of daily reports recounting in full his movements in "checking up" on tax unit investigators. During prohibition Dowell was known to dry agents as an informer, whose tips led to several unsuccessful liquor raids, Statler said.

Dowell was released on $1500 bond yesterday after arraignment before United States Commissioner Burke.

CIRCUS CLOWN HANGS SELF BECAUSE WIFE DIVORCED HIM

Known as Foremost Juggler With Ringling Bros. Show for Years.

By the Associated Press. MILWAUKEE, Wis., Aug. 25.—The body of Jolly Jenaro, circus clown, was found hanging today in a room of his home by his sister. Physicians said he had been dead 48 hours.

The sister, Mrs. Olga Rhinelander, said the clown, known in private life as George E. Wagner, had been dependent over being divorced by his wife, Alma, who got a default decree last April.

Mrs. Rhinelander said her brother had said he "was disgusted with it all," and planned to end his life. Wagner was billed for years as the foremost juggler clown with Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey circus.

MAN BEATEN AND ROBBED NEAR MUNICIPAL THEATER

Two Men Take Auto, Watch and $4 From Carl Brooks in Forest Park.

Carl Brooks, 3941 Page boulevard, an employee of the United Drug Co., was robbed and beaten last night by two men who accosted him in Forest Park as he was walking toward the south entrance of the Municipal theater near the parking lot at the top of the hill overlooking the theater.

When Brooks stopped, the two men threw him to the ground and beat him into unconsciousness. When he recovered consciousness, his wallet containing $4, his watch and his automobile were gone.

He was treated at City Hospital for cuts and bruises and sent home.

COMMUNIST SPEAKER SEIZED

Taken From Tucson Meeting by Group of Citizens.

By the Associated Press. TUCSON, Ariz., Aug. 25.—Ray Callahan, Communist party organizer from San Francisco, was called from a meeting he was to have addressed here tonight and spirited away. Police expressed belief a group of citizens had taken Callahan away to tar and feather him.

Persons in the outlying business district reported to police their attention was drawn to a coupe carrying three men, one of whom shouted, "Help! Call police! They're going to tar and feather me."

JOBLESS LABORER ENDS LIFE

Valley Park Man, 55, Found by Sister, Shot to Death.

William Werner, 55-year-old unemployed laborer, ended his life yesterday at the home of his sister, Mrs. Minnie Fischer on Jefferson avenue, Valley Park, where he also resided.

She reported she heard a shot and found Werner in his room, a shotgun wound in the head and the weapon lying nearby. He had been ill and despondent.

NINE BULLETS IN MAN'S BODY FOUND IN TRUNK

New York Police Believe Ex-Convict Was Shot in Holdup and Died of Wounds.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—The mutilated body of an ex-convict was found in a trunk today in an area-way at the home of Gen. Louis W. Stotesbury, a former law partner of Police Commissioner John F. O'Ryan.

The unclashed body, the legs of which had been cut off, was identified by means of fingerprints as that of Bernard McMahon, 41 years old, who had been arrested six times since 1914 and who served a term in the Elmira (N. Y.) reformatory.

Tony Tarantino, caretaker at the West 74th street residence, found the trunk when he went to work this morning. He said it had not been there yesterday.

Crushed and bruised, the body had been shoved face downward into the metal trunk, three feet long and two feet wide. One of the dismembered legs was wrapped in brown paper, the other in a double-breasted blue coat with all marks of identification removed.

Dr. Charles Norris, chief medical examiner, found nine bullets in one leg. He said death was caused by a hemorrhage probably resulting from the wounds. A surgical bandage, which evidently had been on the leg, was found in the trunk.

Dr. Norris said the dismemberment was inept work. He said McMahon had been dead about 72 hours.

The police held two theories. One was that McMahon had been shot in a holdup. The other was that he had been killed by gangsters. They reached no tentative conclusion that he had been unsuccessfully treated by companions for his wounds and that when he died they used the trunk to dispose of the body.

The trunk bore no fingerprints. It was tied with rope, and the police disassembled a salesman's or theatrical trunk.

WORK ON PULITZER FOUNTAIN IN NEW YORK TO BE RESUMED

Labor Dispute Between Contractor and Stonecutters Is Settled.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—Settlement of the labor dispute which has delayed work since early spring on the restoration of the Pulitzer Memorial Fountain, in the little park opposite the Hotel Plaza at Fifth avenue and Fifty-eighth street, was announced today by D. Everett Wald, architect and former member of the New York City Art Commission, who is in charge of the restoration.

Work was begun in January. It was suspended when the Stonecutters' Association demanded that six more of its members be employed on the memorial, because the 400 tons of marble being used to replace the crumbling limestone had been cut in Italy instead of in the United States and that their members be employed in setting the marble. The contractor refused both demands.

Wald said a compromise had been reached, the union agreeing to permit work to proceed if at least two more men were employed at $12 a day. "So we will put two men to work and pay them $12 a day for doing nothing, because the marble was cut in Italy," he said. The restoration, which is being paid for by the Pulitzer sons, probably will be completed by Nov. 1.

Auto Racer Killed; Two Injured.

By the Associated Press. LEWISTOWN, Pa., Aug. 25.—One driver was killed and two were injured seriously when an automobile racing accident at the Mifflin County Fair today. William Wiedergott, 26 years old, of Boyertown, was killed in front of the main pavilion as he tried to pass another machine. His car struck a rut and turned over.

WOMAN FRIEND OF GANGSTERS HUNTED

MARION ("MICKY") CON-FORTI is being hunted by police following the death of Homer Van Meter, in St. Paul, Aug. 23, in an effort to check up on the remaining men of the Dillinger gang. She was one of the girls left behind by the gang when they fled from Federal trap near Eagle River, Wis.

The Schmitts were not at home. A neighbor told a reporter they left together yesterday morning in an automobile, saying they were going on a trip.

GIRL SUES, SAYS MAN BACKED OUT AFTER GETTING LICENSE

Miss Gladys Shipman Seeks $10,000 in Breach of Promise Action Against L. T. Stine.

Suit for $10,000 damages, alleging breach of promise was filed in Circuit Court yesterday by Miss Gladys Shipman against Lester T. Stine, employed in the circulation department of the Globe-Democrat. She says they became engaged to be married and on Nov. 14, 1932, went to Union, Mo., and obtained a license to wed, but returned to St. Louis without having a ceremony performed.

Miss Shipman says she has been ready to carry out the agreement. However, on Aug. 9 Stine was married to another woman, the suit sets forth. Stine could not be reached.

SUES BROTHER-IN-LAW CHARGING ALIENATION

George Schmitt Seeks $50,000 Damages From Edward C. Steinlage.

Alleging that his brother-in-law, Edward C. Steinlage, alienated the affections of his wife, George Schmitt, an electrician, 4537 Mary avenue, filed suit in Circuit Court yesterday for $50,000 damages against Steinlage.

The petition alleges that Steinlage, who lives at 4634 Steinlage drive and operates a filling station at 4534 West Florissant avenue, "showed the wife of plaintiff with words of affection and caused her to lose her affection for plaintiff."

Steinlage's wife is Schmitt's sister. According to the petition, Schmitt and the former Elizabeth Kamp were married in May, 1922, and she left him last July 1.

"I can't understand it," Steinlage told a reporter. "I don't know anything about it. They said I took her out one night and brought her home at 1 o'clock. I don't know when that could have happened. I'm a married man with two grown children."

The Schmitts were not at home. A neighbor told a reporter they left together yesterday morning in an automobile, saying they were going on a trip.

ACTOR ADOLPHE MENJOU MARRIES FOR THIRD TIME

Verree Teasdale, the Bride, Wed Once Before; Los Angeles Judge Performs Ceremony.

By the Associated Press. LOS ANGELES, Cal., Aug. 25.—Adolphe Menjou and Verree Teasdale, motion picture performers, were married today by a Municipal Judge. They applied for a marriage license last Tuesday, three days before Menjou's divorce from Kathryn Carver became final. It was Menjou's third marriage and Miss Teasdale's second.

At the time of his divorce from Miss Carver Menjou said he did not think an actor should marry. Reminded of this, Menjou said today: "Oh, that's just one of the things one says," and anyway, he had not met Miss Teasdale at that time.

The actor's mother and brother, Henry Menjou, were the only witnesses to the marriage.

$20,470,000 PLAN FOR ROADWAY ON CITY RIVER FRONT

Dickmann Considering Proposal Prepared at His Request by W. C. Bernard, Technical Adviser.

SCHEME CALLS FOR FEDERAL, STATE AID

19-Mile Thoroughfare of Four to Eight Lanes From Chain of Rocks to Davis Street.

A $20,470,000 plan for a 19-mile traffic artery along the Mississippi River for the length of the city has been prepared by W. C. Bernard, technical adviser of the city law department, who is an engineer. It is being considered by Mayor Dickmann.

The Mayor has advocated use of the river front for a thoroughfare. Bernard's study, made since last December at the direction of the administration, puts this idea into concrete form. City Counselor Hay, in transmitting it to the Mayor, said the report merited prompt consideration "as an aid to the development of a river front program, which will provide a large amount of work and at the same time enable the city to convert the river front into the sort of asset it ought to be."

Bernard refers to his scheme as reclamation of the river front and suggests the title of "Riverfront Freeway" for the traffic artery, saying it should accommodate all types of vehicular and foot traffic. He says the plan would help to revive property usage and values in the lower downtown section, would tend to offset the decentralization of the community, brought about by the automobile and would provide quicker access to the northern and southern parts of the city. Elevated Along River.

In addition to general traffic use, the thoroughfare would be available for fast local bus service and a bypass for through bus and truck movement. The single roadway would vary from 76 feet wide downtown, to 50 feet wide in the outlying portions, or from four to eight vehicle lanes. It would be built partially as an elevated structure along the edge of the river and partially at grade or on embankments. It would have ramp connections with principal intersecting streets and with Eads and Municipal bridges and would be so arranged as to permit a steady, rapid flow of traffic in safety. It would be comparable to the elevated West Side highway along the Hudson River in New York City.

The city owns 54,000 lineal feet, or more than 10 miles of the land, along the river front. This would greatly facilitate consummation of the scheme. The city would have to acquire 46,000 feet. Bernard suggested the following possible distribution of the cost of the improvement: City, $2,686,000; Federal Government, $5,725,000 direct by appropriation and $3,990,000 by FWA grant; RPO self-liquidating loan for a garage under a downtown mall connecting with the "Freeway," $1,740,000; State Highway Department, in recognition of the thoroughfare as an auxiliary highway, $8,360,000.

The suggested Federal appropriation would be divided between recognition of the "Freeway" as an auxiliary highway and memorial features of the scheme. Bernard said the city's share could be raised by bond issue, levy of a gasoline or mileage tax or special taxes against property in the eastern portion of the business district. Mayor Dickmann has sponsored a movement for a congressional appropriation for a river front memorial to the Louisiana Territory purchase and the pioneers of the river country.

Would Shift Terminal Tracks. The plan calls for incorporation into the highway of the Terminal Railroad's elevated tracks along the levee downtown. Bernard says the franchise for this line will expire within three years and he proposes shifting the railroads to the Eighth street tunnel, extending it north from St. Charles street to Mount Street.

Bernard's scheme, unlike earlier proposals for the river front, does not call for elaborate construction or beautification. He contemplates opening adjacent land for industrial development. Between Clark avenue and Delmar boulevard he would make the sidewalk, on the river side of the "Freeway," a 20-foot promenade, with an ornamental balustrade. He utilizes the idea of a mall or parkway between the old Courthouse and the river, which has been talked of frequently. For this he would take a strip a block wide, between Market and Chestnut streets, east from Fourth street.

At the river end of the mall would be a monument to the Louisiana purchase and the pioneers, concealed beneath which would be a bus terminal. F. Ray Leimkuhler, an architect on Bernard's staff for the study, submitted a design for the memorial which took its inspiration from a column on the grounds of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition here in 1904.

The mall would be at the level of Fourth street, on a built-up structure, so that Third, Second and Main streets would cross beneath it. The structure would offer opportunity for a public garage to park 2000 cars.

Plan for 60-Acre Park. The roadway and sidewalk would extend from Chain of Rocks Park to Davis street. The drive beside the river in the park would be connected with the "Freeway," as would Riverview drive.

Establishment of a 60-acre park east of Marine Hospital and at the foot of Chippewa street is proposed. The city owns about a third of the site. Other recreational developments suggested by Bernard are a playground between Chain of Rocks Park and Marine Creek and further use of Belleview Park and the Bissell's Point waterworks property.

Relatively little productive use has been made of the city-owned water front property, Bernard says. He calls attention to the presence of the Hooverville squatters' colony on city property on the South Side. In this colony, he says, there are 899 improvised homes, occupied by 1248 persons, including 239 children under 16, but only 15 of the homes, occupied by 56 persons, have plumbing facilities.

Revolution Legal Only. If it succeeds, court rules judges in Ohio hear case against former Provisional President. Marmaduke Grove. SANTIAGO, Chile, Aug. 25.—The legality of a Chilean revolution, judicial opinion was held, depends upon whether it is a success. A court decision removing the senatorial immunity of former Provisional President Marmaduke Grove clears up the point. Nine judges of the court voted against the "bad boy" of Chilean politics. Seven voted in his favor. The question goes to the Supreme Court.

Both groups of judges concurred in the idea that seizure of Government by force is all right if public opinion is satisfied with the outcome. But the judges disagreed as to whether the public approved.

Senor Grove's fortnight in the presidential palace in June, 1932. The nine judges held the public did not approve. Since the authors of the June 4 movement set up a new regime which was "recognized, accepted and obeyed by the nation," the case against Grove was invalid, the seven judges of the minority held.

Grove's fortnight of power was one of a succession of Governments which came between the overthrow of Gen. Ibanez and the election of President Alessandri.

RUMANIAN GOVERNMENT BARS

BEARDS, EXCEPT BY PERMIT

Order Creates Consternation Among Jews; Moslem Law Forbids Shaving.

BUCHAREST, Rumania, Aug. 25.—The wearing of beards in Rumania, prevalent among the rural population, today was prohibited by the Government, except by permit.

Uniformed Government couriers departed on horseback for Rumanian villages to announce the new regulations. By bugle calls and drum beatings they were assembling village residents in the public squares to announce the ruling, which reads in part: "Beards are prohibited. Those who want to keep them must possess a special permit. In one week those persons wearing beards without having obtained a permit to do so will be forcibly shaved and fined."

The regulation created consternation among members of the orthodox Jewish population, who, by Moslem law, are not allowed to cut their beards.

Candidate for Rainey's Seat.

By the Associated Press.

JACKSONVILLE, Ill., Aug. 25.—

William M. Hairgrove, 68 years old, today announced his candidacy for the late Speaker Rainey's seat in the House. A district Democratic convention is to pick a candidate to take Speaker Rainey's place on the ticket. Hairgrove, who has practiced law here 45 years, was a pre-convention supporter of Roosevelt for President. He was a personal friend of the Speaker, and is the first candidate to announce.

TEST FOR 'NEW DEAL' IN MAINE ELECTION

Republicans Put Emphasis on National Issues in Vigorous Campaign.

By the Associated Press.

PORTLAND, Me., Aug. 25.—

Maine citizens will vote Sept. 10 for a governor, United States Senator, three Congressmen and members of the State Legislature at an election, which is expected to be a major test of the Roosevelt administration's "New Deal."

Repeal of State constitutional prohibition also will be decided, but this issue, long a firebrand in Maine politics, has been all but submerged in the furor over the election's national implications.

Sharing State interest is the question whether the once long-dormant Democratic party can hold the sensational gaudy it made two years ago when Maine chose its first Democratic Governor in 16 years and elected two of the three Democratic congressional candidates.

G. O. P. Attack on "New Deal." The emphasis on national issues has been placed largely by Republican campaigners. Republican orators brought outside the State have assailed the "New Deal," directing bitter criticism against the NRA, the AAA, Federal emergency expenditures, the "brain trust" and the administration's alleged repudiation of platform promises.

Senator Frederick Hale (Rep.), seeking re-election to his fourth term, has asserted a Democratic victory would mean "the end of representative government in the United States" and that it would also presage the destruction of the Republican party in the State and nation.

Representative Carroll L. Beedy, lone Republican Congressman to survive the 1932 overturn, who also seeks re-election, has repeatedly described the objective of the present administration as being "the destruction of American business as it now exists and the substitution of business owned or controlled by the Government."

Governor's Vigorous Campaign. Gov. Brann, conscious of the task which confronts him in winning re-election in this normally Republican State which has had only three Democratic executives since the Civil War, has waged a vigorous campaign. Stressing State issues, he has urged the importance of harmony between the State and national administrations.

Alfred K. Ames, his Republican opponent, in a less strenuous campaign, has presented himself as a "business man" candidate.

In the Third Congressional District, former Gov. Ralph O. Brewster (Rep.), and Representative John G. Utterback (Dem.), have renewed their fight of two years ago, which ended in the seating of Utterback after Brewster contested his election before a House of Representatives elections committee.

Discoverer of African Animal Parasite

BRITISH SCIENTIST HERE FROM AFRICA

Sir Arnold Theiler, Authority on Animal Pathology, Tells of Work.

Stock raisers of the South African veldt, in common with American ranchers of the Western plains, face the problem of soil erosion as one of the plagues attending their industry. Sir Arnold Theiler, British authority on animal pathology and for 36 years a resident of South Africa, said yesterday.

A stocky, dark-haired man of slightly less than medium height, he was found just completing an experiment in the laboratory of Dr. Edmund V. Cowdry, professor of cytology at Washington University, whom he is visiting before going to New Zealand and Australia to continue his research for the British Government.

Dr. Cowdry, sent to South Africa by the Rockefeller Foundation in 1924-25, was associated with Sir Arnold and is credited by the Englishman with discovery of the rickettsia parasite which had destroyed millions of ruminants by causing "heartwater."

Discovered Parasite. Sir Arnold, author of many publications on tropical diseases of domesticated stock, received his title in 1914 as a result of his contributions to science. He discovered the theileria parasite, the name derived from his own, and found that an arsenic dip was a reliable preventive.

When Sir Arnold first went to South Africa, jackals were a principal source of trouble for stock-raisers. As the animals were exterminated or driven back, disease then began to take its toll, increasing as farms were overstocked. Rinderpest killed 5,000,000 head of cattle in 1896, and Sir Arnold was one of those who discovered the responsible virus and found means of eradicating the disease.

Later came botulism, poisoning caused by eating the same meat infected with the bacillus botulinus. Sir Arnold found that during the long droughts common to the veldt, cattle suffered an insufficiency of phosphorus and sought to fill this need by chewing bones of cattle which had perished. This, eventually, was remedied by the feeding of bone meal.

The disease, known in South Africa as "lamie disease," is identical with what is known on the Texas range as "loam disease." A study of the bones of dead cattle indicated its resemblance to rickets in the human family.

Erosion in Africa. But, with diseases largely under control, erosion is one of the principal problems. A department of the South African Government has been created to deal with the problem.

A survival of the days when protection from wild beasts was necessary, cattle are "kraaled" each night. As they filed into the corral or to water-holes in single file, they beat the grass from paths known in South Africa as "dongas," permitting rain and wind to start their work.

Systematically, under Government direction, these "dongas" are dammed, the cattle trail diverted and in extreme cases the trampled grassless area is fenced off until a protective covering again can be grown. Trees are planted about water holes and other places where their aid is needed in retaining top soil and moisture.

To Study Pneumonia in Sheep. Seven years ago Sir Arnold resigned as dean of the faculty of veterinary science of the University of South Africa to be succeeded by Dr. P. J. du Toit, who will visit St. Louis later this year. Before going to New Zealand, he will go

TABLET OF WORLD WAR DEAD IN NEW SETTING IN CITY HALL

Removed to Rotunda and Placed on Marble Base; to Be Rededicated.

A tablet listing the residents of St. Louis and St. Louis County who were killed in the World War, which formerly stood on the landing of the grand staircase of City Hall, between the first and second floors, has been removed to a new position in the rotunda of the building, with an improved setting.

Arrangement in the new place, on a wall of the rotunda south of the Twelfth street door, has been completed. The City Hall branch post-office formerly was at this spot, marred the appearance of the lobby, but it has been removed to a less conspicuous place in a corridor leading from the rotunda.

Cost of the change and new setting of the tablet was $450, paid by the American Legion, city officials and others. Mayor Dickmann announced the tablet would be rededicated next Armistice day. A colored marble base has been provided and the tablet is protected by bronze posts and heavy black cords. Two stone vases with artificial flowers flank it and a stone bench stands in front of it. Lights have been installed over it to facilitate reading.

"The moment I stepped off the boat, there they were," he said good-naturedly. "We have overcome the plagues and most of the pests in South Africa, but one pest, I suppose, always will be with us here—the American newspaper reporter."

AUSTRIAN NAZIS PLAN NEW REVOLT, LEADER ASSERTS

Anonymous Spokesman Says, Now German Plebiscite Is Over, They Merely Await Orders.

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)
VIENNA, Aug. 25.—A Nazi leader tonight predicted "The next insurrection will be bloodier than the last," when Austria's Christian authoritative government—determined to avenge the assassination of Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss one month ago today—rallied its forces to stamp out all opposition.
"Now that the German plebiscite is over," the Nazi leader, who asked that his name be withheld for reasons of security, said, "we are awaiting orders to start the next revolution. It will surely succeed where the last failed. There will be fierce reprisals for the hanging of our Nazi comrades."
One month ago today Nazi rebels stormed Vienna's federal chancellery and murdered Dollfuss, Twelve Nazis, including the two directly responsible for Dollfuss' assassination, have been hanged thus far and thousands of others have been imprisoned.

Fierce fighting millions of schillings have been levied on influential Nazis and their supporters, in the Government's determination to make the rebels pay the cost of suppressing their insurrection.

Kurt Schuschnigg, Dollfuss' successor as Chancellor, and Vice-Chancellor Ernst von Starheimberg have lost no time in strengthening Austria's international friendships. Separately, they visited Premier Mussolini of Italy presumably to seek his financial and military aid in the event of another outbreak.
That the Government fears new trouble is indicated by the fact that the martial law Dollfuss instituted Nov. 10, 1933, continues in effect throughout Austria.

Steel-helmeted troops are stationed at danger points in the capital and elsewhere.
Machine guns are still mounted at police headquarters on Vienna's Ringstrasse.

Prince Starheimberg's heimwehr—the Fascist iron guard—that bore the brunt of the fighting last month is held ready for action. It is reported to be preparing a list of prominent Nazis in each province to be seized as hostages should civil strife be renewed. Soldiers of the national army and the police also are kept in readiness for any outbreak.

nounce tonight. The Premier's decision to abandon plans for a second personal conference with the leader of German Nazism was considered as an expression of Mussolini's displeasure at the assassination of Chancellor Dollfuss, of Austria, by Nazis last month.
Mussolini and Hitler met June 15 at Venice "to try to dispel the clouds which darkened the horizon of European life," Mussolini said at the time. They agreed, an Italian spokesman announced then, that Austria should remain free and independent, and Hitler went back home while Mussolini's Government was issuing an official communique asserting the "personal contact" between the two premiers would be continued.

EX-DUCHESS OF MARLBOROUGH LIVING ON FARM WITH 80 DOGS

Dowager Had Been Guarding Identity; Only One Companion in Secluded Home.

By the Associated Press.
OXFORD, England, Aug. 25.—The American-born Dowager Duchess of Marlborough, widow of the head of one of England's greatest noble families, from whom she had been estranged, was discovered today living with one companion and about 80 spaniels in a secluded farmhouse near here.
She is making every effort to live a secluded life and those who know her say she resents any attempt to connect her with her former state. Until today her identity was successfully guarded.

The Dowager Duchess was formerly Miss Gladys Deacon of Boston. She left her native land in 1921 to marry the late Duke of Marlborough, who was a descendant of John Churchill, England's great soldier.
In marrying the Duke, Miss Deacon became the mistress of England's greatest country mansion, Blenheim Palace, which the nation, under Queen Anne, presented to the first Duke of Marlborough.
She herself is now known as "Mrs. Spencer." The citizens of the little one-street Oxfordshire village in which she lives are careful to address her as Mrs. Spencer. She has been living in these surroundings since May, and it was there that she heard of the death of her husband June 30.

The present Duke of Marlborough is her stepson.
NATION'S FIRST STATE THEATER ESTABLISHED IN NEW YORK
To Give Layman Chance to Act While Continuing His Regular Occupation.

By the Associated Press.
NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—Establishment of the first state theater in the United States, intended to give the layman a chance to act while continuing his regular occupation, was announced today by Gilbert G. Weaver, acting administrator of adult education projects in the city. The theater, which is to be known as "The American People's Theater," will occupy old public school building 25 which has been remodeled.

The project is an outgrowth of the state's relief educational program and was undertaken last year by Miss Morella Morrow, formerly associated with the State Theater of Saxony at Dresden, Germany. Official sponsorship of the theater was taken over by the State Department of Education nearly a year ago.

Scenes from "The School for Scandal" and "Hedda Gabler" will be presented Monday night.

WOMAN, 79, KILLED IN FALL FROM SECOND-STORY WINDOW

Mrs. Christina Nuts Fatally Hurt in Overland, Dangle From Sides She Leaned Out to Call.

Mrs. Christina Nuts, 79 years old, a widow, was fatally injured yesterday when she fell 15 feet from the second floor of the home of her daughter, Mrs. Joseph U. Smith, at 9410 Liberty avenue, Overland.

Mrs. Smith said she thought her mother, an invalid, lost her balance when she leaned out her bedroom window to call the daughter, who was in the yard. She died, apparently of shock, before arrival of a physician. Survivors are three other daughters and a son.

COUZENS 62, WONDERS ABOUT FUTURE OF U. S.

Senator Wishes Roosevelt Would State Program, Take Country Off Anxious Seat.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Aug. 25.—Senator James Couzens (Rep.), Michigan, observing his sixty-second birthday today, said he wished President Roosevelt would state a definite program and "not ask the public to sit on the anxious seat any longer." In an interview he said he was concerned "about what the future holds for us."

"New deal, old deal or square deal," said the Senator, "it must be recognized that a change has been taking place in our economic system. I do not think it is possible to continue under the laissez faire or rugged-individualistic theory of government."

"It does not do much good to criticize and condemn everything someone else is doing without offering a substitute to bring about the desired results. Certainly those now most addicted to severe criticism of the so-called New Deal did not offer any constructive social plan for minimizing or relieving the distress during the years 1930, 1931 and 1932. It therefore seems ill-becoming for them to be now trying to tear down."

"The national income can readily be built up to take care of all our people comfortably but to do this, much selfishness and lack of interest in other people must be eliminated. No civilized nation can forget the doctrine that 'we are our brother's keeper.'"

Discussing the new American Liberty League, he said: "Perhaps the most humorous feature... is that it is nonpartisan. While the gentlemen named wear different political tags, my observation over many years is that there is little or no difference in their political philosophies."

"Large industrial and utility interests have for years supported both parties financially. They recognized that it made little or no difference to them whether Democrats or Republicans were in power."

The proposal of the league to disseminate information on Government matters prompted the Senator to say that "history discloses such organizations disseminate only such information that fits into the political philosophy of the disseminator."

row is holding a brief reunion there today, and on Sept. 1, 2 and 3, a meeting of commissioners and their families will be held for the purpose of planning fall scout programs and activities.

SCOUT HEAD TO GET BADGE SECOND TIME

Col. H. D. McBride Will Receive Hungarian Award in Another Ceremony.

Col. H. D. McBride, Scout Commissioner, who last year led a group of St. Louis scouts on the Jamboree trip to Hungary, will today be presented, for the second time, with the same honorary badge of the Hungarian Boy Scouts.

On July 31 the badge and a diploma were presented to Col. McBride by the Rev. John Gyarmathy, who was authorized to make the presentation by D. C. de Szent-Ivanyi, acting Hungarian Consul in Chicago. The ceremony was performed in the office of Walter Head, president of the General American Life Insurance Co.

The Rev. Gyarmathy decided that the medal should be presented with more formality, and in the presence of other Hungarians. So Col. McBride will be the guest of honor at a carnival to be given this afternoon by St. Stephen's Hungarian Roman Catholic Church in the garden of St. Joseph's Parish, Twelfth and Russell boulevards, where the second presentation will be made. Col. McBride was designated as a recipient of the badge by Count Charles Khuen-Hedervary, head of the Hungarian scout organization, for his work in promoting international good will among Boy Scouts.

With the return today of the scouts who have attended the last section of camp at Irondale, the camp closes for the season, after what scout officials describe as one of the best-attended sessions in recent years. The Order of the Ar-

CHARLES A. LEE CARRIED 90 OF 114 COUNTIES BUT LOST

Kansas City Plurality for Lloyd W.
King Defeated State Superintendent of Schools.

By the Associated Press.

JEFFERSON CITY, Aug. 25.—State Superintendent of Schools Charles A. Lee, unsuccessful candidate on the Democratic ticket for a fourth term, carried 90 of Missouri's 114 counties and the City of St. Louis over his successful opponent, Lloyd W. King of Monroe City, the official canvass by the Secretary of State's office of the Aug. 13 primary election showed today.

Lee's greatest strength was in the rural districts. Outside of Kansas City and Jackson County, he had a plurality of 77,679 votes over King. The heavy vote given King in Kansas City and Jackson County, where he was endorsed by Boss Tom Pendergast's Democratic organization, was the deciding factor in his victory. King's plurality in Kansas City and Jackson County over Lee was 126,449 votes. Lee had a plurality of 15,598 votes over King in St. Louis.

King carried the following 22 counties: Audrain, Barton, Bates, Callaway, Cass, Cedar, Charlton, Clark, Jackson, Lewis, Lincoln, Macon, Marion, Monroe, Pike, Shelby, Worth, Polk, Ralls, Randolph, St. Clair, Saline and Scotland.

The official count in the Democratic race for Superintendent of Schools: King, 339,017; Lee, 290,249; Grover M. Cozart, Fredericktown, 48,770. Cozart carried only his home county of Madison.

WIFE GETS DIVORCE FROM CONGRESSMAN SHOEMAKER

Awarded $300 Alimony on Her Charges of Cruelty and Infidelity.

By the Associated Press.

STEVENS POINT, Wis., Aug. 25.—Circuit Judge Byron B. Park today granted a divorce to Mrs. Francis Shoemaker, wife of the Minnesota Congressman. She charged cruelty and infidelity and was granted alimony of $300 monthly. The complaint was not contested and Representative Shoemaker was not represented in court.

Mrs. Shoemaker told the Court that her husband had obtained a clerical position for her in Washington, at a salary of $198 monthly. Informing her that this amount would be deducted from the alimony payments, Judge Park remarked, "If I were you, I wouldn't work." The Shoemakers were married in St. Paul April 10, 1912.

30,000 SEE PAGEANT GIVEN BY CHILDREN

7100 Youngsters Take Part in Colorful Spectacle at Public Schools Stadium.

The mystic land of make-believe was recreated in color yesterday at the Public Schools Stadium as 7100 children danced in kaleidoscopic array before about 30,000 spectators assembled to witness the annual St. Louis Public School Playgrounds Festival.

Striking ensembles, timed to a split second, with sometimes as many as 2500 youngsters on the greenward at once, were features of an adaptation of the story of "Rip Van Winkle," around which the pageant was built. Every color in the rainbow was employed in the costumes and cheese cloth and muslin resembled silk and satin from the stands.

While drums rolled, Rip quaffed the draft of youth eternal and it wasn't long before the patent enjoyment of their own work by the participants in the pageant communicated itself to the big crowd.

Never was there a second's halt in the big production, the largest of its kind in the country. Always the sonorous voice of Rodolfo H. Abeken, who staged the spectacle, sounded clear from a microphone speaking the lines, each accent a cue for movements of scores of dancers.

Effectiveness was lent the tuneful presentation of Rip Van Winkle's eerie adventures in the Catskills by the sudden appearance of smoke wreathed specters—the Great Manitou and Hendrik Hudson—photo the stadium towers, converted through imagination into mountain peaks.

George Washington—his introduction into the tale was part of the adaptation—appeared on a live milk white horse while King George the Third, another addition to the legend, sat in state in a coach, drawn by a pony and guarded by red uniformed outriders.

The grand finale, with 2667 children dancing simultaneously and the rest forming a colorful background, held the attention of the big crowd so that no rush for the exit occurred until the last child had scampered from the field.

The injured, all of whom were taken to St. Mary's Hospital, East St. Louis, are Williams' wife, Mrs. Lulu Williams, 48 years old, bruised hip; Miss Margaret Williams, 45, a cousin, skull injury and lacerations of the head; Wilda Pay Williams, 12, a daughter, fractured rib; and Wendell Williams, 10, a son, head injury.

ANOTHER SOVIET PROTEST

Says Chinese Eastern Railway Is Not Protected Against Bandits.
By the Associated Press.
MOSCOW, Aug. 25.—Another protest against the Manchukuo administration of the Chinese Eastern Railway has been made by S. M. Kuznetsov, vice-chairman and Soviet representative on the railway's board of directors, it became known tonight.

Kuznetsov protested to Liu Chao-hen, chairman of the board, who represents Manchukuo, against alleged failure of troops supposed to fight with the Hun Ku-tze outlaws (red-bearded bandits), and insisted that steps be taken to protect freight shipped on the line as well as passengers transported.

STOPS SPIDER-SCORPION FIGHT

Long Beach (Cal.) Prosecutor Heeds
Complaints of S. P. C. A.
By the Associated Press.
LONG BEACH, Cal., Aug. 25.—The Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals ruled today a fight between a deadly black widow spider and a poisonous scorpion constituted "cruelty" and brought an end to the four-day battle.

Both insects were put to death with chloroform when the society complained to the city prosecutor. He telephoned to a garage, where the battle has been going on in a dark corner, and put a stop to the contest.

MAN TRIES TO THROW WIFE OFF BRIDGE, LEAPS HIMSELF

Belvedere, Cal. Man Is Fifty-Eighth Person to Commit Suicide at Pasadena, Span.
By the Associated Press.
PASADENA, Cal., Aug. 25.—Charles Winkelman, 45 years old, of Belvedere, leaped from the Colorado street bridge today and was killed—the fifty-eighth suicide at the span.

Mrs. Winkelman, mother of four children, said her husband stopped their automobile on the bridge, dragged her out, told her he was going to leap off and yelled: "You're going too."

She broke away from him after suffering scratches and bruises, for which she required hospital treatment. Winkelman mounted the railing and jumped.

JULY FARM INCOME OFF 6 PCT.

Proceeds for First Seven Months Exceed Those of 1933 Period.
By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, Aug. 25.—The Bureau of Agricultural Economics reported today that farm income during July was 6 per cent below the figure for July, 1933. Cash income from the sale of farm products last month totaled $498,000,000, including $20,000,000 in AAA rental and benefit payments and $11,000,000 for Government-purchased cattle in the drought area.

Income from sale of farm products during the first seven months of the year was estimated at $2,894,000,000, compared with $2,512,000,000 during the similar period of 1933. Rental and benefit payments during the same period totaled $188,000,000 and cattle purchases netted farmers $12,000,000. Total cash income from the three sources from Jan. 1 through July was $2,074,000,000, or 22 per cent more than in the same months of 1933.

NEIGHBORS SAY MRS. COO SOUGHT HELP WITH ALIBI

Farm Hand Testifies She Wanted Him to Report
He Visited Her Night of Killing.

By the Associated Press.

COOPERSTOWN, N. Y., Aug. 25.—Two State witnesses told today how Mrs. Eva Coe, on trial for the murder of Harry Wright, her roadhouse handyman, tried to enlist their aid in an attempt, as the State contends, to establish an alibi.

The witnesses, Fred Palmer, a farmhand, and Clara Meyers, his employer and neighbor of Mrs. Coe, were the only ones heard at today's short session. The day marked the close of the second week of the trial resulting from Wright's death in a lane leading to a deserted farmhouse on Crumhorn Mountain, about 12 miles from Cooperstown, June 14.

"Might Be Trouble."

Mrs. Coe, both testified, visited the Meyers home, "four telephone poles away" from the roadhouse, on the day after the handyman was killed by an automobile.

"She said that there might be trouble over the affair (Wright's death, at first reported as resulting from an accident) and asked Mrs. Meyers to help her out," Palmer said.

"In what way?" District Attorney Donald H. Grant asked.

"She asked Mrs. Meyers, if anyone inquired where she (Mrs. Coe) was the day of the death, to say she had been home all evening, and that she had come over for milk, and that I (Palmer) spent the whole evening with her."

"What was the reply?"

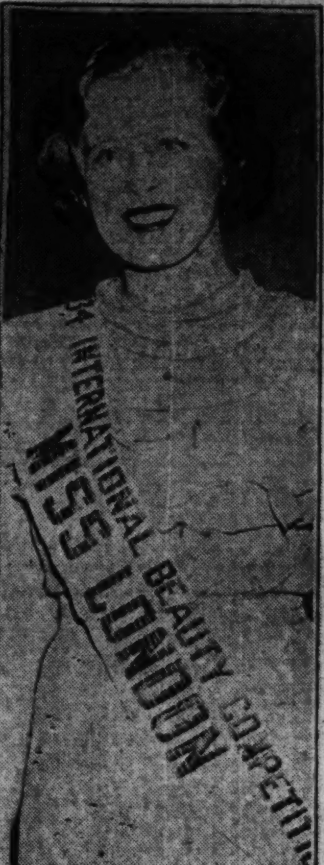

"We said yes, oh yeah, or something."

Mrs. Meyers told of the same request. "I told her I'd help if I could," she said.

Grant showed the witness an insurance policy with face value of $448. The witness said it looked like the one Mrs. Coe had shown her on June 15.

"What was the conversation relating to the insurance?"

"She said, 'Would anybody kill a man for $400?'"

Entertainer to Testify.

Edna Hanover, one-time entertainer at "Little Eva's Place," is to testify early next week. The State still has about 15 more witnesses, not counting Mrs. Martha Clift, who will be recalled.

Mrs. Clift, although indicted with Mrs. Coe for murder, first degree, was given a promise of a plea to a charge of murder, second degree, in exchange for her story of just how Wright was killed. She told how Mrs. Coe, whose boarder she once was, plotted the death and hit Wright with a mallet before she, Mrs. Clift, ran over him because she was "too nervous" to stop the car.

THE REV. WILLIAM M. GARDNER DIES; MINISTER FOR 39 YEARS

Pastor of Cote Brilliante Presbyterian Church Victim of Cancer; 60 Years Old.

The Rev. William M. Gardner, pastor of Cote Brilliante Presbyterian Church, Labadie and Marcus avenues, died yesterday at Barnes Hospital of cancer after an illness of nine months. He was 60 years old and had spent 39 years in the ministry.

The Rev. Dr. Gardner had been pastor of the church for three years, having come here from Joplin. Previously he had been pastor of churches in Arkansas City, Kan., and Batavia, N. Y. He was born in Glasgow, Scotland, and attended a theological school in London.

Funeral services will be from the Provost chapel, 3710 North Grand boulevard, to Cote Brilliante Presbyterian Church at 2 p. m. tomorrow. Burial will be in Arkansas City.

Surviving are his widow, a daughter, Miss Mary Helen Gardner, and two sons, George D. and James F. Gardner.

Held on Counterfeiting Charge.

PANA, Ill., Aug. 25.—Walter Wren, 26 years old, and his brother, Earl, 24, were held for Federal authorities today at Shelby County jail, Shelbyville, on charges of passing counterfeit money. The brothers were arrested at Windsor, where it is charged they passed counterfeit quarters and half dollars. Authorities reported finding a number of the coins in their possession.

TEXTILE WORKERS GO AHEAD WITH PLANS FOR STRIKE

No Resort to National Labor Board Is Planned, Says Union Chairman—Mass Meetings Held.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25.—A general walkout in the cotton textile industry appeared almost inevitable today.

Mass meetings of union workers were held in affected areas, and posters proclaiming the strike order were sent to all local secretaries to be held until the order is issued.

In Worcester representatives of 26 local unions in that section of Massachusetts voted to endorse any action taken by the executive board of the United Textile Workers. At Lowell representatives of woolen workers took similar action.

In Providence, R. I., members of the Rhode Island Textile Council voted unanimously to support the strike. In Fall River, Mass., representatives of five unions approved the walkout.

Horace A. Rivers of Manchester, N. H., general organizer and fourth vice-president of the union, announced that local unions of cotton and worsted woolen workers of Manchester also had voted support. The unions claim control of 10,000 textile workers in Manchester.

Other meetings were held in Connecticut and North Carolina.

Hope that the strike might be averted by the National Labor Relations Board waned when Francis J. Gorman, chairman of the union's strike committee, told newspapermen that "we are not thinking of that board in connection with the present crisis."

Walkout Set for This Week.

"No moves have been made and it is not easy to see how any can be made," he added. "We have none in contemplation and we are moving ahead steadily and rapidly with plans for complete stoppage of work within the time set."

The union has voted to strike by Sept. 1.

Gorman made public a decision by the NRA Labor Advisory Board, disapproving the recommendation of the Cotton Textile Code Authority that a 25 per cent curtailment of operations order, expiring tonight, be continued.

The board's decision, as reported by Gorman, said, "The Labor Advisory Board is mindful of the need for further shortening of hours of operation in the cotton textile industry, but is strongly of the opinion that this reduction should be made in accordance with the intention of the National Industrial Recovery Act, by the cutting of hours and making a proportionate increase in wage rates. A delegation of the board would be pleased to consider ways and means of achieving this end with representatives of industry and the NRA."

The United Textile Workers yesterday rejected the mediation services of the Cotton Textile Industrial Relations Board, headed by Robert W. Bruere. The union asserted it had lost confidence in the board.

A few hours later the Strike Committee was summoned into conference with Chairman Garrison of the National Labor Relations Board. This meeting, Gorman said today, had "no results bearing on the strike situation."

"We have met constant delay at the hands of other boards and their officials and that is particularly true of Chairman Bruere of the Cotton-Textile Industrial Relations Board," Gorman said.

Garrison summoned Gorman for a further discussion tonight, but Gorman said later that the discussion had not altered the situation.

He indicated that while the door was not closed to negotiations with Garrison's board, in which members of the strike committee privately have expressed confidence, he felt that the strike would not be called off through negotiation, and that the walkout was inevitable.

"We are fed up on promises," he said.

Union leaders still chafed at the failure of the NRA to make public a report on wage differentials in the industry. The survey was ordered in the agreement by which a general strike was called off in June, and was to have been completed by June 3.

Leon Henderson, head of the Research and Planning Division of the NRA, told newspaper men today the report was in his desk, but would not be sent to Administrator Johnson "until he is ready for it."

Gorman, amplifying his criticism of Bruere's board, said: "Without actually counting them, I suppose we have submitted more than 2000 cases to Chairman Bruere, with results so small as to be just about negligible. We are plenty tired of that and our membership throughout the cotton textile regions is determined that there shall be no more of it."

Meanwhile, the administration renewed its effort to settle the aluminum strike. The Labor Relations Board announced it would confer Monday with representatives of the Aluminum Company of America and the Aluminum Workers' Council "in the hope of working out a basis for the settlement."

The company agreed for the first time today to send representatives to a joint conference. It turned down a Labor Department suggestion that all points on which management and labor could not agree be submitted to the Labor Board for arbitration.

FERA Counted on by Union to Keep Strikers From Starving.

ATLANTA, Ga., Aug. 25.—Labor leaders said today they expected the Federal Emergency Relief Administration to finance the textile strike.

At a conference in the office of George L. Googe, Southern representative of the American Federation of Labor, it was made plain that now is considered an opportune time for a strike involving a national industry since the Government has pledged itself to let "no one go hungry."

The textile union has less than a million dollars to finance a strike, Googe said, and strike relief would be left to local unions. Many of these have little money. The workers, when their personal funds are gone, are expected to appeal to the relief administration for food.

Googe said that in every strike in the country within the past year the strikers have received Federal aid. Union leaders say the textile strike will throw 750,000 persons out of employment.

Googe said he believed the President would stop the walkout.

RELATIVES ABSENT AS BODY OF VAN METER ARRIVES

Funeral of Dillinger's Aid, Killed by Police, to Be Held at Fort Wayne, Ind.

By the Associated Press.

FORT WAYNE, Ind., Aug. 25.—The body of Homer Van Meter, Dillinger gangster, rested in a receiving vault in Lindenwood Cemetery here tonight. Relatives would give no information as to funeral arrangements, but an undertaker said services would be held "some time next week."

The undertaker and a few newspaper men were the only witnesses as the body of Van Meter, killed in St. Paul Thursday night, was placed in the vault. None of his relatives were at the railroad station when the body arrived.

Harry Van Meter, brother of the slain man, declined to say anything concerning final disposal of the body. When Van Meter's body was placed in the vault at the cemetery it was just a month to the day and almost to the hour since Dillinger, his leader, was buried in Crown Hill Cemetery in Indianapolis.

GIRLS COMPLETE SECOND DAY OF ENDURANCE FLIGHT

One Out of Three Getting Basket of Food From Refueling Plane in Chicago.

CHICAGO, Aug. 25.—Two girls in an airplane circled over Curtiss-Reynolds Airport tonight, seeking a new endurance flight record.

The "Lone Star" with Jean LaRene and "Ary" Elizabeth Owens of Texas taking turns at the stick and the air mattress, was two days out of port tonight with eight days to go for a new women's record. Blasting away at a rope that carried their basket of food from the supply plane above, Miss Owens cut her finger slightly today, but she didn't stop at a drug store.

Again as the refueling plane skimmed overhead today to put aboard a parachute she stuck her head through the roof to pick the heavy bag of silk out of the air. A cross-current swung the bag around and it struck a girl on the head, knocking her goggles and helmet off. She was dazed, but not hurt.

Have A "Show-Down"

In the midst of all the claims and promises made by competitors, Dodge offers you an easy, convincing way to judge each car strictly on a basis of merit.

This method is called the "Show-Down" Plan. It has helped thousands of motorists to choose wisely and to save money in buying a new car. Just ask any Dodge dealer to explain it to you. You are sure to be surprised at the astonishing comparisons it reveals.

Then—compare delivered prices of Dodge against other cars in your city. You will discover that Dodge is actually priced lower than many smaller cars!

Think what that means! It means you can enjoy the roominess, the comfort, the pride that only a big car makes possible—and pay less for it. Not only that, amazing Dodge economies mean savings in operating costs all along the line—in gas, in oil, in all running costs.

And remember you are buying a Dodge. That name is backed up by more than 20 years of experience in building nearly three million fine cars.

The Real Test!

But the final proof will come when you drive a Dodge—and then drive one of the other cars! Give Dodge a real test... Drive it long enough, far enough, hard enough to make a real comparison. Let it show you for itself what brilliant performance it has. See how easily and how quickly its hydraulic brakes work—and remember, they are always equalized, for utmost safety.

Notice how Floating Power engine mountings smother vibration, give you smoothness you never dreamed possible. See how easily it steers. How its Floating Cushion front wheel suspension carries you over bumps and ruts with never a tremor. Learn how little it costs to buy—to run—then ask yourself: "Doesn't Dodge excel every other car anywhere near its price class?" You'll find the answer when you've made a thorough comparison!

Airflow Chrysler Sets 72 New AAA Closed Car Records

Stock Coupe Averages 54.43 Miles Per Hour for 24 Hours on Utah Course.

Seventy-two new closed stock car records have been made by an Airflow Chrysler Imperial coupe, according to official figures released by W. D. Edens, Detroit regional director of the Contest Board of the American Automobile Association. The list includes every high gear closed stock car record from a flying start up to 2000 miles and 24 hours recognized by the Contest Board. Thirty-seven of these records are in Class B. (Cars of 804 to 488 cubic inches piston displacement) in which the Airflow Chrysler Imperial with 323.5 cubic inches piston displacement is listed, and 35 in the unlimited stock car class, which includes cars of any piston displacement. In addition to the flying start records, the Airflow Chrysler set one standing start record and two for low gear runs.

The Chrysler average 95.70 miles per hour for one mile, 90.04 miles an hour for 500 miles and 84.43 for 24 hours. It covered 2026.32 miles in 24 hours, being the first closed stock car to attain as much as 2000 in this time. The previous record was 1834.08 miles made by a 16-cylinder car.

Because of the variation in rules governing stock car requirements in different countries, no authentic world's records can be compiled, but the Chrysler's performance is far ahead of any credited to foreign cars that meet American stock car specifications.

The new Airflow Chrysler records were made on the Bonneville Lake course at Wendover, Utah, at an altitude of 4380 feet. A 10-mile circular track was laid out on the dry salt beds of the Great Salt Lake desert.

The trials under the direction of A. C. Pillsbury, Los Angeles regional director of the A. A. A. Contest Board for the Pacific Coast, who had charge of the timing and authenticated the records. The run was begun on Sunday morning, Aug. 12, at 7 o'clock. The thermometer registered 105 degrees at the time and over 100 a good part of the day.

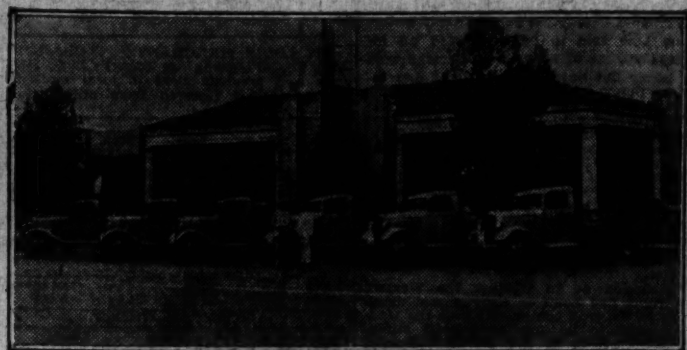

Some of the new records follow: One mile, 95.70 miles per hour, against the previous record of 92.66; five miles, 95.33 miles against 91.26; 10 miles, 95.75 against 88.99; 50 miles, 91.35 against 87.07; 100 miles, 94.52 against 86.88; 500 miles, 90.04 against 82.71; 1000 miles, 84.32 against 72.51; 2000 miles, 84.43 per hour against 72.50.

At the conclusion of the 24 hours, the Airflow Imperial was reported in perfect mechanical condition. No mechanical trouble was encountered, the only pit stops being for fuel and tire changes. The streamlined design of the Airflow car, which greatly reduces air resistance at high speed and thus conserves power to overcome rolling resistance, is given a large share of the credit for this performance.

The Airflow trailed the second 1000 miles considerably faster than the first 1000, its speed increasing as night drew on and the heat lessened. The last three laps were covered at 94 miles per hour. Harry Hartz and Wilbur Shaw, who alternated as drivers, said that they experienced neither fatigue nor inconvenience during the trial, save for eye strain caused by constantly gazing at the glare of the salt beds.

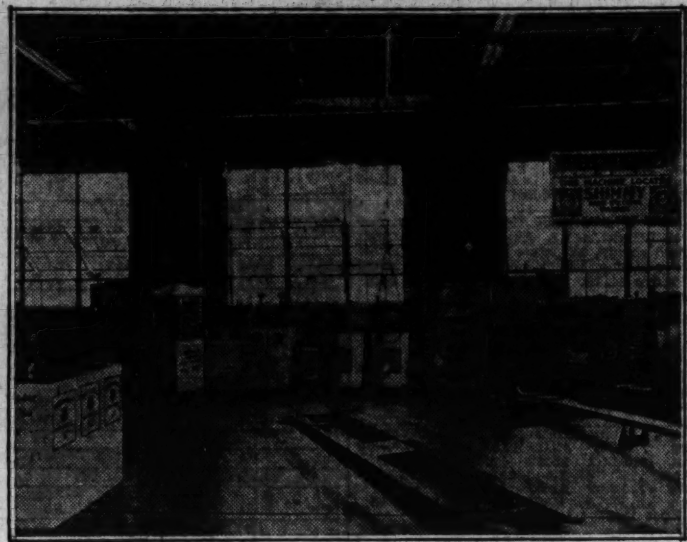

The Chrysler made 65.78 miles in standard second gear in an hour from a flying start, and 84.86 in an hour in overdrive second gear.

Beauty Queens Come From Fair at Chicago on Tour of Goodwill

The three Chicago Century of Progress beauty queens—the Misses Patricia Marquam, Dorothy La Foid and Kay Griffith—visited St. Louis Tuesday and Wednesday in the course of a good-will tour of the Mid-West in Studebaker President sedans, Firestone tire equipped.

They came especially to present to the Mayor a special invitation from Rufus Dawes, president of the Century of Progress Association, and Mayor E. J. Kelly of Chicago, to attend the world's fair.

After presenting the invitation at the City Hall, they visited the showrooms of Arthur R. Lindburg, Inc., the Studebaker distributor. They also spoke over local radio stations.

The three girls, all college graduates, were chosen as the most beautiful of the employees of the Century of Progress Fair. They visited some 40 Mid-Western cities on their tour, and departed for Chicago via Springfield, Ill., and Decatur, except Miss Marquam, who was called home by the illness of her mother.

Arrangements for their visit here were made by Otis Lucas, director of public relations for the Studebaker Corporation; G. B. Richards of the Firestone Tire and Rubber Co. branch, and Albert Kasey, general manager for Arthur R. Lindburg, Inc.

Supercharged Graham Car Breaks Record for Race in Mexico

In the most mountainous region of Mexico, going up hillsides to an altitude of several thousand feet, a Graham custom eight with supercharger won the Mexico City-Puebla mountain race this year, and broke all previous records for this speed and endurance test.

The Graham, finishing first of 15 cars entered, completed the 135-kilometer course, which has 87 dangerous curves, more than a dozen steep hills leading to high altitudes over rocky mountain roads, in an hour, five minutes, 47 1/5 seconds. The best previous time, made last year, was an hour, eight minutes and 52 seconds. Only one Graham car was entered in the race.

For breaking the record the Graham was awarded the championship prize offered for the annual event by the Mexican National Automobile Association.

Officials who observed the race attested to the unusual stability of the Graham custom eight on the steep, mountainous curves, and to the additional power supplies to the Graham motor by the Graham supercharger. In high altitudes, the supercharger delivered fuel to the straight-eight Graham engine under a uniform atmospheric pressure.

Motor Vehicle Retail Executive Committee For Code Elected

At a meeting of automobile dealers from St. Louis and St. Louis, Jefferson and St. Charles counties, Tuesday, the following dealers were elected members of the Greater St. Louis Executive Committee of the Motor Vehicle Retailing Code: G. A. Bilgere, G. M. Berry, Milton B. Strauss, John C. Aufferberg; Phil H. Brookman, P. W. White and Fred F. Vincent of St. Louis; C. A. Reichardt of St. Louis County; Kirk Jones of De Soto, Mo.; Jed Travis of St. Charles, with David E. Castles and Guy W. Oliver, ex-officio members, and Jack H. Grosse, secretary.

By-laws for the committee were also approved.

Curtis J. Quimby, secretary of the Missouri State Advisory Committee, was the principal speaker.

The three and their chaperon have been making a good will tour of the Mid-West in a caravan of Studebaker President sedans. Miss Griffith is in the Firestone Tire and Rubber Co. exhibit at the Chicago Fair.

General Air Express Shows 40 Per Cent Poundage Gain in Year

General Air Express last week concluded its second year as an inter-air line operating unit with a poundage increase of approximately 40 per cent over its first 12-month period, according to M. P. Bickley, local traffic manager of American Airlines, one of its units.

Bickley said preliminary reports for the last year indicated express carried by member companies of the system probably would total 590,000 pounds as compared with 424,449 pounds carried in the first year of operation.

He also said that important rate reductions made public several days ago are now in effect. These reductions include a new flat rate of 85 cents for shipments weighing three-quarters pound or less between any two of the 115 cities served directly by the system, and a flat rate of $1 for shipments weighing one pound.

Other reductions, ranging as high as 57 1/2 per cent, are based on weight and length of haul, and include pick-up and delivery service by Postal Telegraph as in the past. The inclusion of Northwest Airlines as a member of General Air Express also has been affected, Bickley said, giving the system a third transcontinental route. Long and Harmon, Inc., operating between Fort Worth-Dallas, Galveston and Brownsville, Tex., will join the system Sept. 1. Present members are American Airlines, TWA, Inc., Eastern Air Lines and Pennsylvania Airlines and Transport Co.

Goodrich-Silvertown Opens Another Store on Kienlen Av., Wellston

Goodrich-Silvertown, Inc., opened another tire store Thursday at 1508 Kienlen avenue, in Wellston.

C. E. Newman, general manager of Goodrich-Silvertown Stores, said that this new store will feature time payment on all Goodrich tires, as well as automobile radios and batteries.

Harold Greer, who has been connected with Goodrich Silvertown Stores in metropolitan St. Louis for a number of years, will be manager. William Litta, formerly in the Goodrich-Silvertown Store at 5335 Delmar boulevard, will be Greer's assistant.

During the open 10-day period the store will feature a "no money down" sale of tires, tubes, radios and batteries.

Ford Signs An Order For $5,500,000 Worth of Plant Improvements

Expenditure Will Double Power Output Capacity of Factory at Dearborn.

Henry Ford has just signed an order which will expend $5,500,000 in capital improvements in the next 10 months and double the power capacity of the Ford Motor Co.'s Dearborn plant.

The money will purchase a 110,000 kilowatt generator, a high pressure boiler and the necessary auxiliary equipment. In addition, a 15,000 kilowatt turbine generator unit has been ordered.

With the units installed during 1935-36, this will bring the capacity of the River Rouge plant up to 2,200,000 pounds per hour of high pressure steam for power generation.

The new installation is described as a duplication with improvements. The generator installed in 1929-30 was designed for a steam temperature of 725 degrees Fahrenheit, but the new one is for 900 degrees. The high pressure boilers of 1929-30 were designed for a steam temperature of 730 degrees Fahrenheit, and for a steam generating capacity of 700,000 pounds an hour each, whereas the new boiler is for 900 degrees and 800,000 pounds per hour.

This is believed to be the largest expenditure for capital improvements made by industry in several years and is said to indicate that Ford's outlook toward the future is one of confidence.

The expenditure was made necessary by the enlargement of the steel plant at the Rouge. Some time ago Ford announced that he would increase the variety of the operations at his steel mill. This entailed extension of the steel plant and increase in the power apparatus. It will also require increase of mine operations and a greater consumption of coal. It is estimated that when all collateral requirements are fulfilled for this additional improvement, Ford will have spent $10,000,000 with other concerns throughout the country for machinery and services.

ty, according to H. A. Kises, St. Louis zone manager for Oldsmobile, the registration figures for May, June and July give Oldsmobile fourth position.

Tour to Mammoth Cave

ONE of the more interesting motor tours from St. Louis to Mammoth Cave, which is the center of a national park in Kentucky, not far from Louisville. The variety of accommodations for motorists at the cave and nearby and its location make Mammoth Cave an ideal center for a number of circuitous tours to Muske Shoals, Cumberland Gap, Asheville and the Smoky Mountains and other scenic regions.

From St. Louis to Louisville, and then a historic 100-mile drive to the Cave, is a paved 371-mile trip. Follow U. S. No. 50 from St. Louis to Shoals, Ind.; then U. S. 150 to Louisville; then U. S. East 31 to Bardonia, Ky. There the plantation, with its "Old Kentucky Home" was composed by Foster. The house is perfectly preserved, with antique furniture and memorabilia of by-gone days. At Bardonia is also St. Joseph Cathedral, with its million-dollar collection of paintings. Many other points of interest are near by—Old Center College at Danville, Old Shakerstown Inn, "Uncle Tom's Cabin," near Lancaster; the old and new State Capitols; and Boone's grave at Frankfort; Tyrone's Winding Bridge near Lawrenceburg; Lexington, with the Henry Clay Home and Monument, home of Mary Todd Lincoln, and Man of War, the stock farms extending to Versailles, Richmond, Winchester, Nicholasville, Georgetown and Paris.

From Bardonia continue on U. S. East 31 to Hodgenville. This is the birthplace of Lincoln, and the old log cabin in which he was born is preserved within the beautiful Memorial Building.

From this point U. S. East 31 leads to Bear Wallow, where four-mile paved spur connects with U. S. West 31 to Cave City and then a paved 10-mile drive over State 70 to Mammoth Cave. The park covers 35,000 acres, and one may follow low conducted tours in the Cave and study nature.

Return may be made from Cave City over U. S. No. 58 to Bowling Green, to Russellville, to Hopkinsville; then U. S. No. 41 to its junction with State No. 56. Then follow No. 56 to the Wabash River; ferry across and take Illinois No. 13 through Harrisburg, Murphysboro and Belleville.

Total mileage, 725 miles.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—Financial markets were a little more inclined to anticipate an autumn business revival this week.

The stock market finally managed to score a fair rebound from the levels reached in the sharp reaction a month ago, and the bond market extended its recovery of the previous week, based on the quieting of inflation fears.

Commodities continued to advance in those lines most affected by drought conditions. Hogs touched $7.50 cwt. at Chicago, up $1 in the past week, and corn futures rose about 4 cents a bushel.

Wheat was about unchanged for the week. Cotton was unsettled by the continued threat of a textile mill strike, but ended the week with net gains of 40 to 70 cents a bale at New York.

Trading in shares quickened moderately after registering the smallest volume in the Stock Exchange in 12 years on Monday, and the Standard Statistics price index of 90 representative issues closed at 75.7, up 4.1 points from last Saturday. The index of 60 corporate bonds worked up 0.6 of a point to 84.5.

The attention of business and financial circles was focused upon Washington, as administration leaders gathered to discuss problems of such moment as the future of the NRA, and Treasury officials considered its refunding problems aggregating $1,725,000,000 for Sept. 15 and Oct. 15.

A modest inflationary flurry swept through the market in the middle of the week, coincident with rumors, later emphatically denied by Secretary Morgenthau, that the dollar might be devalued the full limit allowable and declared upon a permanent gold basis at that level.

Best Turn in Rails.

Railroad securities experienced the best recovery in some time since the adverse showing of the first batch of July earnings reports. They seemed influenced largely by gatherings of executives to discuss the problems of increased operating costs and shrunken revenues, and an editorial expression of opinion by Raymond Moley, former leading brain trust, regarding the need for remedying railroad ills.

Much attention in business quarters was attracted by the statements of two administration spokesmen in defense of the profit motive in business, but Wall Street maintained a cautious attitude toward the prospects for corporate earnings, in view of accounting changes and the adverse showing of the first batch of July earnings reports. They seemed influenced largely by gatherings of executives to discuss the problems of increased operating costs and shrunken revenues, and an editorial expression of opinion by Raymond Moley, former leading brain trust, regarding the need for remedying railroad ills.

Curious movements in foreign exchange, linked by some experts to the silver buying program, were marked by a drop in the pound sterling to a new low in terms of the French gold franc. The dollar went down along with the pound, and exports of more than $7,000,000 in gold from New York were arranged.

Signing of the Cuban reciprocal trade treaty aroused hopes in foreign trade circles of further mutually advantageous deals with Latin-American and other nations. The Russian debt negotiations, expected to clear away trade barriers, appeared to have reached a fresh impasse, however.

Shares Market at Weekend.

Stocks and other markets continued to reflect in quiet trading Saturday a mild revival of improved sentiment.

The share market made some further progress on the rise which started early in the week. Bonds, including U. S. Government issues, were mostly firm and grains scored a moderate advance.

Hopes of a seasonal upturn in business after Labor Day brought additional buying of a cautious nature into stocks but the week-end news was devoid of any convincing evidence of expansion in industry.

The Cuban trade pact focused interest chiefly on sugar shares. Reduction in the tariff on Cuban sugar apparently had been discounted as a bullish influence for gains of Cuban American sugar and other Cuban producers were linked to fractions. On the other hand, shares of domestic beet sugar companies were sold on the prospect the Cuban product would be in a stronger competitive position.

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—Total stock sales on the New York Stock Exchange today amounted to 436,700 shares, compared with 746,700 yesterday; 164,000 a week ago, and holiday a year ago. Total sales from Jan. 1 to date were 250,713,123 shares, compared with 494,773,034 last year and 271,322,852 two years ago. Total sales for the week amounted to 4,070,000 shares, compared with 11,164,784 last week.

EARNINGS AND DIVIDENDS

By the Associated Press.

The rails enjoyed a rather lively demand, with gains ranging from one to two or more points.

Among the best of the carriers were some bonds of Allegheny Corporation (Alle. Pk. & C.), Erie & Ohio, Burlington, Chicago & Northwestern, Great Northern, Illinois Central, International Great Northern, Lehigh Valley (Pennsylvania), Missouri Pacific, Nickel Plate, Southern Pacific, Union Pacific and Western Union. Interest in Cuban bonds was revived last week when the Cuban government announced a new trade agreement with that republic. Loans of Cuba Northern Railway and Cuban Sugar Co. bonds were sold at 100 points. Cuba Cane Products 6s were offered a point higher at 103 and Eastern Cuba 6s at 104. Brazil 4s showed a gain of eight points at 174.

There was not much change in the American Industrials as the Amalgamated Copper, American Telephone and Telegraph, International Rapid Transit issues stepped up fractions and the American Express and Western Union were unchanged. Activity was shown by loans of International Hydro-electric, Northern States Power and American Telephone bonds. The American Telephone list was a bit easier.

Americans continued to hold the attention of the foreign department. Advances of fractions to a point or more were made by American Telephone 4s, Lima, Brazil, Chile, Peru and Uruguay. The Germans were slightly more active, with the 5 1/2s at 104 1/2.

MILD ADVANCE IN LATE TRADING ON THE CURB

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—The curb market closed with a mild upward turn today. Trading was dull and prices slightly irregular earlier, but buying in the last few minutes imparted firmness to the closing both Swift & Co. and Swift International continued around their high points for this year, the latter issue improving its position by a minor fraction. Cellulose preferred rose 34 1/2 points in a small transfer while gains of around a point were registered by Aluminum Co. of America, Faperell Manufacturing and Jones & Laughlin Steel.

Transfers approximated $3,000 shares compared with last Saturday's record low of 38,000.

and active during the week under the best Southern trade in years at this season. Receipts were of good volume, horses on cotton today about 1,000 head and mules 242 head. Clearance was good.

The heaviest demand was for young mares and cotton mules weighing $50 to 1200 lbs. There was also a good farm trade.

WEEK'S METAL REVIEW

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—The metals situation last week was featured more or less by an irregular movement of tin prices. The decline in sterling exchange checked an advancing tendency shown in the fore part of the week, and resulted in a moderate net reaction. Demand was generally quiet, with the expected re-entry of consumers on an important scale failing to materialize.

The latter apparently are still drawing on supplies accumulated prior to the steel strike through the plant expansion program, which is estimated around 50 per cent of capacity, the reduction reflecting smaller canning requirements.

Lead quotations were lower, reflecting an unimproved demand and a poor statistical picture. Stock at the end of July totaled 240,600 tons, a new high level.

Battery makers are the principal buyers now, although the call for supplies generally is small and confined to September shipment. Trade estimates indicate that about 100,000 tons will be required.

The extended period of dullness in steel was ended with a reduction in prices. Buyers, however, are still skeptical of the price structure and withhold commitments on the possibility of a further price reduction increased following the effective breaking of the drought in the Tri-State area.

Steel operations continued at a low ebb, with Ingot production estimated at 31 per cent of capacity. Trade awaits passing of the Labor day price and action on prices for the fourth quarter. While quotations are expected to be reaffirmed, some indications are current of a possible reduction in orders for automobile buyers. Consumers are still using the automobile in increasing numbers. Juna. Automobile buying continues slow and heavy tonnage for railroad and public works projects are not expected to reach an early contracting stage.

The feature of copper was the weakening of the market in the West, although the domestic market remained unchanged at $9 for Blue Eagle delivered to the Connecticut Valley. Recent improvement in business failed to hold the market reverting to quib-Antimony held unchanged in a quiet market. Stocks are not considered large, but at the same time consumption has undergone a marked expansion.

115,333 JOBLESS DURING JUNE IN CITY AND COUNTY

Community Council Estimates Drop of 46,115 in Year but Relief Cost Continues to Grow.

There were 115,333 men and women unemployed in St. Louis and the county during June, according to an estimate by the Community Council, which bases its figures on percentage changes in employment obtained from the United States Bureau of Labor Statistics.

The total was 1076 below that of the previous month, and 46,115 under that for June, 1933. It was a rise of 4300 from April, when the estimated total of unemployed, 111,000, was the lowest for any month since October, 1931.

A recent check on the accuracy of the council's estimates was afforded in the census taken by the Board of Education from Feb. 1 to June 1. That census revealed 81,694 unemployed in St. Louis. The council estimated that the city's share of the 111,000 total in April was 85,700.

Peak in March, 1933.

The peak of unemployment in St. Louis was in March, 1933, when, according to the Community Council's estimate, 135,900 persons, or 38 per cent of the employable population, were without jobs.

Despite the improvement in employment conditions, the relief problem continues to grow, and last week Peter Kasius, director of Citizens' Committee, warned that it was approaching the point where at least $1,000,000 a month would be required.

Relief administrators throughout the depression have pointed out that there is no fixed ratio between the extent of unemployment and the need for relief; that relief costs may be expected to rise even though there are fewer jobless.

This results from a number of factors, one of the chief ones being that not all of the unemployed are dependent on public relief. Last month about 14 per cent of the city's population was on the relief rolls, but the unemployed constitute about 21 per cent of the employable population.

Other Factors.

Other considerations which affect the results are that the longer families are under care of relief agencies, the more complete must be the care provided for them, and that many families are able to endure considerable periods of unemployment before their resources are exhausted, requiring them to seek public charity. Then when employment opportunities are opened, it is found that the jobs go more frequently to those of the unemployed who have been able to sustain themselves without assistance.

The 78 organizations which comprise United Relief, Inc., accounted for 1.1 per cent of the total spent for relief and welfare services last year by the 118 agencies in St. Louis, according to a survey completed yesterday by Irving Weissman, research director of the Community Council.

Total expenditures of all agencies, Weissman said, were $11,851,801, of which the United Relief share was $9,637,130.

Ten United Relief agencies, engaged in family relief work, spent $5,128,636, of which about 90 per cent represented Government funds allotted to them in the first eight months of the year before reorganization of the relief system under the FERA.

United Relief Expenditures.

In the relief field expenditures of the United Relief agencies represented 96.2 of the total. The proportion of United Relief expenditures in the other classifications was: Hospitals, 90.2 per cent; other health agencies, 68.2 per cent; homes for children, 70 per cent; day nurseries, 88.3 per cent; other children's services, 100 per cent; homes for the aged, 48 per cent; agencies for the handicapped, 17.7 per cent; neighborhood services, 10.6 per cent; and federations, 100 per cent.

Aside from relief, the largest expenditure of any group in United Relief, Inc., was $3,243,511 for 21 hospitals. The remainder of the total was shared by United Relief agencies as follows: Seventeen homes for children, $458,011; five child care agencies, $189,557; five health agencies, $208,179; three day nurseries, $23,551; five homes for the aged, $136,324; three organizations for the handicapped, $49,688; seven neighborhood service agencies, $109,954; and two federations, representing expenditures for fund raising and co-ordination of activities, $110,688.

SUIT FOR FORECLOSURE OF GOTHAM APARTMENTS

Trustee of Deed of Trust Alleges Defaults in Interest Payments Have Occurred.

A suit for foreclosure sale of the Gotham Apartments, a six-story building at 5904 Enright avenue, has been filed in Circuit Court by Edward G. Platt, trustee of a $225,000 deed of trust against the property.

He alleges that defaults in payment of interest on bonds floated in the transaction have occurred.

A total of $186,000 of the bonds is outstanding, the petition states. The deed was executed by the Joyner Realty Co. The present title owners of the apartment are Mr. and Mrs. Fred Schmitt, the suit sets forth.

CUBS' RALLY BEATS DODGERS; YANKS AND INDIANS SPLIT

WILD THROW BY TOM ZACHARY LETS IN THE WINNING RUN

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 25.—Resurrecting one of the winning ninth-inning rallies for which they were noted in 1932, the Cubs put over four runs in the ninth today to defeat the Dodgers, 4 to 3, and end a three-game losing streak.

For the first eight frames, Johnny Babich, Brooklyn rookie, shut out the Cubs with four hits while homers by Danny Taylor and Linus Frey off Guy Bush's delivery gave the Dodgers a lead. Then Chicago got three blows off Babich in the ninth, touched Relief Pitcher Tom Zachary for another and finally Bill Jurges ran home with the winning run when Zachary, trying for a force-play at third, threw the ball into the left field bull pen.

Fremont Retains Playground Athletic Championship, Breaking Own Record for Points Scored

For the second successive year, Fremont won the Public Schools Playgrounds athletic championship. In winning the seventh annual carnival, Fremont broke its own high record number of points, 307 1/2, scored last year, when it tallied 415 points yesterday afternoon at the Public Schools Stadium before a crowd estimated at 20,000.

Second to Fremont was Baden with 261. Clay was third with 209 and Wyman last with 207.

Fremont qualified five teams out of a possible nine, thus breaking the former record of three finalists and then went on to win all five events to smash the old mark of two. By scoring 23 points in the track meet, the Fremont representatives won that Mullaphy was second on the track with 15. Wyman and Laclede tied for third with 14 each, and Baden and Shaw tied for fifth with 12.

Bookie Makes A. L. Favorite To Win Series

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.

WITH the end of the major league season still over a month away, the American circuit's standard bearer in the world series has been made a 7 to 5 favorite to defeat the National League pennant winner in the world series.

Darnell Co. New York commission, reports it has been swamped with requests for quotations the last few days and that National League adherents are asking $5 from American League backers. Eight of every 10 offerings made have been in support of the American League, Darnell said.

The Detroit Tigers are the leaders in the American League with the New York Giants world champions, setting the pace in the National.

NUSSLEIN AND KOZELUH IN PRO TENNIS FINAL

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 25.—Thrusting two former American Davis Cup stars, Vincent Richards of New York, and Ellsworth Vines Jr. of Pasadena, Cal., aside today, Karel Kozeluh and Hans Nusslein made the final round of the National Professional singles tennis tournament tomorrow an all-European affair.

In the opening semifinal, Vines, national amateur titleholder in 1931 and 1932, was completely outplayed by the German veteran, Nusslein, and took a 7-3, 6-1, 6-3 and 6-2 beating.

Kozeluh, spry little Czechoslovakian, looked just as good in eliminating Richards, the defending champion, in straight sets, 6-2, 8-6 and 6-0.

Vines gave Nusslein a terrific battle for one set, coming from behind to win after the German had reached set point three times.

In the next three sets, however, Nusslein played careful tennis which led Vines into errors. Only in rare spots did the former amateur champion profit by his powerful, blasting style.

Kozeluh's high kicking service had Richards in trouble from the start of their battle. The Czech drew Richards out of court frequently and rushed to the net from where he sent the American's returns hurtling into the corners.

Kozeluh refused to be drawn into errors, and most of Richards' points were won on careful placements.

Richards came from 4-3 in games in the second set to tie it up at 6-6. However, Kozeluh turned on a dazzling assortment of tennis to win eight games in a row.

Rowe pitched, bats, Detroit to victory.

gled to center. The Washington infield drew in and up walked Rowe. He fouled a couple and then blasted a single to left center. That was enough to win, but an error let another run in.

Rowe had struck out only one until the ninth, but with rain threatening to stop proceedings and cause a Washington victory, he bore down.

Schulte, first up, was safe on Rogell's bad throw. Susko forced Schulte and in quick succession Rowe fanned two pinch hitters, Harris and the last one, Travis, on three pitched balls.

The crowd roared and his teammates surrounded Rowe to beat their congratulations into his shoulders.

Washington scored in the third inning on Stone's single and Manush's double.

Detroit tied it in the sixth though Rogell's triple and a ground-er by Greenberg which scored the shortstop.

The Senators, however, went ahead again in the seventh on Susko's single, a sacrifice and Myke's single. They stayed there until the ninth.

Rowe allowed nine hits but he did not walk a man and he got a double and a single in addition to his game-winning single in the ninth.

CONTRACTS SIGNED FOR SALE OF TWO APARTMENTS

Out-of-Town Interests to Pay $150,000 and $125,000 for Multiple Family Buildings.

FRANCISCUS-MAGINN DEAL NEARLY CLOSED

Professional Operators Said to Have Been Caught Napping in Kerckhoff Apartment Purchase.

By Berry Moore.

Purchase contracts have been signed with Franciscus-Maginn, Inc., for two 12-family and one six-family apartment, involving considerations between $125,000 and $150,000. The buildings are owned by out-of-town interests. The locations of the properties and the names of the purchasers are withheld, pending execution of deeds, now being drawn.

Negotiations also virtually have been concluded through Franciscus-Maginn for a large efficiency apartment building in the West End, recently taken over by corporate interests. The purchaser is said to be a professional operator, whose identity is withheld, pending acquisition of the title. One of the most attractively situated of its type in this part of the city, the building has been a magnet which has interested both professional and private investors, recognizing its speculative possibilities at the price at which it was said to be available.

Buildings Reconditioned. Franciscus-Maginn, Inc., has expended in excess of $150,000 in reconditioning buildings, especially apartments and flats, it was announced. Resultant absorption of vacancies at increased rentals is evident. Additional outlays for reconditioning are being made in anticipation of an awakened speculative and investment demand in the ensuing fall and winter, Maginn announced.

Obviously professional operators were caught napping when Daniel C. Kerckhoff walked off with the 16-story Pierre Chouteau Apartment at 4440 Lindell boulevard, knocked down to him at a foreclosure sale on the steps of the Civil Courts Building for $280,000, as the sole bidder. The sale was made, as was told in last Sunday's Post-Dispatch, under the provisions of the first deed of trust for $500,000, against which bonds for that amount were outstanding. The State of Missouri holds $100,000 of these bonds.

Appraised at $800,000. Prior to the purchase under the foreclosure sale, negotiations for this real estate prize had been conducted on behalf of Kerckhoff through the Mercantile-Commerce Bank & Trust Co., without avail. In a recent appraisal for the Court, Nelson Cunliff estimated that the building could not be reproduced at prevailing costs of construction for less than $800,000, exclusive of the site, which has a frontage of 85 feet on Lindell by a depth of 285 feet.

Manifestly, Kerckhoff's purchase has aroused dormant speculative interest in the real estate field as indicated from numerous offers for and inquiries relative to buildings of this character. According to Henry R. Weisels, president of the Henry R. Weisels Co. As a matter of fact, real estate men say that the record purchase has had the effect of stiffening prices of large scale apartments, thrown on the market under adverse conditions.

Rejected by Kerckhoff. Several months ago, the Mercantile-Commerce Bank & Trust Co., representing Kerckhoff, submitted an offer of $387,000 for 625 Skinker, a 16-story apartment building, occupying a lot 150 by 150, facing Forest Park. Previously, Henry R. Weisels had offered $360,000 for the building. This offer was not on a cash basis, he reported afterward, was acquired at a Civil Courts Building sale, by a syndicate composed of bondholders, for $360,000.

An ordinance was recently passed extending the commercial district on Lindell boulevard from Whittier street to Boyle avenue.

PASTEL FURNITURE CO. TAKES LEASE ON CHOUTEAU

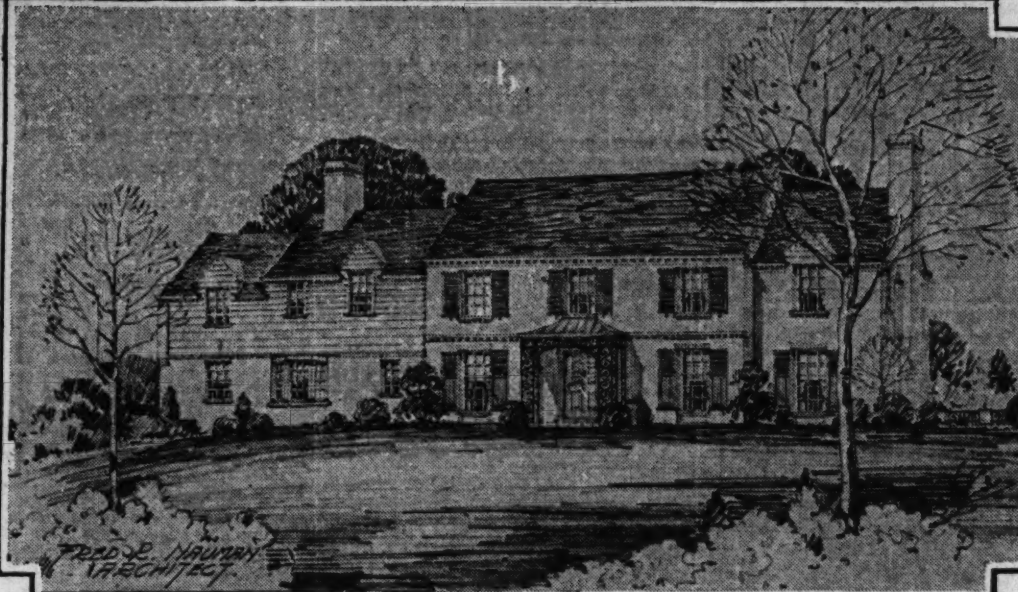

The Pastel Furniture Co., which has been in business for 20 years, now at 2741 Franklin avenue, has just leased for a term of five years a building at 4008-11 Chouteau avenue. The building contains about 10,000 square feet and has first floor, basement, balcony and second floor. After a number of changes are made the company will take possession. E. H. Stollman Real Estate Co. represented the owner and the Rudy Kohn Realty Co., the lessee.

NRA POLICY REVISED ON TIRE-PRICE FIXING

First Line Rates Increased for Five Weeks to Help Small Dealers.

By the Associated Press. WASHINGTON, Aug. 26.—The NRA today revised its price-fixing policy in the tire industry with the establishment of a system of differentials designed to aid the small manufacturer and retail dealer.

Effective Monday, minimum prices will be altered from 11 per cent increases for first line tires of the five largest manufacturers to 15 per cent reductions for certain third line tires.

These differentials will be effective for five weeks, until Oct. 1. Leon Henderson, NRA's director of research and planning, declined to predict what would happen after that.

The tire industry is one of the few in which the NRA has resorted to price-fixing in an effort at stabilization. It has been operating under minimum prices set last May following another of its many price wars.

The new differentials are the answer to a request by the code authority for the retail tire and battery industry for such a system and general increase in minimum prices.

He Expresses Grumbling. Henderson said he thought there would be "quite a bit of grumbling" on the part of the bigger manufacturers, "but our purpose is to assist the small retailer and manufacturer."

The higher differentials will apply to Firestone, General, Goodrich, Goodyear and United States tires. So-called private, or special brands sold through filling stations, which handle only first line tires, will be increased four per cent.

A five per cent reduction in third line and truck tires, with first and second lines remaining at the present scale, was granted for retail stores operated by Montgomery Ward & Co., and Sears, Roebuck & Co., the outlets of 15 medium-size manufacturers and 10 subsidiaries of the big five.

Included in the latter categories are Badger, Brunswick, Diamond, Federal, G and J, Gillette, Hood, Marathon, Miller, Yale, Cooper, Dayton, Dunlop, Falls, Fisk, Gates, Giant, Inland, Kelly-Springfield, Lee, McLaren, Mansfield, Master, Mohawk, Pennsylvania, Pharis and Seiberling.

Small Makers' Schedule. For 22 small manufacturers and mainly chain automotive accessory supply stores, distributing private brands, there were reductions of 3 1/2 per cent on first line, 4 per cent on second, 5 per cent on third, and 8 per cent on truck tires.

Reductions averaging 15 per cent on popular size tires, with the largest reduction on third line, were scheduled for tires sold through catalogues by mail or telephone orders by mail order houses.

It was emphasized there were increases in only three instances and reductions in 11. "Differentials prevent small dealers and manufacturers from having to sell below invoice costs and prevent vicious 'cutbacks,' or rebates," Henderson said. "Thousands of retailers are on their way out; there is no use disguising it."

"It's really a warning to small dealers to get out and they've got this much time to do it," he asserted. He pointed to charts showing the retail tire trade has been shifting away from the independent dealer to the company-owned store, and the filling station.

DARLING STORES, INC. LEASES IN ST. LOUIS

To Take Over Three-Story Building at 416 North Seventh Street.

The three-story building at 416 North Seventh street, owned by Joseph L. Werner, has been acquired under a five-year lease by Darling Stores, Inc., a women's clothing concern, with headquarters in New York.

The House of Finkelstein, a women's ware concern, has been a tenant of the building for several years.

Rental provisions of the lease were not disclosed, but are understood to be on a percentage basis. Werner recently purchased the building from William G. Drosten, president of the F. W. Drosten Jewelry Co., transferring as part payment a six-story building at the northeast corner of Broadway and Warren street.

The site has a frontage of 25 feet on Locust street by a depth of 75 feet. The location is just south of St. Charles street.

U. S. JUDGE DOUBTS VALIDITY OF FARM MORATORIUM ACT

"If It Is Constitutional There Isn't Any Use of Property Rights," He Says.

By the Associated Press. LOUISVILLE, Ky., Aug. 25.—The first legal attack in Kentucky on the Frazier-Lemke act, passed by the last Congress to give indebted farmers relief from foreclosures, was made today in Federal Court here by the Louisville Joint Stock Land Bank, suing to dismiss the bankruptcy petition of William H. Radford, Christian County farmer. The bank seeks permission to foreclose.

The Frazier-Lemke act allows the farmer a five-year moratorium for payment, under certain conditions, but requires him to pay a reasonable rental. The bank attacked the act on three grounds, that it exceeds the bankruptcy power delegated to Congress, violates the fifth amendment by depriving the plaintiff of property without due process of law and falls to give faith and credit to a judgment of the State Courts.

Judge Charles I. Dawson expressed his opinion from the bench that the act, "unless further explained," was "unconscionable and unconstitutional."

"If it is held constitutional," he continued, "to my mind there isn't any use of having property rights any more." He instructed attorneys to file briefs promptly.

"I am interested in two questions," he said. "First, is it a bankrupt act at all, and second, did Congress have power to pass it?"

LACLEDE HOTEL LEASE RENEWED FOR 6-YEAR TERM

Alderman Harry L. Israel has renewed his lease of the hotel portion of the old Laclede Hotel Building at Sixth and Chestnut, for a term of six years. The lease, negotiated several months ago, calls for rentals aggregating $44,000 as follows: $6000 a year for the first two years, $7200 a year for the next two years, $8400 for the next year and $9600 for the last year of the six year term. It covers the five upper floors of the building. With the exception of the lobby the first floor, comprising stores, is not included.

The lessor is Mrs. Adrian Lamb, daughter of the late Joseph L. Griswold, owner of the building. The lease was arranged by Arthur L. Martin & Son, in conjunction with Rudy Kohn Realty Co.

MCGRAW-HILL PUBLISHING CO. LEASES NEW QUARTERS

The McGraw-Hill Publishing Co., Inc., publisher of trade papers, has taken larger quarters on the fourth floor of the Paul Brown Building at the southeast corner of Ninth and Olive streets.

The concern, of which George E. Sears is branch manager, has had quarters in the Bell Telephone Building at Tenth and Pine streets. The new quarters will be occupied under a lease negotiated by the Isaac T. Cook Co., representing the Paul Brown estate, owner of the building.

W. L. FLEMING PURCHASES TWO APARTMENT BUILDINGS

SUIT TO ENFORCE SHAW PLACE RESTRICTIONS

Group Alleges Property Owner Rents Place for Flats and Shop.

Residents of Shaw place, a private district lying between Shaw boulevard and De Tonty street, filed suit in Circuit Court yesterday to enforce restrictions alleged to have been established in 1918. The restrictions were designed to maintain the section as a strictly residence district, but it is alleged in the suit that Mrs. Wilhelmina Burmeyer, owner of property at 9 Shaw place, has violated the restrictions by permitting her property to be rented as flats or apartments; also for a plumber and carpenter shop.

Plaintiffs in the suit are Mr. and Mrs. Paul M. Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Claude B. Ricketts, Mrs. Homer Basford, John B. Corn, Mrs. Clara Jacquemin, Miss Anna Wuest, Miss Edna Mephum, Mr. and Mrs. Irvin H. Gamble and Paul Miller, Edgar A. Mephum and Mrs. Gertrude F. Gamble, as trustees of Shaw place. The law firm of Kane & Gamble represents petitioners.

NAMED ON ROAD COMMITTEE.

George J. Wanstrath, recently made an honorary member of the Normandy Improvement Association, has been appointed a member of a committee formed in behalf of the proposed widening of Natural Bridge road from Pine Lawn to the St. Louis Airport and then to Highway No. 40, St. Charles Road. The surveyors for the State Highway Commission have almost completed their work.

CONTRACTS ON THREE MISSOURI RIVER PROJECTS

Construction to Provide Work for 400 Men at Cost of $740,000.

By the Associated Press.

OMAHA, Neb., Aug. 25.—Capt. James M. Young, district army engineer here, today announced contracts awarded on three additional upper Missouri River improvement projects, to provide work for 400 men at a cost of $740,000.

With these awards announced, Capt. Young said, 17 of 18 scheduled upper river contracts have been awarded, and four old contracts have been extended since word of the $15,000,000 Federal river allotment was received last month.

"If there is an ordinary amount of water in the river during the next season, there ought to be 5000 men at work on the upper river when the peak is reached next spring," he said.

Of the new contracts, the C. F. Lytle Co. of Sioux City, Ia., was awarded a $210,000 job at Blair Bend, north of here, the Kansas City Bridge Co. was successful bidder on a $133,000 project near Omaha, Neb., and a $347,000 project at Hamburg Bend, below Nebraska City, went to the Massman Construction Co. of Kansas City.

RUBICAM SCHOOL BUYS LOT FOR EXPANSION

Tract 30 by 100 Feet Adjoins Buildings of Business College.

A lot 30x100 feet at 4935 Delmar boulevard, occupied by an old two-story building, has been purchased by the Rubicam Business School, whose modern two-story school building adjoins on the west. The consideration was $12,500.

The purchase was made to provide for the future enlargement of the present school building, now having a lot frontage of 30 feet on Delmar, with a depth of 160 feet. The school already owned 30x60 feet in the rear of the property acquired in the present transaction.

The purchase gives the school a total lot frontage of 80 feet on Delmar, by a depth of 160 feet. The Dickmann Real Estate Co. handled negotiations. Julia Bacigalupo was the grantor to the title.

Another transfer was that of 100 feet at 5415 Delmar by Yvonne Hohenstreet to Brentmoor Realty Co., Inc.

NATIONAL REAL ESTATE MEETINGS IN CHICAGO

A regular quarterly meeting of the board of directors of the National Association of Real Estate Boards will be held in Chicago the last week in October. The board at that time is expected to make a broad survey of the situation and outlook for real estate in view of the very great changes of the past months and to chart action under these conditions.

A three-day meeting of the American Institute of Real Estate Appraisers of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, the first national conference of professional real estate appraisers ever to be called in the United States, is being planned to be held in Washington during September. The gathering will include a meeting of the full membership of the Institute, an important meeting of its governing council, and a meeting of all of its committees. Important problems of appraisal in connection with the large-scale appraisal work now going on through Federal agencies in the housing and mortgage field will come before the conference.

The new Institute of Real Estate Management of the Association will hold the quarterly meeting of its governing council in Chicago at a date to be determined.

Alice Sullivan Makes Debut at Eastern Resort

Presented to Society at Elaborate Supper Dance at Narragansett Pier, R. I.—400 Guests Attend.

NARRAGANSETT PIER, R. I., Aug. 25.

AT a supper dance ranking among the most elaborate entertainments seen in Narragansett in recent years, J. Banigan Sullivan of New York last night, at the Carlton Hotel, presented to society his niece, Miss Alice Marie Sullivan, daughter of Mrs. Robert J. B. Sullivan of St. Louis and Narragansett. Miss Sullivan, a popular member of the colony's younger set also will be a debutante of the coming season at her winter home in St. Louis.

At her debut party last evening she wore a gown of white chiffon, with a corsage of white orchids on her arm.

Strings of brilliant Japanese lanterns gave color to the spacious veranda, while within the hotel decorations of white and silver balloons, white flowers and blue table service against a background of green cedars made an attractive setting for the party attended by 400 guests.

Many dinner parties preceded the party. One of the largest was given by Mr. Sullivan for 36 guests. Miss Katherine Mahaffey, daughter of Birch Oliver Mahaffey of St. Louis, and a prospective debutante of the coming season, entertained 20 guests with Miss Sullivan as the guest of honor. Both dinner parties were at the Dunes Club, though Miss Mahaffey's party was entertained before dinner at the Quakerbridge, the summer home of her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph S. Craib of New York, with whom she is spending the summer.

Miss Sullivan is the granddaughter of Mrs. James G. Cahill, 4475 Lindell boulevard, St. Louis, and a niece of Miss Leonora Cahill. She will return to St. Louis with her mother and brother Sept. 10. Mrs. Sullivan and her son and daughter, have recently returned from a trip around the world.

Miss Irene McAuliffe Engaged to J. J. Lee

MRS. AND MRS. JOSEPH J. McAULIFFE, 4495 West Pine boulevard, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Mary Irene McAuliffe and James J. Lee of Akron, O., formerly of St. Louis.

Miss McAuliffe attended the Academy of the Visitation and was graduated from the Convent of the Sacred Heart. She was maid of honor at the Veiled Prophet ball in her debut year, two seasons ago. She is a niece of Mrs. John R. Scott of the Greystone Apartments. Mr. Lee is the son of Mrs. John C. Lee of St. Louis and a graduate of the St. Louis University. The date of the wedding has not been announced.

Ex-St. Louisan And New York Girl Married

NEW YORK, Aug. 25. THE wedding of Miss Catherine P. Favear, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. Keith Favear of New York, and Allan Pendleton Whittemore Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Allan Pendleton Whittemore, formerly of St. Louis and now of Saranac Lake, N. Y., which took place at 5:30 o'clock this afternoon in St. Joseph's Chapel of the Church of St. Mary the Virgin, recalled the ceremony which united two other members of the same prominent St. Louis families: some years ago when Miss Favear's aunt, Miss Catherine C. Case became the bride of Audenring Whittemore, an uncle of the bridegroom.

Only members of the immediate families and a few close friends attended today's ceremony, at which the Rev. C. Winthrop Peabody officiated. An informal reception followed at the home of the bride's mother, 327 East Fifty-fifth street. Miss Marie Favear of New York served her sister as maid of honor and only attendant. Charles W. Whittemore, formerly of St. Louis and now living at Buffalo, N. Y., acted as best man for his brother.

Miss Janet Harris Bride of R. F. O'Brien

MISS JANET BOND HARRIS, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fletcher R. Harris of Denny and Dorsett roads, became the bride of Roland F. O'Brien of the Warwick Apartments, yesterday afternoon at 5:30 o'clock, at an informal ceremony at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harris. The marriage service was read by the Rev. Rufus D. S. Putney in the presence of the immediate families. The ceremony was performed in the living room before an improvised altar arranged about the mantle which was banked with ferns and palms and adorned with clusters of white asters. Tall candles filled with lighted cathedral tapers were at each side of the altar. The bride was unattended and was given in marriage by her father. She wore a gown of heavy white crepe made on long clinging lines. The bodice was fashioned with a square neckline and long sleeves of the crepe. The skirt, molded to the figure fell into a short train. She wore a three-quarter length veil of white tulle held in place by a shirred band of the tulle. The bridal bouquet was of gardenias and lilies of the valley. Willard M. O'Brien served as best man for his brother. The ceremony was followed by a small reception. The dining room was decorated with late summer

Late Summer Activities at Eastern Resorts

NANTUCKET, Mass., Aug. 25. ALMOST all the summer colony attended Miss Elisabeth Upthegrove's production of "Autumn Crocus," given by the Nantucket Players, with Rollo Peters and Sylvia Fields playing the leading roles, Thursday and Friday nights at the Yacht Club. The only new arrival on the island this week was Mrs. Frederick Reismeyer, who has arrived to join Mrs. Gwynne Evans and her family for a stay of several weeks. Thomas W. White, who with Mrs. White and their son, William, has been here for the summer, returned to St. Louis several days ago. Mrs. White and her son will leave Wednesday for New York, to visit her sister, Mrs. Daniel Whitelaw, before returning to St. Louis early in September.

SWAMPSCOTT, Mass., Aug. 25. THE annual costume ball was held at Ocean House Saturday night, Aug. 18. The ball, the outstanding social event of the summer season was attended by many St. Louisans, who are spending the season here. Mrs. Nelson B. Gatch of St. Louis, won the first

Veiled Prophet Ball To Be Held on Oct. 3

ACCORDING to tradition the Veiled Prophet parade takes place on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in October, making the ball this year Wednesday night, Oct. 3, an early date for this function at the Coliseum which marks the formal opening of the fall and winter social season. For 55 years the Veiled Prophet has selected the fairest debutantes and the most charming matrons of St. Louis to form his Court of Love and Beauty. This year about 50 maids and 100 ladies of honor will receive the royal command. Because of the early date for the ball St. Louisans at summer resorts will return home next month to prepare for the event. Among them will be Miss Jane Johnson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew W. Johnson, 16 Portland place, who is at Hot Springs, Va., and who will be the retiring Veiled Prophet Queen.

Ex-St. Louisan Weds New York Girl

The bride wore a late afternoon ensemble of aquamarine brocade lace over an aquamarine satin. Her jacket was smartly modeled, with sleeves full at the shoulders and narrowing at the wrists, with closely fitted and pointed cuffs. Her skirt was cut to show a slight train. Her picture hat and accessories harmonized and she carried a bouquet of gardenias and lilies of the valley.

Miss Maria Pevsar's gown was of yellow taffeta, designed with a tight bodice and full circular skirt. Her cape, as well as a flossie at the hem of her dress was of yellow net. The ensemble was completed with a wide brimmed hat of the same color. She carried larkspur and yellow and tulle roses.

Two vases of Easter lilies and white gladioli on the altar were the only decorations at the church. Mrs. Pevsar's home was decorated with autumn flowers. Mrs. Pevsar was attired in gray georgette, with matching accessories.

this college girl will attract a train of new admirers

—when she steps off the train! So will the many other girls who wear this trim, new suede "Spectator Sports" Oxford.

It promises to be the Campus Favorite...because it's such a good mixer. It fits in with any sports outfit and yet it's formal enough...with its Continental heel...to wear to afternoon teas with wool or silk dresses. 11.75.

Ruth Wettengel Weds S. Deward Chandler

MISS RUTH L. WETTENGEL, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Wettengel, 3114 Longfellow boulevard, was married to S. Deward Chandler, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Chandler, 4523 Tennessee avenue, at 8 o'clock last night at the home of the bride's parents. Dr. Seth H. Buell of the Compton Hill Congregational Church read the service, which was followed by a reception.

The bride was gown in ivory satin, fashioned on princess lines. Her tulle veil fell from a coronet of Duchesse lace. She carried lilies of the valley. Her attendants, Miss Mabel Forrest, Miss Frances Mathews and Mrs. Frederick Stueck, wore gowns of white satin, made on close fitting lines with three-quarter length coats. They carried white orchids.

The bridegroom's brother, Russell Chandler, was best man. The ushers were Adolph Schlostein and Frederick Stueck.

Because of the absence of the bride's father, who is in Japan, she was given in marriage by her brother, Charles Wettengel. Mr. and Mrs. Chandler have gone North on their wedding trip.

flowers and greenery and the bridal table had as a centerpiece a bouquet of white larkspur and baby's breath. White candles in silver candelabra illuminated the table.

Among the guests were the bridegroom's mother, Mrs. Enock Marvin O'Brien of Shelbyville, Mo., the bride's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Langford Balenger of Memphis, Tenn., and her cousins, Miss Follye and Miss Martha Gowans of Memphis.

The bride attended Mary Institute and was graduated from Oldfields School, Glencoe, Md. She was presented to society at a tea dance given by her mother at their home several seasons ago. She is a member of the Junior League. Her maternal grandfather was Dr. Young Hance Bond, a noted St. Louis physician. Mr. O'Brien was graduated from the Law School of the University of Missouri and is engaged in the practice of law with the firm of Williams, Nelson and English.

After a honeymoon in the West Mr. O'Brien and his bride will live in St. Louis.

St. Louisans at Michigan Resort

GRAND HAVEN, Aug. 25.—THE season has advanced to a stage where longer evenings, cooler nights and occasionally a real blow off Lake Michigan warn one that the summer is waning. St. Louisans are beginning to make plans for returning to their homes, although many will remain here until the middle of September. Among them are Mr. and Mrs. Samuel A. Mitchell and Mrs. W. Tarlton. Gene Sidel Jr. visited Mrs. G. Bergess at her home in Highland Park for several days. He went to Chicago, where he met his mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. Gene Sidel Sr. They will visit Century of Progress Exposition before returning to their home in St. Louis. Miss Virginia Zeigler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Homer F. Zeigler, who are occupying the Jack and Jill Cottage for the month, entertained a party of friends at her home Wednesday evening, Aug. 15, at bridge.

The guests were Miss Marian Ziegler, Miss Elizabeth Grice, Miss Betty Grieve of Toronto, Miss Dorothy Alexander of Grand Rapids, Mich.; Miss Julia Ann Chrysler, Homer F. Zeigler Jr., Richard Alexander, John Strauss, Richard Hamilton, Jean Padberg and Robert Cooney.

Mrs. Edwin Schisler and Mrs. Richard Hutton have been at Michigan for the summer. Mr. and Mrs. James Carpenter and son Henry left their cottage at Spring Lake Thursday for St. Louis.

Guests at the Highland Park Hotel for the past week included: Dr. and Mrs. F. G. Pernaud and family, Mrs. F. W. Gruber and her daughter, Joan; Mr. and Mrs. S. M. Harrison and Mrs. Harrison's mother, Mrs. T. Lippman.

WEDDINGS and ENGAGEMENTS

MISS MARY LOUISE LUBBE, daughter of Mrs. H. J. Lubbe, 5527 Baitner avenue, will be maid of honor at the wedding of Miss Mildred E. Moller and John Reardon of Quincy, Ill., which will take place at St. Peter's Church in that city Saturday at 9 o'clock in the morning. Miss Moller is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Moller. The ceremony will be followed by a wedding breakfast at the Country Club and a reception at the home of the bride's parents. Miss Lubbe and Miss Harriette Neufeld of Davenport, Ia., who will be a bridesmaid, will entertain the bridal party at a dinner at the Lincoln-Douglas Hotel, Quincy, Friday night.

The wedding of Miss Beatrice Daniels, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Daniels, 4216 North Newstead avenue, and Collins Glaze Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Collins Glaze, 1412 Bredell avenue, Richmond Heights, will take place Friday at 8 o'clock at the Hyde Park Congregational Church. The Rev. Hardin Smith will officiate. A reception in the church parlors will follow. Miss Lela Duseker as maid of honor and Miss Edna, Miss Ruth Duseker, Miss Evelyn Skiver and Mrs. Dorothy Barris as bridesmaids. Robert Glaze will be the bride's best man and his ushers will be Claire Glaze, the prospective bride's brother; Gomer Daniels, her cousin; Ray Stewart and Norberry Wayman.

Miss Hilda Gelgher, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Max Gelgher, 6615 Enright avenue, was married to Ferd Kraus, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Kraus of Vicksburg, Miss., Wednesday at 10 a. m., at the United Hebrew Temple. Rabbi Samuel Thurman conducted the service. The pair will make their home in Vicksburg.

BILBO IS ISSUE-TUESDAY IN MISSISSIPPI VOTING

Ex-Governor Expects to Outdo Huey Long If He Gets in Senate.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JACKSON, Miss., Aug. 25.—Mississippi Democrats will vote Tuesday on a nominee for junior United States Senator. Former Gov. Theo. Bilbo, Senator Hubert Stephens, the incumbent, and Congressman Ross Collins are in the race. There is a fourth candidate, State Senator Frank Harper, but his chances are considered negligible.

Political observers could agree on only one thing as the primary election drew near, and that was that a runoff would have to be held. Tuesday's election will merely be a Democratic primary, but winning the primary in Mississippi is identical with election.

One of the chief issues is the political policies of Bilbo. If elected, he has declared frankly he expects to "take Huey Long off the front pages of the newspapers." Judging from his record, Mississippians feel that he is well qualified to do so. During his two terms as Governor, the State was shaken by constant political storms. It learned of road scandals. It saw its State university professors dismissed because of opposition to the Governor, and it watched these institutions lose academic recognition as a result.

Opponents of Bilbo are taking their principal stands on the policies of President Roosevelt and hoping that this will be sufficient to assure them victory.

Bilbo, however, is accusing Mississippi's junior Senator of "never had an original idea in his 20 years of service." Like the others, he has tackled a Roosevelt plank to his platform as a matter of course.

The race was "sewed up," he contends, until Washington politicians "jerked Collins out of the bag." Collins forsook the congressional race, in which he would have been certain of election, to enter the four-cornered contest.

Collins speaks constantly of his work in obtaining Federal aid for schools and of his good roads program.

Bilbo's strength is admitted by both the Stephens and Collins factions. Each group says its candidate will oppose the former Governor in the runoff.

In the event that Bilbo and Stephens land the ticket, Collins is expected to throw his support to the latter. However, J. B. Snider, secretary of the State Democratic Executive Committee, and undercover campaign manager for Collins, is expected to throw his support to Bilbo in such an event. Even though Collins should support Stephens in a runoff, many of his followers, consisting of union laborers and ex-soldiers, are expected to disregard his influence and back Bilbo.

Bilbo is also holding a big stick over the 1935 gubernatorial aspirants. If he loses this race, he expects to run again for the governorship, and there is strong probability that he could return to the Governor's residence.

NEW PLANE, CITY OF ST. LOUIS, TO BE CHRISTENED TOMORROW

Miss Genevieve Lamy Will Sponsor 14-Passenger Ship for TWA.

The City of St. Louis, one of the new 14-passenger planes to be placed in service here Sept. 1 on the trans-continental route of Transcontinental Western Air, Inc., will be christened at Lambert-St. Louis Field at a public ceremony at 2 p. m. tomorrow.

Miss Genevieve Lamy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar C. Lamy, 1 Forest Ridge, will sponsor the ship. Mayor Dickmann, Postmaster Jackson and Carl F. G. Meyer, representing the Chamber of Commerce Air Board, are to make brief addresses.

The new planes, twin-engined Douglas Airliners, will replace trimotored equipment in the trans-continental service. The ships cruise at a rate of 180 miles an hour and are capable of top speeds in excess of 200 miles an hour. Flying time between New York and Los Angeles will be reduced considerably with the new equipment.

CHARLES GUY KENT JR. IS SUED FOR DIVORCE

Former Elizabeth Hixson Charges General Indignities, Alleging He Failed to Support Her.

Mrs. Elizabeth Hixson Kent filed suit for divorce yesterday against Charles Guy Kent Jr., whom she married last Dec. 21. Mrs. Kent is the daughter of J. T. Hixson, 412 South Elm avenue, superintendent of Webster Groves High School. Kent is the stepson of Gustav Riemeyer Jr., 6454 Cecil avenue, vice-president of the First National Bank.

The suit, which was filed at Clayton, alleges general indignities, and states that Kent was cold and indifferent, refused to live with Mrs. Kent as her husband, stayed out all night and declined to tell her where he had been, and failed to support her. She asked restoration of her maiden name.

Clairborne to Talk on Peace. Congressman James R. Clairborne, Democratic nominee for re-election from the Twelfth District, will speak on "What I am Willing to do for World Peace" before the St. Louis Peace Action Committee and co-operating peace organizations at 8 p. m. Thursday, at the Y. M. H. A.-Y. W. H. A., Union boulevard and Enright avenue. The program will be the second of a series of weekly meetings.

ADOLPHE MENJOU IS MARRIED QUIETLY TO VERREE TEASDALE

Ceremony Takes Place in Judge's Chambers; Honeymoon Trip Starts Tomorrow

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Aug. 25.—None of the usual movie fanfare attended the wedding today of Adolphe Menjou and Verree Teasdale.

Slipping through a side door into the quiet chambers of Judge James H. Pope in the Hall of Justice, the motion-picture pair repeated the vows in the presence of only Menjou's mother and his brother, Harry Menjou.

Then Mr. and Mrs. Menjou drove to their new home to superintend the unloading and placing of the specially built furniture scheduled to arrive today from the factory. Monday they leave on a 10-day motor trip through Northern California.

Miss Teasdale, who has been in pictures but two years, is attaining a reputation as one of Hollywood's "best-dressed" women. She has been previously married. Menjou, who enjoys the title of the movies' best-dressed man, has been married twice before.

Marian Niedringhaus Wed to F. H. Alexander

THE wedding of Miss Marian Niedringhaus, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Norman H. Niedringhaus, 2428 Cleveland avenue, Granite City, and F. Howard Alexander, son of Mrs. Mary Alexander, Joplin, Mo., took place Friday night at 8 o'clock at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Niedringhaus. The Rev. John Sanders, pastor of the Presbyterian Church of Granite City, officiated in the presence of about 40 guests, all relatives of the bride and bridegroom.

Miss Dorothy Niedringhaus was her sister's only attendant, and Douglas Little served as best man for Mr. Alexander. The bride wore a gown of white mousseline de soie made simply with cascades of ruffles trimming the skirt. She carried a bouquet of bride's roses and lilies of the valley. The maid of honor wore a frock of French blue crepe trimmed with peach-toned taffeta. Her flowers were tallman roses and baby's breath.

The wedding took place in the living room before an improvised altar of palms and ferns with tall standards of white summer flowers at each side.

COURT ASKED TO CONSTRUCT FRANK H. GERHART'S WILL

Mrs. Estella M. Gerhart filed suit in Circuit Court yesterday to construe the will of her husband, Frank H. Gerhart, realty dealer, who died in December, 1932. Under the will Mr. Gerhart bequeathed to his widow all of the capital stock of the Flannery Realty Co., which held title to their residence at 4900 Lindell boulevard, as well as giving her the income from one-half of the residue of the estate, which was left in trust.

However, Mrs. Gerhart renounced the will, preferring to take a widow's dower interest without any restriction. The object of the suit is to ascertain whether the trustees have the right to convey to Mrs. Gerhart title to the residence property. Luke E. Hart, represents Mrs. Gerhart. She, Charles B. Gerhart and Marion C. Early were named in the will as trustees of the estate, value of which was estimated at $400,000.

What the Summer's Drouth Did to Rural Missouri

H. H. Frieberger of Jeffriesburg dipping water from a pond for his six cows, 10 hogs and two horses, as farmers all over the State had to do.

KEY TO MAP: 1, most severe drought damage; 2, severe; 3, bad; 4, least severe. Prepared by F. B. Mumford, dean and director of the College of Agriculture, University of Missouri. Dr. Mumford explains that in each area there are probably small localities where a different classification should be applied; the groupings are based on general averages.

Blasted pear tree at Versailles with falling leaves and fruit no larger than marbles

Post-Dispatch Staff Writer Tells of His Observations on 1000-Mile Drive Through Best of State's Agricultural Lands, and What Farmers Told Him of Their Losses and Sufferings Due to Weeks of Unprecedented and Withering Heat.

By F. A. BEHYMER,
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff.

WHEN summer was young the fields of Missouri were green with the promise of harvest to come—wheat and corn, oats and hay, and smaller crops. Gardens were growing and pastures were prime. Wheat's promise was fulfilled. Now that summer is old, the fields that were green with corn, oats and hay are brown, burned by the sun and withered by the hot wind. Pastures are blasted. Cattle are being driven to slaughter. Gardens are gone. Farmers face a winter of want.

The story of Missouri's worst drought is told in the reports compiled by E. A. Logan, senior agricultural statistician, United States Bureau of Agricultural Economics, at Columbia, and summarized by Dean F. B. Mumford of the College of Agriculture at the State University. It is revealed in stark reality to one who visits the stricken scene and listens to the tales that the farmers have to tell, farmers of 34 counties visited in my tour of a thousand miles.

Daily Water Haul.

H. H. Frieberger stands in his wagon backed into a pond beside the highway of Jeffriesburg in Franklin County and dips water and pours it into barrels for his six cows, 10 hogs and two horses, and he says most of his neighbors also are hauling water.

W. M. Satebier of Boone Township and his neighbors would be glad if they had such a pond. "Cisterns, ponds and creeks are all dry," he says, "and everything is burned up." J. J. Hauck of Jeffriesburg expected a big pear crop. The trees were full of young fruit and there would have been a perfect yield, but the drought came and the fruit shriveled and the leaves are falling off and the trees may die.

G. H. Grob of Gerald looks ruefully at the burnt tops of his early corn and his twisted and fallen late corn and says: "We must bale our wheat straw to save our cattle, for we may need it in the future as the pioneers did."

Acres of dying scrub oak beyond Linn. Across the Missouri River from Jefferson City, in the Kingdom of Callaway, lie the rich bottom acres of the State prison farm, scientifically farmed, but the fields of corn are more completely destroyed than those of farm renters roundabout. Across Cedar Creek a farmer is cutting his and shocking it to salvage what he can.

Jeff Carter of Hartsburg, Boone County, sitting in the shade, watching his cows and horses munch the leaves of an elm tree cut down for their convenience, finds some satisfaction in the fact that old-fashioned farming has fared better than the fancy farming on the State farm. "It's a case of too much science," he says. "They put too much lime in the soil and when the drought came their corn burned up faster than ours." Carter says it is the worst drought in its effects that he has ever seen. True it was just as dry in 1901, but the hot winds did the damage this time. The ground just popped open.

Tree Tops for Feed.

At that he raised "right smart 'taters" and had some pretty good corn, late planted, that didn't fire. He has some straw and hay put by for the winter, but now he is feeding tree tops to save straw and hay. That elm was cut down at 9 o'clock this morning and the top is pretty well cleared of leaves. The stock likes elm and white oak and redbud and dogwood and sassafras and mulberry and ash, but they won't eat white oak and black walnut and pawpaw and 'simmons. These tastes in leaves he has observed and he passes the information along to other feeders of tree tops.

Between Columbia and Boonville scorched pastures . . . stunted upland corn not fit to cut . . . Some along Bonne Femme Creek being shocked . . . Nothing green except alfalfa and weeds.

West of Boonville a wayside oasis where water is pumped from A. L. Phillips' well, 347 feet deep, serving wayfarers and neighbors, for James Drennan, up the road, is the only farmer thereabouts who has had enough of his own. The rest have been getting their drinking water from Phillips' well and hauling stock water from fire hydrants at Boonville, some of them hauling it six or seven miles. Austin Drennan, nearby, had a pond and a cistern but they both went dry and he has been hauling water from town in a buggy bed on Ford wheels, one barrel capacity, making three trips a day on hot days.

Southward on the gravel road that leads to Lake of the Ozarks, a sizeable grove with trees all dead . . . Dairy farms with windmills motionless and silos waiting to be filled and nothing much to put in them . . . Soy beans and cow peas stunted and wilted . . . Great fields of withered corn in Moreau River Valley . . . Herefords and sheep pasturing on alfalfa that would have made another crop. . . . Shriveled field of cow peas with ribbon of green marking the course of a wash where moisture has lingered.

Shriveled Fruits.

South of Versailles orchards or shriveled fruit . . . Winding road through Osark hills, still green except for an occasional dying tree . . . Stray cows trying to get a living out of the sparse undergrowth . . . Nothing plentiful except trees and signboards nailed to trees.

Along the by-road to Ha-Ha-Tonka W. A. Foster drives his herd of 50 to water after a half day's browsing on blue stem and pea vine in the timber, for all his blue grass and hay have been burned up.

When the Rev. Max Barnes was sent to preach at the New Linn Creek Methodist Church, he said he would get along without the missionary help that the church had been receiving. He would have a herd of Jerseys and sell milk to the summer hotels, and supplement his meager salary in that way. Now he has a herd of 14 on pasture at the edge of the new town, but the cows have to be driven to the parsonage well for water.

Between Linn Creek and Eldon many trees dying . . . Pear trees with fruit like marbles and a few leaves left.

Ten miles south of Sedalia an orchard of dead apple trees. Nearly everything else is dead or dying in Pettis County, says D. H. Bobbitt of Scout Springs: "Absolutely the prospect is the poorest I have ever witnessed. Nothing is left but scattering patches of soy beans and cow peas. Corn in the creek bottoms is gone, the same as on the high ground. There will be no corn wagons in the fields this fall. Nothing there to gather. We may have a few soy beans."

When Wells Went Dry.

A. Wetherill of Holden, Johnson County, had four wells and two springs and deemed himself safe from any drought that might befall, even though he had 130 head of stock. Two months ago all the wells and both springs went dry at about the same time. They had never failed before. For a while he hauled water from another well on a town lot that he owned. Then that went dry.

Then the city sank a well and he hauled from that, until it failed. Now he is hauling from Davis spring, five miles away, in a 10-barrel tank, 20 to 30 barrels a day. His pastures dried up after the wells and springs went dry. He turned his cattle into his oats fields and then into the corn fields. If rains came he would sow barley for fall pasture. Fifteen or 20 farmers were hauling from Davis spring. They all had to dip the water out of the spring with buckets.

North of Sedalia a grove of maples, all dead . . . Herds in wheat stubble and one in an oats field, burned a golden brown . . . Big field of corn in Blackwater Creek bottoms, but all ruined by the drought . . . Two girls carrying five pails of water from a neighbor's well. A man pouring water from a jug into a trough for his cow.

P. E. Deibel of Miami, Saline County, is looking beyond the present problem to what may be a greater one after the winter has passed. "The big problem for Saline County farmers," he says, "is what they are going to feed their work stock next year to produce a crop, providing they can manage to take them through the winter. Not one farmer in 10 will have a bushel of corn, no oats and no hay. It is something to think about."

M. C. Snyder of Marshall, Saline County, shares Deibel's perplexity. "The corn crop in this county is a complete failure," he says. "I went through my corn yesterday and failed to find one single ear or shoot. It won't even make fodder. There is no pasture what-ever."

John C. Matheny, also of Marshall, adds that the drought is the worst ever experienced in the county. Many trees, especially elm, maple and hickory, are dying and wells and springs are failing.

Tobacco Cured on Stems.

Fears for next year's feed seem well grounded, for a little way out of Marshall is a corn field with weeds higher than the corn, only a stalk showing here and there . . . Over the field a flock of blackbirds, raven symbols of the farmers' despair . . . An apple orchard with fine foliage but shriveled fruit . . . A field of tobacco, the first seen in three days' driving—cured on the stem . . . At a tourist camp a man pushing a lawn mower and eyeing a cloud that promises rain . . . Across the Missouri River, beyond Waverly, acres of watermelons, looking fairly good and wayside stands for selling . . . Horse in barren pasture eating straw . . . One breasting the barbed wire to nip sparse roadside grass.

North of Carrollton a herd of Herefords waiting at the fence for the water wagon. Robert Baker of Hale, Carroll County, has 40 hogs and four horses and since his three wells went dry keeps one man busy hauling water three miles, 30 barrels a day, from the Wilcoxon farm, where there is "sheet water." His neighbor, Hugh Wells, hauls eight miles from Grand River, using a tank trailer. Grove of hickory trees dying.

W. D. Steele, south of Chillicothe, always depended upon Shoal Creek and ponds for the herds on his 240 acres. The creek and ponds went dry two months ago, leaving him with 250 head of stock to water somehow. He asked the geologists at the State University what to do and they told him to dig for water in Bowen's slough. He bored and struck water at 32 feet.

No Wild Flowers Anywhere.

Toward Cameron barren fields and trees stripped of leaves . . . Bear Lake gone dry.

Around Bethany dry ponds with baked and cracked bottoms . . . Cow peas perking up after a shower . . . Big Creek with a little water in it . . . Corn stunted but green . . . Bottoms along Weldon Fork of Grand River, at edge of Princeton, quite green . . . Calves bawling in pens at Princeton, on their way to the slaughter houses . . . Snow-on-the-mountain blooming in every yard . . . No other flowers in any yard . . . Baby's breath in the fields . . . no other wild flowers . . . Farmer repairing his windmill, for it will rain some day.

As for conditions in Harrison County, N. B. Harrison of Bethany speaking: "Corn, except in a few isolated cases, can make no grain. Must have rain to make fodder. Farmers are hoping to carry cattle through on corn fodder. Hogs must be sacrificed. If we don't get rain we are sunk."

In Mercer County, says J. Vernon Neill of Princeton, pastures are dried up, there is very little hay, corn has been burned up by hot winds and sun, soy beans are dying, all small streams have been dry for six or eight weeks and Weldon River has stopped running for the first time in 60 years. John C. Lewis of Newton says every farmer who has brush on his place is cutting it for the cattle.

East of Brookfield, in Linn County, extensive blighting of trees and F. E. Stevenson of Clay Township says the farmers around there are cutting the corn with mowers and raking it with sulky rakes.

Not Discouraged.

East of Clarence, Shelby County, large fields of soy beans looking fine after a rain, but Homer Garrison of Township 59 says corn in the county won't average a bushel to the acre and the farmers are giving pigs away or selling them for 10 or 15 cents apiece if they can. Julian A. Wheeler of Hannawell says it is the worst outlook he has seen in 60 years. Talk about corn making ears, it won't even make fodder. As a forlorn hope he is saving an acre of turnips.

But are the farmers downhearted? They are not. They are good losers. If the farmers were downhearted, they couldn't be

Mussolini Fears for Survival of White Race Unless Decline of Birth Rate Is Checked

By BENITO MUSSOLINI,

ROME, Aug. 25.

WHEN, in 1926, I proclaimed in an address the first cry of alarm on the demographic decadence of the white race, a decadence which has not spared, as it is still not sparing, the Italian nation, some considered the warning either ill-timed or exaggerated.

Eight years have passed in which the fatal decline has continued; indeed, it has even increased, and, behold, cries of alarm arise in all parts of the world.

In Hungary, they are lamenting the prevalent custom of a family with one child. In the Argentine Republic, 10 times as big as Italy and where from 80,000,000 to 100,000,000 people could comfortably live, a falling birthrate is annihilating the excess of births over deaths so that it is predicted that by 1939 the population will be stationary at 12,000,000 inhabitants who will become 12,000,000 old men and women.

Equally dramatic is the appeal which 20 important personages in French politics, science, and art have addressed to the people in order to put them face to face with the destiny which awaits them.

"The number of births," says the manifesto, "has diminished in France by 40,000 units. From 1932 to 1933 it has fallen to 682,000, whilst before 1870 it was more than 1,000,000."

The Future Pictured.

"Tomorrow a considerable decrease in the number of marriages will be evident—the inevitable consequence of our falling birth rate of the past and, in particular, that of wartime."

"On account of this one fact, we will soon find ourselves with a diminution of over 30,000 births per year. Besides, if the fecundity of young French couples continues to diminish with the average rhythm of the last six years, it is mathematically certain that France will not have over 550,000 births within the next 10 years."

"The number of deaths at that time will be far superior to births. Already depopulation has impoverished many departments where villages perish and farm houses are falling in ruins."

"To allow the falling birth rate to fall still lower, to extend to all the land, would signify an admission that the French people have become a people of old men. It would condemn France to progressive weakness."

"Following depopulation, agriculture, commerce, and industry will decline still more for want of consumers. The State will become insolvent for want of taxpayers and the country will be incapable of defending itself against younger peoples, for want of defenders.

National Life at Stake.

"These dangers are not distant, but imminent, and the present generations are those which find themselves threatened by the falling birth rate, in their goods and even their own life, by the prospects of ruin and wars which the phenomenon opens before their eyes."

"There is not an hour to lose in seeking remedies. Other nations have shown us the way: Germany and Italy, even though they still have a yearly excess of births of 250,000 to 400,000 respectively, have already undertaken an energetic fight against a falling birth rate."

"Other measures of a moral and material nature which Germany and Italy have adopted have proved to be efficacious and, at the present moment, the number of births is increasing. Under pain of death, France must follow their example."

The manifesto carries the signatures of two former Presidents of the republic, Raymond Poincare and Alexandre Millerand, of Edouard Herriot, Cardinal Verdier, and the late Marshal Foch.

"In due time," this appeal was followed by another, published by the National Alliance for increase of the French population. It said:

"The number of births in France has diminished by a third in the last 50 years. This number was 1,340,000 in 1868, and 722,000 in 1932. Today the fall is precipitous."

More Elders, Fewer Children.

"If this rhythm should continue, there will not even be 500,000 births per annum in 10 years. France will lose 150,000 to 200,000 inhabitants every year. The aging of the population is the most grave factor. France already possesses the greatest proportion of old men of any other nation, 14 per cent, as against 9 per cent for Germany, and 7 per cent for Russia."

"Now the reduction of mortality cannot compensate that of the birth rate. France possesses today 38,000,000 Frenchmen, as in 1870, but their distribution is not the same. There are far more old men and far less children. Germany, instead, overflows with children, and Italy has 4,000,000 more than France."

"The practical consequences of the falling French birth rate are then reviewed. Accord-

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

More About Genius and Discovery.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
In answer to Scientia P. E.—It looks as if I am going to have to find a hole in one of these cliffs here in the Ozarks, nevertheless I still maintain that Dr. Wiggam was wrong. The compiled data in support of Dr. Wiggam's statement that "discoveries are due to co-operative achievement rather than genius" tends to conceal the truth that discoveries are made by men of genius because they have a keener insight into things than the majority. From the facts given in Scientia's letter, a period of 200 years of research brought forth insulin, but from the standpoint of Dr. Logan Clendenen, in his book, "Behind the Doctor," Dr. Banting nursed the idea, had faith in it and kept it burning until he made the discovery with which he was accredited.

The same can be said of Pasteur. Other researchers preceded him, but his insight was keener than theirs. Pasteur was a chemist long before he became known as a bacteriologist. He may have had the phenomenon of sterilization presented to him through lectures or the papers of other workers, but he made one discovery which others did not make, and that was that two forms of tartaric acid existed in two different crystal structures; that is the part of the discovery that is attributed to his genius.

In the same way today, our scientists tell us what exists, and the why of some and the puzzles of others, but it is only the genius that solves the puzzles, for he has the step into the unknown to find the known, or to perceive some interrelationship no one else has perceived. Scientific achievement may be co-operative in part, but it is genius that achieves. MALCOLM E. RUPP.

Predicting the End of the World.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
If Jesus of Nazareth, in His own words, disclaimed any specific knowledge as to when the world will come to an end, how in the name of ordinary intelligence can any lesser, finite, mortal entity acquire that important information?

The Founder of Christianity said: "Heaven and earth shall pass away, but My words shall not pass away. But of that day and hour knoweth no man, no, not the angels of heaven, but My Father only."—Matt. 24:35, 36.

According to Holy Writ, anyone who fatuously presumes to know when the world will cease to be, automatically places himself in the category of false prophets and religious charlatans. CHARLES COLLETON.

In Reply to Mr. Crow.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
I CANNOT let P. A. Crow's letter in the Aug. 18 Post-Dispatch, entitled "Defends Increase in Bread Prices," go unanswered.

Mr. Crow says the price of flour is not an important item in bread prices. The Consumer's Guide, published by the AAA, states that in July, 1916, wheat averaged $1 a bushel and bread sold at an average of 7 cents a pound. In November, 1931, wheat averaged 50 cents a bushel, and the average price for one-pound loaves of bread was 7.5 cents. Stuart Chase, in his book, "The Economy of Abundance," on page 169 in a footnote comments on this by saying: "The difference was not all profit to the bakers. Most of it, we may be sure, was overhead, distribution and ballyhoo." If you see there are places to reduce cost besides cutting the wage of the "working baker." M. C. CREW.

A Way Out Suggested.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
In answer to "Goose Eggs" queries, on Aug. 11, I suggest that the good-government Democrats and Republicans, as anti-machine voters, have the best chance ever to beat bossism, and without contradicting themselves.

I earnestly believe, if all the voters of Missouri who are dissatisfied with either Truman or Patterson vote for the Socialist candidate for Senator then the Socialist will win; if he fails, our protest is in and we will not have contradicted ourselves. Therefore, I offer this slogan: "Protest and beat bossism by voting for the Socialist candidate for Senator."

Taxing Non-Resident Workers.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
In regard to the bill to be brought before your Board of Aldermen, proposing a tax on each employer of $25 a year for each non-resident employee:

Suppose it passes. Is it entirely impossible that the rural communities of Missouri, Arkansas, Illinois and Iowa, which have sent so many of their best people into St. Louis, may not be very resentful, and retaliate by a boycott of St. Louis manufactured goods and of jobbers and wholesalers in St. Louis?

Besides being unconstitutional and unprecedented, such an ordinance, through incurring the ill will of the people in the St. Louis trade area, will cost your city many millions of dollars a year in loss of business. E. V. BLOCKMAN.

THE ASSAULT ON CIVIL LIBERTIES.

The grand old man of American constitutional law, Oliver Wendell Holmes, has broken the silence he imposed upon himself when he stepped down from the United States Supreme Court two years ago. Stirred by vigilante tactics against persons of racial thought, he has spoken out on a subject long close to his heart—civil liberties. Every part of the country needs to hear his words and reflect on them.

Hasty resentment and unreasonable rancor (he said in a telegram to the American Civil Liberties Union) may perhaps be expected of special groups, but when authorities surrender to those groups, adopt their rancor and resentment and tolerate their methods of reprisal, they abandon processes established by our history. Such an abandonment, in defying traditions, injures more than its victims.

Let us hope that this restrained yet forceful utterance by the much-loved dean of our jurists will have the sobering influence which is so sorely needed in the United States today. For although it may have been obscured by pressing domestic problems of an economic nature, the fact is that we are now witnessing a Red hunt the like of which the United States has not seen since the raids of A. Mitchell Palmer in the post-war years. North, south, east and west, men and women are being harassed, arrested and sent to jail for their political views. Liberties guaranteed by the Federal Constitution and in some form by the various state constitutions are being ignored in many places as if they did not exist.

In California, the scene of assaults on freedom which provoked former Justice Holmes to speak out, Red-baiting and hunting activities have had results ranging from the tragic to the comic. Homes have been broken into, persons have been locked up and others have been forced to take refuge in hiding. Local authorities, police, deputized citizens and organized vigilantes have joined in breaking up meetings and beating victims. In Los Angeles, efforts are being made to bar the Communist party from a place on the ticket. In Hollywood, several members of the moving picture colony have been linked with Communism, although it is highly doubtful if some of them know the meaning of the term.

The repressions in certain communities in nearby Illinois have been discussed in our news and editorial columns for some time. Despite efforts to have them released on reasonable bond, men are still in the Montgomery County Jail at Hillsboro, charged with violating Illinois' so-called anti-treason code, enacted during the post-war hysteria. Not only has the grand jury indicted the 11 men first arrested, but it has named four others as well, one of them being a former University of Illinois student, whose chief offense seems to have been that he called attention to the constitutional guarantees of freedom of speech and the right to assemble. Similar arrests have been made at Edwardsville. In towns too numerous to mention, meetings have been prohibited. Nominis broke into print by virtue of its band of self-appointed regulators of the community's thinking.

Commander Hayes of the American Legion has found "radical teachings" spreading in colleges, churches, social organizations and "even in Government circles." In Indiana, Georgia and elsewhere, the Ku Klux Klan is raising its head again, with the profession that it is out to rid the nation of "the stream of alien radical propaganda, which, if not stopped at once, will eat into the very heart of our Government." At Atlantic City recently, the Order of Elks heard its new leader declare that "the time has arrived in America when the issue is between the Stars and Stripes and the red flag."

In New York, the Legislature has, for a second time, passed a bill to require teachers to take oaths of allegiance to the Federal and State constitutions. Only last week, the American Federation of Labor opened a campaign to oust all members who are also adherents of the Communist party. In short, to control the political views of its members. Resolutions proposed for a meeting of Pacific Coast Legionnaires censured Secretary of Labor Perkins for his "inactivity" against Communists, advocated transfer of deportation authority from the Department of Labor and urged the death penalty for "insurrection"—"any combined resistance to the lawful authority"—obviously, a definition subject to almost any interpretation which local authorities might care to give it. Hardly a day passes without report of a Red hunt or activity of some kind against persons who have, or are thought to have, so-called radical views.

We yield to no one in our faith in the American system of government. We are no more anxious than the American Legion or the Daughters of the American Revolution to see Communist sentiment spread in this country. But the distinction which we make is the one which all persons with historical perspective must make. A way of thinking cannot be downed by beating heads. Local authorities only swell ranks they would depress when they make martyrs out of Communists. What they should do is treat peace disturbances as such, with prompt trials and, if justified, suitable, not fantastic, punishment.

The spread of the kind of radicalism against which the patriotic societies have taken up arms—an analysis prepared for Fortune magazine says there are 26,000 Communists and 500,000 "sympathizers" in the United States—is an effect, not a cause. Were economic conditions what they should be in this country, there would not be enough active Communists to notice. If men are out of work and hungry, the thing to do is to provide them with employment and an opportunity to feed their families. Brutalizing their bodies and placing them behind bars because they protest against the plight in which they find themselves will only make matters worse. The Fraternal Order of Eagles took the right course when its Cincinnati convention resolved against Communism as a way of life, but pledged to work for the improvement of the less privileged ranks of society.

When the young men whom we commonly speak of as the Founding Fathers finished the American Constitution, they realized they had made a serious omission. To correct it, the first 10 amendments—the Bill of Rights—were framed and adopted. Those who want the American Government to endure will respect the liberties which these amendments guarantee. Those who either do not or are misguided will flout them in the fashion of Hitler and Mussolini.

DIVINE RULERS OF THE ORIENT.

No matter how democratic or how ineffective monarchs in the Western world may become, it is still true in the Orient that "divinity doth hedge a King." A reminder of this comes in the sacred status now assumed by Henry Pu-yi, lately a Chinese refugee in Japan; but last March enthroned as the Nipponese puppet ruler over Manchukuo, as Emperor Kung-tah. The Government of Manchukuo (formerly Manchuria) has decided to revert to the days when Emperors were awesome figures, whose names the populace was forbidden to utter or print. Hence, the new edict making it illegal to identify the present anointed otherwise than as His Majesty.

Henry Pu-yi thus retires into majestic anonymity like that of Hirohito, who is Son of Heaven or His Majesty, to the Japanese. When China had Emperors, their surnames were similarly taboo. The present Japanese Emperor has ended the prohibition against publication of his portrait, but subjects still are forbidden to view a royal progress from upper-story windows, for they would then be committing lese majesty by looking down upon the Emperor. Democrats miss a great deal of thrilling and decorative ceremonial, but they also avoid a lot of nonsense.

GEN. JOHNSON'S BITTER CUP.

Gen. Hugh Johnson now knows what it is to eat humble pie. He knows what it is to swallow his own medicine. One might even go so far as to say that the General knows what it is to be hoist by his own petard. Indeed, we should not be surprised to see the ex-cavalry officer stand up in his stirrups and crack down on Shakespeare.

We now arrive at the Johnson-Donovan imbroglio. Johnson fired Donovan. He refused to be fired and appealed to the National Labor Relations Board. The board told Johnson he would have to reinstate Donovan. The referee naturally held up Donovan's hand in the customary token of victory.

How does the Bard of Avon get entangled in the affair? What did he ever do to provoke the Johnsonian tirade? He implied there was nothing in a name. But Donovan's name is John L., which, after all the years, is somehow a patent of invincibility. Not that the original John L. would have referred a disputed item to a board, or council, or tribunal. He was a direct-actionist. But the tradition of victory, however the methodology has changed, seemingly still clings to the name.

The experience seems to have been instructive to Gen. Johnson. He is not one of your Tennysonian slugs to whom "knowledge comes but wisdom lingers." Wisdom prances right along with knowledge in his case. Thus we read that he has offered an NRA job to that Connecticut squire, Gene Tunney, whose presence in the General's corner may well be reassuring as the battle of recovery rages.

TOO GOOD TO BE TRUE.

The Hindenburg will, if there really is such an instrument, has served its primary purpose. As a campaign document for home consumption, designed to present Hitler as the chosen heir, in an aura of divine right, it was providentially timely. Without it, would there have been a larger protest vote than the inexplicable 10 per cent? Let the guessers guess.

The secondary purpose, obviously, was to impress world opinion. In that it has, for the most part, jocosely failed, France, to be sure, takes it seriously. At first stunned, French reaction, when it recovered its breath, shouted, "Spurious!" Now they are charging forgery, asserting on what they cite as reliable information that the old warrior named the former Kaiser as his successor, with Von Papen designated as Chancellor.

Such a legacy would at least have been in character. Monarchist born and bred, attached to the house of Hohenzollern with the intensity of religious worship, it taxes credulity severely to imagine Von Hindenburg bequeathing the destiny of the Fatherland into the keeping of a person whom not long ago he would not deign to meet. Indeed, it overtaxes credulity. France aside, the world verdict on the Hindenburg will is that it is too good to be true. Is such cynicism warranted? Is Hitler so devoid of scruples that he would involve the patron saint of a mourning nation in a conspiracy of deception to further his own fortunes?

Call Adolf Hitler himself to the stand. The summons must be what the lawyers call a subpoena duces tecum. The witness must bring his book, "Mein Kampf"—not the deleted twelfth edition, but the unexpurgated text. Here he has written:

The German has not the slightest notion of how a people must be misled if the adherence of the masses is sought.

Again:
To win the sympathy of the broad masses, you must tell them the crudest and most stupid things.

Such was Hitler philosophy in 1924. Politically, he has advanced in those 10 years from a ragged historical rebel to a dynamic figure, a Colossus bestriding Germany, preaching words of good will and performing deeds of cruelty and terrorism to shock mankind.

Can moral or ethical progress be accredited to him? Is it not fair to assume that today he would use any means to mislead the masses, as he frankly diagrammed 10 years ago—even to the extent of a counterfeit Hindenburg will?

PWA.

Federal agents are charging that PWA, in the campaign of Judge Harry S. Truman for the Democratic senatorial nomination, meant Pendergast Wants Action. Anyway, he got it.

RECIPE FOR RAINFALL.

Production of rain by artificial means is a vain hope, scientific authorities have agreed, after studying and seeing tests of many such devices. But, while rain cannot be ordered for immediate delivery, man can take steps to insure more precipitation for the future. The formula for such rain-making is given in a bulletin of the American Geographical Association, based on reports by biologists and meteorologists. It is excessive drainage that has dried the earth in the present drought area, they assert, so that normal evaporation and precipitation are impossible. The task, then, is to restore the former natural conditions, by reforestation, curbing erosion, planting crops that bind the soil, creating new bodies of water. The report urges:

Restore as many drained areas as possible and create new water areas. This brings back the stored surface water, gives the sun a chance to draw water, the heat a chance to condense it and precipitate it in renewed rainfall. By spotting the country thickly with lakes, ponds, sloughs and other water-holding areas, a large degree of control can be had over rainfall. Build dams on creeks, non-navigable rivers, draws; scoop out low depressions and make ponds. These will aid in bringing about control of rainfall.

Such steps, the scientists give assurance, will amount to virtual long-range control of the weather. Exploitation of our natural resources is found guilty of a major share in the present drought damage. Restoration of what has been destroyed is a logical step in modifying the severity of nature's vagaries.

"Of Making Many Books"

JOHN G. NEIHARDT

TOM TIDDLER'S GROUND. By Edward Shanks. (Bobbs-Merrill Co., Indianapolis.)

THE title and theme of this latest novel by the author of "Queen Street" and "The Enchanted Village" are taken from a song sung in union by the players of an old English game:

"Here we are on Tom Tiddler's Ground, Picking up gold and silver."

The story is that of one Tom Florey, son of a Welsh innkeeper, who, by virtue of exceptional gifts, rises from the sordid environment of his birth and boyhood to a promising position in the great world of London; but is diverted from the straight path of self-fulfillment by the lure of easy money and an inherent weakness for self-indulgence, and so dies a mediocrity, not unmourned, however, by a goodly group of friends.

It is not the purpose of the author to indulge in homiletics; but the reader, with a leaning toward moral philosophy, may go as far as he likes with the material that is offered with the unsentimentalness of life itself. Such a reader might fortify his wavering sense of superiority by noting the fatal points of Tom's divergence, even coming a bright new verb expressive of Tom's error: "If you want to get somewhere, there is no time for stopping to tom-tiddle by the way!" That is to say, know what you really want the most, keep after it unwaveringly, and don't let lesser lures divert you.

But, after all, when the long story closes with the early death of our rather unheroic hero, to many readers, as to this one, it may seem that there may be something wrong about that moral thesis. For Tom was Tom, and being so, fulfilled himself as Tom. His weaknesses, if such they were, belonged to him as much as did his strength, and having left good friends and love behind him, perhaps he wasn't "unfulfilled." Also, the commonly assumed desirability of "getting somewhere," of achieving great importance in the eyes of men not inconceivably as foolish as ourselves, may have its doubtful features.

What matters in this novel, and what sets it well above the common run of novels, is the full-flowing picture of human life as men and women live it, the unobtrusive wisdom and the sympathetic warmth with which the characters are realized, the cumulative revelation of our common human nature. Nothing very startling ever quite manages to happen; but none the less the story grips by virtue of the reader's interest in his kind.

Th. boy Tom's life, in the dull little Welsh village that has seen its best days, is far from dull for the reader. The wonder of life newly experienced is there; and when did sordid surroundings ever quite destroy the early morning magic of young dreams and loves?

Tom's school life ends when his father and mother, fearing to make the boy "too good" for them and the life of the inn, refuse to let him try for an Oxford scholarship. But by happy chance, he is given the opportunity to serve as English teacher to the young son of the great German playwright and poet, Dr. Albrecht Robel, a winner of the Nobel Prize. Thus he is introduced into the life of a whole household of varied characters, including, beside the distinguished doctor, who is something of an august and benevolent monarch in his little realm, the deep-hearted American girl, Undine, with her boyish manner, and the vamping secretary, Lili Melnigier.

These two furnish the erotic element, which is handled with a sense of humor not altogether common among novelists of the day. Tom and Undine fall in love most charmingly, and it begins to look like wedding bells for them, when Lili, quite as charmingly, begins the brewing of her Lili magic. There comes a morning when the whole household is agog with the household's story of an astonishing discovery. Who else, indeed, but Lili, wore black hairpins in that household?

And so, of course, Tom must go, as the Herr Doctor is forced to insist, not without libations of his best wines poured for the culprit, and with rather more than a hint of that "gemustelichkeit" that made him lovable. The Doctor had been young.

And so Tom begins a new life in London, becoming secretary to a prominent politician; and he is decidedly on the way up to where his brilliant gifts entitle him to be when the war breaks out. But this is not a "war book." The great slaughter, however, affects the life of Tom in vital ways. The chance for easy money lures him from the path of his ascent. In a fit of sentimentality, he marries an artist's model, Isabel, the fiancée of Tom's close friend, slain in Belgium.

The venture flounders out; and once again, after the armistice, Tom turns up at Dr. Robel's Schloss in Germany, this time as a victor. All the old characters are there, save the seductive Lili; and Undine, on a visit too, seems destined at the last to capture Tom. But there is a drinking party of old friends back together once again after the four-year madness of the world, and Tom's whole heart was never strong, dies as a result.

That's all—Tom just dies, undoubtedly a Tiddler still. And to think that he could have been a member of Parliament, maybe! Not much of an achievement for our mortal to contemplate!

But somehow, along with all his other friends, the reader rather likes him.

THE WOMAN AND THE SEA. By Concha Espina. (Ray D. Henkle, New York.)

CONCHA ESPINA is regarded as the most distinguished woman novelist in Spain. Thus far, only three of her works have been translated into English, the two others being "Marilior" and "The Red Beacon."

One outstanding American critic has declared that her work "must be measured by that of Hardy and Hamans in dealing with characters close to the soil." Another has found "a Homeric flavor" in her novels. Still another regards her as "a worthy successor of Mme. Curie, Selma Lagerlof and the Baroness Bertha von Suttner."

"The Woman and the Sea" said to be one of her best novels, seems hardly to justify such enthusiasm, however her many other works may. It is the story of one Regina de Alcantara, a sort of "feminine Hamlet," who wanders about the world with her wealthy father, an eccentric poet, Regina, "cruel, selfish, heartless, beautiful, alluring," plays havoc with the lives of men; but as the story closes, she is in process of being reformed by motherhood.

The tale has struck one reader as cruelly boring, seeming dull to move in an atmosphere of unreality and jejune sentimentality.

PALESTINE: THE LAST TWO THOUSAND YEARS. By Jacob de Haas. (The Macmillan Co., New York City.)

THIS reviewer, having spent many profitable hours over a period of weeks with this volume of 500 closely printed pages, chooses not to "review" it at all, but to remain the humble reader who recommends it with enthusiasm to those who may care for a magnificent human story told in a masterly manner.

Some might suppose that a history of Palestine from the year 55 B. C. to the end of the World War would of necessity be a dry-as-dust affair, but, granting a normally intelligent interest in the human past and a moderate power of sustained attention, this story should make all the very greatest novels seem dull and trifling by comparison. It is said that the work is based very largely upon original research during 22 years, and that the author has consulted no less than 2500 volumes, in many different languages, bearing upon his subject. Also, he has made a careful study of the country in which his great story moves, having ridden over Palestine and Syria on horseback for that purpose.

Although the amount of material presented in a carefully clarified form is itself astonishing, it is clear that vastly more was rejected in building the book. And truly the book is built, has architectural form.

It would be difficult to think of a good reason why Jacob de Haas' "Palestine" should not take a place among the shorter masterpieces of historical literature.

HINDENBURG

The Man With Three Lives

By T. R. YBARRA

FIFTEENTH INSTALLMENT.
SOON after the inception of ruthless submarine warfare, Hindenburg had moved his general headquarters from Pless, in Silesia, near Germany's eastern front, to Kreuznach, in the Rhineland, not many miles behind the Western front. This amounted to final confession by the victor of Tannenberg that henceforth the front in France and Belgium, not that in the East (the scene of his spectacular victory) was to be the principal theater of war.

At Kreuznach, Hindenburg settled down to a life similar to that at Pless. Though he had achieved nothing so spectacular as Tannenberg, in the two years and more than had elapsed since that battle he was still, to the majority of his fellow-countrymen, the demigod, the avenging Wotan. Gone, to be sure, was the first splendid elation after Tannenberg; gone the arrogant confidence which it had inspired. But few Germans, as yet, were inclined to place the blame for what had happened on Hindenburg. The Hindenburg legend still stood.

At Kreuznach, as at Pless and in the first months after Tannenberg, letters in long hisms continued to pour in on Hindenburg. People wrote him for the most varied and trivial reasons. And now as then, he was sometimes driven to exasperation by the nature of some of the communications which tumbled out of the morning's mail.

My Little Sentry.

But his iron nerves helped him keep his temper; nor could any annoyance shake for long his massive good humor. Especially toward children he would, no matter what the war emergency besetting him, melt to tenderness and camaraderie. At Kreuznach, he was in the habit of walking daily along a certain street, accompanied by an aide-de-camp. Before the doorway of a house on this street a little boy used to stand rigidly at attention, like a real grown-up sentry, every time that Hindenburg passed, and present arms with a toy musket. Invariably the Commander-in-Chief of Germany's armies gratefully acknowledged the salute.

One day the boy's father presented to his son a new toy—the headgear of a German Uhlans. With immense pride, the boy donned it and stood awaiting Hindenburg, at the hour of the old General's daily walk. Hindenburg stopped at the corner. The little sentry presented arms. Instead of acknowledging the salute and passing on, Hindenburg stopped. Then he strode toward the boy.

"That is wrong!" he said. "You are now a cavalryman. Cavalrymen salute differently. Here, I will show you." Before the astonished eyes of his aide, he solemnly went through the movements prescribed by the German military manual. "There! Now do it right next time!" And off strode Germany's gigantic chief. After that, the little fellow made no mistakes. Every day Hindenburg returned his salute with a grunt of satisfaction. Within a few weeks of the lesson, the boy received a photograph of the old General, across which, in the bold scrawl which all Germans knew, was written: "To my little sentry, Hindenburg."

A Touch of Comedy.

On Oct. 7, 1917, Hindenburg celebrated his seventieth birthday at Kreuznach. The Kaiser was present and made a particularly pointed being gracious, to the enormous satisfaction of the old Prussian General, in whose eyes Wilhelm Hohenzollern was still the most illustrious of his subjects. Herr (all-highest master), incapable of doing wrong, one to whom loyalty must be shown naturally and unreservedly.

After the close of the celebration came a touch of comedy. For some reason a rumor had spread among the garrison that Allied airmen would seek to join in the festivities by dropping bombs on Kreuznach. Under the influence of the rumor, the crews of some anti-aircraft gun crews began lively firing at midnight against imaginary flying foes. So many were their shots that they soon ran out of ammunition, to the great joy of the hero of the Birthday, who promptly turned over and went to sleep again.

Next day the Kaiser showed Hindenburg a fragment of an anti-aircraft missile, which he had picked up in the garden outside his room. "So we were in some danger, after all!" grunted Hindenburg.

Later in the day he had more occasion for amusement. He learned that the townsfolk of Kreuznach, instead of falling into a panic at the sound of the midnight gun-fire, had simply assumed it to be a climax to the Hindenburg birthday festivities!

Amazing Memory.

Hindenburg frequently gave proof of an astonishing memory for faces. Once, in 1918, at the height of his great battles on the eastern front, a young officer came to General Headquarters at Spa on some military errand and was invited to lunch with the old Marshal. Hindenburg strode into the dining-room; a member of his staff started to introduce the newcomer. "Bravely, Hindenburg interrupted: 'No need of it. We met at Pless.'"

Sure enough, the young officer had been a visitor at Pless, where Hindenburg's headquarters were there, a full two years before.

In conversation with members of his staff, the old commander, usually a man of few words, was wont to become almost loquacious.

At times he would comment, sometimes humorously, sometimes seriously, on the legend which had wrapped itself around him, on the demigod-like eminence which he had attained among the Germans. It was all most unpalatable to him, since modesty was ever one of his salient traits, but he found a way to make it endurable.

"You see," he explained to his staff, "the Germans feel the necessity when they pay reverence to that which is heroic in the German nation, to pay it to something incarnated in the form of a soldier. Now, I am a soldier and they have happened to hit upon me as the object of their reverence. Only thus can I accept it."

Again, in an expansive after-dinner mood, he thus admonished the officers seated around him:

"Here is something which you should remember all through your military career: He who fails to act, must succumb. In war, there is only one alternative: either you must be a hammer, or you will be made into an anvil!"

Victory for Foch.

SOME time before New Year's day, 1918, it had become apparent even to those Germans whose most obstinate wish was not to see the obvious that the ruthless submarine campaign was going to fail. Again the tremendous task of winning a favorable decision for the Central Powers was up to Hindenburg.

The underlying object of Hindenburg and Ludendorff when confronting Samsonoff in 1914 had been the complete annihilation of the Russian General's army. Now, in 1918, however, the goal of annihilation of the enemy seemed to vanish from the new German strategy. Of course, Hindenburg and Ludendorff had learned that the western front was not the eastern; that the Russians, with all their bravery and endurance and overpowering numbers, were not the French and British. The problem of German reverses, also, was gone; bringing utter annihilation to the opposing armies which had breathed power and meaning into the plan preceding Tannenberg and brought legendary celebrity to the man who had sponsored it.

Yet, even allowing for these factors, the great German attacks of the spring of 1918 presented a strange formlessness. Time was on the side of the Allies. The Americans, thirsty for combat, were pouring into France. Why did Hindenburg and Ludendorff not bid for a Super-Tannenberg? The reason for their decision against it, in the light of preceding and subsequent reverses, was the mystery of the World War.

What were Hindenburg and Ludendorff seeking? Their drive, as it progressed, degenerated more and more into a brutal, frontal assault. No guiding strategic principle seemed to underlie it, least of all that avowed purpose of bringing utter annihilation to the opposing armies which had breathed power and meaning into the plan preceding Tannenberg and brought legendary celebrity to the man who had sponsored it.

Foch's Tactics.

Foch, appointed to the chief command of Hindenburg's opponents, was quick to realize this. His position at first was certainly nearly desperate, but he never despaired. Pulling together all his strength, he confined himself at first to stemming the enemy's advance; yet to the National Alliance, the falling French birth rate may have been the fundamental cause of the war of 1914 because Germany might have thought France was a dying nation.

Finally, the publication relates the disastrous consequences of a falling birth rate, first, from an economic viewpoint because it tends to reduce the number of consumers; then, from a financial standpoint, and finally as a social problem.

The importance of this French publication lies in the discovery that the 10,000,000 Frenchmen who were not born between 1870 and 1914, that fatal disproportion between the two masses of population on the one side and the other of the Rhine, was a demographic disproportion, the military adjustment of which required bitter strife between the two peoples of the world.

Even in Great Britain, the demographic decline is beginning to disturb minds profoundly. It is difficult to hold the empire when the metropolises ages and is dying. Malthus does not seem to be the fashion any more. Besides Malthus himself could not have believed excessively in his crazy over-catastrophic forecasts and the fact that he had 14 children shows it.

Lessons of the Past.

History demonstrates to what point demographic decadence leads nations. Polybius even speaks to us of sterile Greek cities, empty and an easy prey to Roman conquerors. Rome also began her decline when, with a decreased birth rate, she had to resort to mercenary troops. There was a time when, in order to secure men sufficiently tall for the imperial guard, she had to recruit the Batavi from Holland, who had been conquered by Julius Caesar.

The saddest side of the phenomenon is the aging of the population. Whilst in many parts of France schools are closing for want of pupils, other schools are frequented mainly by sons of foreigners, such as Italians, Poles and Spaniards.

The financial burden for this senile humanity increases from year to year. There are nations where an adolescent is 50 years old. If the phenomenon will not cease, it can be foreseen that France toward the end of this century will have a blows. First they fell at one point of the long front, then at another. As fast as German reserves, growing desperately scant, had plugged one hole, Foch tore open another, into which the same wearied and weakened reserves must be flung lest the hole grow fatally deep and wide.

And now, side by side with French and British, American divisions, multiplying uncannily, surged irresistibly forward. Vainly, amid the rigors of the Argonne, veterans, who had tasted victory at many places on the long fronts of the Central Powers, sought to stop the advance of these impetuous new enemies from over the sea. Here and there, these Germans in the Argonne came out of a day's fighting with the advantage on their side—technically. But what of it? More Americans pressed in behind them, more attacks were launched by Foch elsewhere, more German reserves disappeared from existence.

Magnificent was the fight put up by Hindenburg's men, but it was as futile as it was magnificent. Flung from one position after another, the Siegfried-Stellung wrested from them, their ranks thinned, their hunger and weariness well-nigh unbearable, the armies of imperial Germany staggered back through that north of France, where they had conquered four years before, toward the boundaries of their own country, which, it seemed certain, Foch was about to conquer.

Lessons of the Past.

History demonstrates to what point demographic decadence leads nations. Polybius even speaks to us of sterile Greek cities, empty and an easy prey to Roman conquerors. Rome also began her decline when, with a decreased birth rate, she had to resort to mercenary troops. There was a time when, in order to secure men sufficiently tall for the imperial guard, she had to recruit the Batavi from Holland, who had been conquered by Julius Caesar.

The saddest side of the phenomenon is the aging of the population. Whilst in many parts of France schools are closing for want of pupils, other schools are frequented mainly by sons of foreigners, such as Italians, Poles and Spaniards.

The financial burden for this senile humanity increases from year to year. There are nations where an adolescent is 50 years old. If the phenomenon will not cease, it can be foreseen that France toward the end of this century will have a population lower than the present population of Spain.

There are European states where the birth rate is even lower than in France. That the decline of the birth rate has no relation with the economic situation is shown by the universal fact that wealth and sterility proceed at an even pace, whilst the fecund classes of the population are the poorest in means. Still, they are the morally healthy, not having massacred the divine sense of life with cerebral calculations of selfishness.

Population World Might Have.

On the other hand, the past century has completely exploded the theories of Malthus, according to which the increase in population would lead to hunger on account of lack of a food supply. The world can maintain a population 20 times greater than at present.

The resources of the United States are sufficient to support a population five times that of today. Canada can sustain a number 20 times greater than its present inhabitants. Vast zones of South America are still almost wholly virgin. There are still those zones in Africa and Australia, even Europe, while, certainly, in Asia there are more.

The crisis we are now enduring is not a crisis caused by famine, as everyone now knows. It is precisely a crisis of superabundance, due largely, as I had occasion to say in my address delivered to the Chamber of Deputies on May 28 last, to a decrease in population in the great industrial countries.

That which is still more depressing is the fact that the so-called intellectual elements in the various nations are not prolific. They are satisfied with one or two children, unless they prefer, indeed, to have none at all. If we look at the statistics on the graduates of our universities and scientific institutions, we perceive that, in proportion to their number, these intellectuals assume the responsibility of giving new elements which can raise the intellectual level of the nation only in a small way.

This is the picture. The measures to be adopted and the results that these measures yield can be discussed for centuries.

The point is to know whether, in the face of the increase in numbers and the expansion of the yellow and black races, the civilization of the white man is destined to perish. (World copyright, including South America, 1934.)

Apartment Houses Extend Time for Half Hour.

WARSAW, June 26.—The front doors to Warsaw apartment houses will henceforth be locked at 11 p. m. instead of 10:30 p. m., to the rejoicing of citizens, and to the grumbling of janitors.

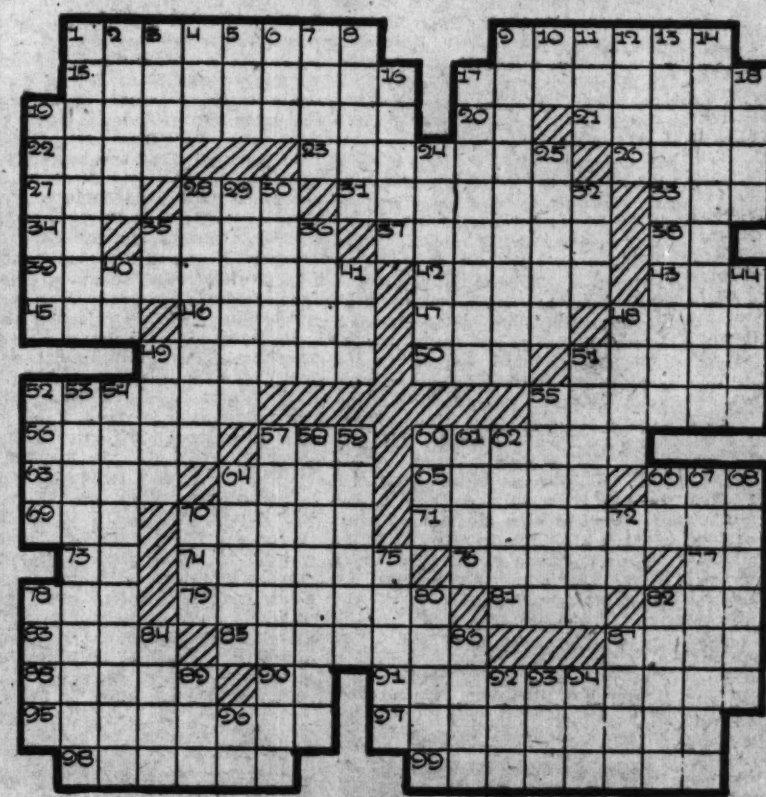

In the past these entrances have contributed to the high cost of staying out late. Janitors, routed out of bed to open the door, had to be tipped—usually one zloty or 20 cents. But cafe owners complained that people were rushing home too early to avoid the sacrifice to janitors' scowls so the city extended the closing hour.

Hay to Be Labor Day Speaker.

Charles M. May, City Counselor, will speak at a Labor day picnic of the American Workers' Union, an organization of unemployed, at the Triangle Park, 4100 South Broadway.

RENT-A-POLICEMAN PLAN

INTRODUCED IN LONDON

Fixed Rates by Day or Hour; Old "Gratuities" System Displaced.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Aug. 25.—Scotland Yard has turned itself into a rental agency dealing in everything from a flesh-and-blood bobby, complete with chin-strapped helmet, to a superintendant astride a high-stepping horse.

Figuring the English pound note as a $5 bill, uniformed bobby can be hired for $7.25 a day. If he's wanted in plain clothes, the charge is 25 cents extra.

Or maybe a day is too long. In that case, there's a bargain rate of $2.50 for four hours or less.

Superintendents, of whom there are 22 at the head of the divisions into which the 700 square mile metropolitan police area is divided, come considerably higher. The day rate for one of these is $17, or for part of a day there is a minimum rate of $4.

If a mounted man is wanted, there is a flat additional charge of $1.43; while if you'd like the policeman around disguised in mourning dress or white tie and tailed coat, that costs $1.87 extra.

This new hiring-out business has been instituted to replace the old "gratuities" system under which police have been employed in their spare time by private persons on direct payment.

Several years ago the Government decided to abolish the system but it has gone slowly in accomplishing the changeover pending the completion of a prolonged inquiry into the exact conditions that have prevailed.

NAZI DRIVE FOR PURE GERMAN

"Telephon" Becomes "Fernsprecher," "Postkarte" Is "Korrespondenzkarte."

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Aug. 25.—In a Nazi drive to induce Germans to speak pure German, "Telephon" is giving way to the approved "Fernsprecher"—literally "distance talker," for the noun, and "Fernsage" to "say at a distance" for the verb. The German postal authorities, Heinrich Himmler, is agitating for the elimination of "postkarte" for "Korrespondenzkarte."

they haven't flowed in this county for over two years.

A. A. Hunt, Grant City, Worth County: "There was not an oat cut in Smith Township to my knowledge. Pastures are dry and short enough to play marbles on."

In Ray County—H. E. Camden, Orrick: "Hundreds have sold their stock. There is not enough feed and pasture to take what is left through the winter. Seven out of 10 families have been hauling water." Parry J. Wilson, Lawson: "A great deal of the corn will not even form a nubbin nor make fodder. It is burned up and fallen to the ground. Stock is dying for want of feed and water. Many people and stock will need feed and food." W. W. Bales, Lawson: "Corn will not make a bushel an acre. Hogs are a cent a pound and corn 85 cents a bushel. Burned up corn is being cut for feed."

Nodaway River went dry, the first time since white men have lived along its banks. . . . No such drouth in Nodaway County remembered by the oldest settlers, says W. W. Alexander of Hopkins. . . . S. E. Christian of Barnard has been farming for 43 years and the conditions are the worst that he has ever seen. . . . Farmers are selling their brood sows. . . . Women are selling their chickens on account of lack of feed.

A hail storm in June stripped the fruit trees and battered the potatoes, but what of it, says H. H. Gard of Ravenwood, the drouth would have got them, anyway.

Sharing With Calves.

Alva Hull of Mayville has been living on the same farm in Grant Township, De Kalb County, for 32 years and has never seen things so bad.

J. R. De Foe of Swedeborg, Pulaski County, has nine cows with calves. He milks enough for the family and lets the calves have the rest. . . . George R. Smith of Palco tells of a family of small children who lost their last milk cow when she broke through a fence and ate too much stunted cane and died.

W. H. Burks of Bolivar, Polk County, has been on the same farm on Pomme de Terre River for 50 years and this is the worst that he has ever seen. . . . Sam C. A. Jones of Warsaw, Warren County, can beat that. He says his mother has been there 80 years and she never saw anything like it.

Jay Demann of Redtop, Polk County, has been farming and observing for 50-odd years, and he says he never imagined that conditions could ever be as bad as they are. Stock will soon all perish, he says, and people are in for the most serious conditions they have ever experienced. . . . E. W. Cunningham, Warrensburg, Johnson County, gives it as his deliberate judgment that the county will not raise enough corn to winter a good crop.

James V. Cline, Oak Grove, Jackson County: "People are sacrificing their poultry, cattle, sheep and hogs. There never was such a time in history. The people are becoming restless. Unless rains start fall pastures, God alone knows what will happen."

What happens where rain falls is found east of Wentzville, in St. Charles County—a field of corn with full ears on the stalks, the only one seen by the roadside in a thousand miles of driving—a promise of what may be when summer comes again: "First a blizzard, then the ear, then the full grain in the ear."

Max Gordon To Bring Out Four New Shows

Broadway Producer Gets Season's Offerings Under Way Early—Willetta Kershaw, St. Louis Actress, Returning to America After Decade Abroad.

AMONG New York theatrical producers, the most continuing ballyhooer of the contention that "all's well with the theater," is Max Gordon, who has had not a single failure since his return as a manager four years ago. With plans for five shows on Broadway during the coming season, one on tour and several others that may be added, Gordon will be a busy man. He has already reopened "Dodsworth" with Walter Huston, who took time out to do "Othello" at Central City, Colo., and has put "Roberta," musical comedy hit of last season, into rehearsal for a road trip, which is expected to include St. Louis.

It is Gordon's policy to get shows to town as early in the fall as possible. If such a thing could be brought about, he would probably open all five Broadway attractions in the same week.

He will next bring out "Spring Song" by Sam and Bella Spewack, with Francine Lawrence in the leading role. Taking over the 3700-seat Center Theater about the same time, he will present a $300,000 musical spectacle, "The Great Waltz," which has been a hit in London under the title of "Waltzes From Vienna." Two other plays on his list are "The Rats of Norway," dramatization of Keith Winter's novel, and "The Farmer Takes a Wife," Marc Connelly's first work since he dramatized "The Green Pastures."

ROLAND STEBBINS, former Wall Street broker turned theatrical manager, has announced plans for two new plays this fall.

One is "Tight Britches," drama of the South, which George M. Cohan once considered doing, and the other "Lost Horizons," a 21-scene play by Harry Segall.

Cohan, now making a movie of "Gambling," will go on tour after that in Eugene O'Neill's "Ah, Wilderness," his New York success last season. The piece will probably reach the American Theater here early in the fall.

RETURNING to the American stage after an absence of more than 11 years, Willette Kershaw, St. Louis-born actress, plans to open at a Broadway theater in a new comedy under her own management. The opening is set for January.

Miss Kershaw, a daughter of Harry W. Mansfield, once financial manager for Thomas H. Ince, was seen on Broadway in "The Crowded Hour" by Channing Pollock and Edgar Selwyn before she went to England and France.

Two other former St. Louisans, May Cerr and Robert Hanna are authors of a new three-act comedy, "The More, The Merrier," which has been tried out at Guilford, Conn., and will reach Broadway the latter part of September. Mitzzi Hajos, musical comedy star, is making her first appearance as a legitimate actress in the production.

WITH a dozen players already having announced their intentions to seek the favor of Broadway audiences this fall and winter, two others are added to the list. They are Sam Jaffe and Jean Arthur, who will have leading roles in "The Bride of Torosko," to be presented by Gilbert Miller and Herman Shumlin, associated together for the first time.

Jaffe has not been seen on Broadway since he made a hit as Kringelein in the stage version of "Grand Hotel."

Pauline Lord, now in Hollywood making her first picture, "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," may return to New York to take the lead in "Galloway's Orchard," from the Claire Spencer novel. Miss Lord gave the play a tryout with a summer stock company several years ago. Helen Hayes will tour in "Mary of Scotland."

Laurel and Hardy
Use Own Names
In Toyland Movie

TWEEDLEDUM and Tweedledee were not quite proper names for Laurel and Hardy in their forthcoming feature picture, "Babes in Toyland," so their character titles are now Stanley Dum and Oliver Dee.

So far as possible, a literal adaptation of Victor Herbert's operetta is being used. A few minor characters have been added and some new situations to fit the personalities and talents of the pair have been created.

The Toyland village is an elaborate set, composed of a drum house, a doll house and a train; there are other houses made of building blocks, of pumpkins and another which resembles Noah's Ark, where the animals are quartered.

Characters which were not in the original Herbert story include Old King Cole, Santa Claus and the Three Little Pigs (one of whom is kidnapped by the villain). Most of the original characters remain and so does all of the music.

"Babes in Toyland" has long been planned as one of the annual Laurel-Hardy features, but it was only recently that the story was adapted. The picture, held up temporarily now while Laurel recovers from a leg injury, is scheduled for fall release. Cost is estimated in excess of a half million dollars.

Chaplin to Begin "Street Waif" Soon

With baggy trousers, derby, mustache, cane and other familiar accessories, Charlie Chaplin expects to begin work the first week in September on his next picture, "Street Waif." It will be another talkie-less film with music and "unusually pleasing" sound effects. Chaplin has completed the scenario, which will be a comedy-drama about the industrial section of a big city, with possibly a few riots and a strike thrown in for "modern atmosphere." Release is set for January through United Artists. Although this would be a record time for a Chaplin picture—his others have taken about two years each—his manager explained that heretofore the scenario was written and the sets made as they went. In "City Lights," his last picture, Chaplin shot 300,000 feet of film and then cut and selected until he had the desired 8000 feet for the production.

The "waif" of the picture will be Paulette Goddard, Chaplin's latest "discovery," who has appeared frequently with him at Hollywood social events.

Gaynor and Swanson Use Same Double

Few screen stars look less alike than Janet Gaynor and Gloria Swanson yet there is a girl in Hollywood who earns her living by "standing in" for both of them. Jean Olmes, in size and coloring, is almost a double of Miss Gaynor's. During the making of the latter's recent picture, "Servants' Entrance," Miss Olmes acted as the star's stand-in, posing before the cameras while the lights were being adjusted.

As soon as Miss Gaynor finished the picture and left for Europe, Miss Olmes moved to the next stage and is successfully performing the same task for Miss Swanson in "Music In The Air." A dark-brown wig, a little make-up, and inch-thick cleats nailed to the bottoms of her shoes to make up the difference in height, help to do the trick.

Miriam Hopkins and Bing Crosby in "She Loves Me Not," at the Shubert-Rialto Theater.

Leslie Howard and Bette Davis in "Of Human Bondage," at both the Ambassador and Fox Theaters.

Of Human Bondage.

OF HUMAN BONDAGE, at the Ambassador and Fox theaters, resembles the W. Somerset Maugham novel in more than its story. It has the characteristics of a novel, the myriad changes of scene, the many reversals of character, the building up of a climax by a series of dramatic incidents. The story: Leslie Howard, a second-rate medical student with a club-foot, falls in love with Bette Davis, waitress in a London restaurant. He pursues her, to her disgust, but she is unscrupulous enough to let him spend more on her than he can afford. She eventually leaves him to live unconventionally with another man, is deserted and returns to Leslie for aid, which he gives, at the cost of losing a genuine woman, Kay Johnson. Bette again leaves him for another man, this time one of his friends. Leslie once more accepts her but after all that wrecking his life, she is on her way again. Her death, which is brought about by natural causes and easily acceptable, both from the viewpoint of craftsmanship and audience pleasure, frees him and allows him to love Francis Dee. One complaint may be that, in following the novel, the picture fails to show satisfactorily why Leslie holds onto the little strumpet. It is easy enough for any adult to guess, taking all the facts into consideration, but guessing is no sport when one seeks to be entertained. "Of Human Bondage," nevertheless, has a cast diverse enough and capable enough that anyone who sees it must get enough enjoyment. Its nine-day's wonder, of course, is Bette Davis, who has turned out to be an actress. Recalling her as the pretty little do-nothing in Arliss' "Man Who Played God," I can scarcely believe my eyes (or ears, since her Cockney accent is the main surprise). Leslie Howard gives the sort of interpretation you would expect a man of his talent and experience to give—one of understanding and attention to every moment he is in front of the camera.

She Loves Me Not. ABROADWAY success, still running after more than 300 performances, is carried over to the screen in "She Loves Me Not," a sparkling little comedy at the Shubert. The situation, which is at least unique, is that in which Miriam Hopkins, night club dancer sought as a material witness in a murder case, obtains refuge in a Princeton University dormitory. Bing Crosby and Eddie Nugent arrange to hide her for a few days, but their secret gets beyond them. When Eddie confides in his father George Barlow, a motion picture producer, a movie press agent sees the opportunity to cash in on a publicity stunt. Miriam is taken over bag and baggage and campus dignity is outraged over every quadrangle. Bing and Eddie seem to be on the way out of old Nassau, but a propaganda campaign and pressure on the university fathers save them. Bing's romance with Kitty Carlisle provides the fade-out. Crosby knows how to put over a popular tune and his melion pictures so far have been blessed with some nice numbers. One very pleasant thing about "She Loves Me Not" is that he and Kitty Carlisle sing "Love in Bloom" often enough that you can learn all the words before the show's over. If you put your mind to it. It is quite plain that Bing Crosby cannot act. As handsome as he is, he gets about with a kind of clumsiness that suggests scenery being moved. What he lacks in subtlety, however, is provided by Miriam Hopkins and Lynne Overman as the press agent. Miriam adds some nifty dancing. The movies have not passed up the opportunity to kid themselves and the news-reel shots which figure in the story are priceless. Kitty Carlisle sings quite well, too. It looks like another Crosby success. "Housewife," the Shubert's second offering, has George Brent and Ann Dvorak married and Bette Davis as the disturbing element. Events move to a divorce court, where George and Ann cut it all down to court costs, which are entered under their family budget.

No Greater Glory. ONE of the most meaningful pictures of the year, "No Greater Glory," is on a double bill at the Missouri. Adapted from a Molnar novel, it attempts to be propaganda for peace, offering a study of the causes of conflict in miniature. The Paul Street Boys are in possession of a vacant lot in Budapest; the Red Shirts, an older bunch and ruffians, are determined to take it by force. The onslaught takes on the features of a major offense, which is fought out with surprising similarity to actual warfare. Interwoven in the principal motif is the story of one sickly lad, the only private in the Paul Street army, whose courage exceeds his physical resources and provides a tragic climax to the plot. All well and good. You are stirred by the boy's ideals and you may applaud when the picture is ended, but I doubt if you would be able to tell why. It will not be clapping hands for the cause of peace for the boy's sacrifice glorifies the human reasons for fighting, even in the face of an ironic touch that is injected when both groups of boys lose the lot. "No Greater Glory" may be the best boy drama yet on the screen but it does not achieve quite that unity of purpose that would deliver a hearty jolt to the public's plexus. George Breakston, Frankie Darro and Jackie Searl are outstanding in the cast. The second Missouri picture is Edna May Oliver in "Murder on the Blackboard," in which she solves the murder of a young music teacher. Edna is done up in year 1900 teacher's fashion but will not be denied her spiky lines. It doesn't make any difference if the murder is treated a little flippantly—it isn't anybody we know.

Hide-Out. ROBERT MONTGOMERY does his best, usually, as an ingratiating smart-aleck that you can't help liking. In "Hide-Out," at Loew's, he is such a human being only for a brief period. That is at the first part of the picture in which every effort is bent to show what a racketeer the boy is. Then a New York policeman wounds him and he hides out in a Connecticut farmhouse he never saw before. The household accepts him as a thoroughly nice young man, big sister who teaches school (Maureen O'Sullivan) goes more than half way in liking him and Bob begins to see the business of racketeering in a pretty distasteful light. Milk, butter, eggs, fresh air, apple jack and the like do their work and bring him to the pink of condition before two beefy detectives carry the issue to the country. Maureen is willing to wait 15 months until Bob comes up for air again and maybe she gets her job back at the school, anyway. In order to amuse, the cameras show Bob learning to feed chickens, milk cows and lead horses. The Good Woman in the Next Seat remarked, "You wouldn't think anybody could be that dumb." I'll agree with her this once.

Vienna Admirer. GARY COOPER received a present from a Viennese admirer—and paid $1.80 customs charge to get it. The gift is an elaborately embroidered table cover which Gary's bride, Sandra Shaw, will use for the bridge table. It was accompanied by a short note from Maria Fleischner, who made the cover.

Ringenberg Named Teacher. Calvin Ringenberg has been appointed to succeed the late Ernest R. Kroeger as teacher of music at Washington University. The music department has been amplified to include classes in harmony and instruction in pianoforte and pipe organ. Ringenberg came to St. Louis in 1931 to succeed the late Charles Galloway as organist and choirmaster of St. Peter's Episcopal Church and organist and choral director at Washington University.

English Films to America

Gaumont-British Picture Corporation Sends General Manager to Head New Campaign—Arliss Will Receive $200,000 for "The Iron Duke," and Will Make Two Other Pictures in Native Land.

AMERICAN movie-goers, who have come to accept English accent, English actors and even English stories as standard, will soon be offered the pure product, films made in England. For after 20 years of pot-shots at the American market, an English company is preparing to make a determined onslaught.

The mighty effort in this case is coming from the Gaumont-British Picture Corporation, which has sent its general manager, Jeffrey Bernard, to this country to arrange for distribution of some 30 major pictures on the year's production schedule.

Six that are ready for release or will be soon make up an impressive list. The pictures include George Arliss in "The Iron Duke," portraying Wellington in the days of Waterloo; Conrad Veidt in "Power," taken from the Feuchtwanger novel, "Jew Suss"; Anna May Wong in "Chu Chin Chow," Evelyn Laye in "Princess Charming," Matheson Lang in "Little Friend" and Jessie Matthews in "Evergreen." With $200,000 set as the minimum to be spent on any of the six, "Power," is reported to have cost a half million already and "Chu Chin Chow" $400,000.

COMPETING with Hollywood for stars, Gaumont-British announces Arliss will receive $200,000 for "The Iron Duke," which is said to be a record price anywhere. Although Arliss has been in the movies 14 years, this is his first picture in England, his native land. He will make two other pictures for Gaumont-British. Veidt will have three others. Jan Kiepura, Polish opera singer who made a success in "Be Mine Tonight," will be heard in "My Song for You," also on the schedule.

That Gaumont-British is making no mere threat may be judged from the fact that it is backed by a capital of some $100,000,000, has two huge new studios at Islington and Shepherds Bush and owns several hundred theaters in Great Britain. Twenty exchanges will be established in major American cities and the company is reported ready to buy or rent theaters of its own. Bernard has announced that the personnel will be entirely American.

"We intend to put over our pictures there in the same way as Americans do here," a Gaumont-British executive said in England recently. "We shall spend at least as much as they do on exploitation. We shall hope to get them used to our language as we had to get used to theirs. We believe that if we can get a little more of British sentiment and British ideas into the world generally that it will not only make for better business in this country and in others, but also for a more peaceful disposition in the world."

SUCH a statement must strike a responsive chord in the British heart, which has never reconciled itself to being Americanized by motion pictures. A talking-point offered to American exhibitors at this time is that British taste has always been for "clean" movies and that the products of Gaumont-British will pass the sanitary sniffers.

Gaumont-British has been releasing pictures in the United States "in a small way," for several years, as its officers point out. Notable in last year's offerings were "I Was a Spy," "Rome Express" and "The Constant Nymph." The phenomenal artistic and boxoffice success of "The Private Life of Henry VIII," from the studios of another English concern, London Films Productions, Ltd., showed what could be done in the United States. The new American campaign is based on the premise that Americans want good, entertaining movies without concern for their origin.

The only customs problem on the westward voyage is a tax of 3 cents a foot on exposed and developed negatives. Unlike Britain, which has quota restrictions requiring 17 1/2 per cent of films shown shall be British, the United States has no requirements.

MEANWHILE, closer co-operation between producers on both sides of the Atlantic is under way. Twentieth Century, new American producer, has arranged with London Films for interchange of stars, directors, writers and cameramen. Under the agreement, Douglas Fairbanks recently completed "The Private Life of Don Juan" for London Films; S. N. Behrman and Robert E. Sherwood, Hollywood writers, have been collaborating on "The Scarlet Pimpernel," London Films vehicle for Leslie Howard and Merle Oberon; W. P. Lipcombe and R. J. Minney, authors, will do a Hollywood adaptation of "Clive of India." Hal Rosson, Hollywood cameraman, and other technicians have been sent to England. Twentieth Century also has an exchange agreement with British and Dominions Pictures in England and Pathe-Natan in France.

In picking out Arliss, Gaumont-British drew one of the biggest names out of the Hollywood hat but it could still have a long list of English actors and actresses that would be "boxoffice" in this country. Natives of the little Isle make up a roster of the movie-famous, Chaplin, Ronald Colman, Leslie Howard, H. B. Warner, Reginald Denny, Lionel Atwill, Herbert Marshall, Clive Brook, Charles Laughton, Cary Grant, Stan Laurel and Victor McLaglen are on that roll. The feminine representation centers around Diana Wynyard, Alison Skipworth, Dorothy Mackall, Elizabeth Allan, Heather Angel, Lilla Harvey and others.

In recent years, nearly every cast has been filled out with such stand-bys as Alan Mowbray, C. Aubrey Smith, Sir Guy Standing, Ralph Forbes and Herbert Mundin, all English. Even Boris Karloff would be included. All in all, it would make a pretty good load for the Mayflower. It looks as if an Anglo-American understanding is on the way.

Joy's Orchestra Back at Highlands

Jimmy Joy's orchestra, which last June was held a second week at the Forest Park Highlands ballroom, being the only dance unit to receive an extended engagement this season, returns to the park this afternoon for another week of the afternoon on the dance pavilion. The band has a variety of novelties, including a double trumpet of saxophones, a sextet of trumpets and clarinetists, a quartet of guitarists, a trio of violinists and a duo of trombonists, as well as seven men singers and Margaret Benish. For this week's program of free entertainment, Harry Lang's Commanders have arranged a medley of Irish airs, selections from light operas and several song features, with the Virginia Hill Steppers presenting ensemble and solo dance numbers at the 9 o'clock show.

Box Office Open For Opera Tonight
Although "Show Boat" played to near-capacity audiences during the past week, the management announces that seats are still available for the last performance to-night. The ticket office at the Municipal Theater will be open from noon to 9 p. m. and the downtown office, in the lobby of the Arcade Building, from noon until 8 o'clock. With the Jerome Kern musical play bringing the sixteenth season of the opera to a close, the show was seen by many visitors from outside the city. Groups of reservations were made by residents of the Southwest and in several instances New Yorkers came to St. Louis especially for the play.

WASHINGTON, D. C.
NOW that the first aerial mail train has completed a flight from New York to Washington, with thousands cheering at every landing field, the seers of aviation are looking forward to a day when "locomotive" planes with glider "cars" may transport passengers and freight as regularly and safely as railroad trains on terra firma.

It looked like a strange mother bird with a trailing brood of fledglings as it took off from Floyd Bennett Field in New York. But its sponsors believe the freakish brood presages the next step in transportation—the air train, a powerful "locomotive" hauling a long string of gliders at tremendous speed, letting off the Baltimore or St. Louis " sleeper" in full flight without even slowing down or alighting to hitch on other cars, and carrying many times the load which could be tackled by a single plane. Essentially, the chief advantage of the glider train is in this extra lifting power. The load of an airplane is inflexibly limited by wing-spread. But the average plane has a great deal of excess pulling power. The train of gliders simply provides the extra wing surface to utilize the excess power of the "locomotive."

Principal objections are that gliders are not yet built for high speeds, rough weather and heavy loads. But the backers of the experimental New York to Washington flight are setting out to overcome these obstacles in the belief that the flight demonstrated they were not insurmountable.

"The flight from New York to Washington proves that sky trains, even composed, as this one was of gliders designed for pleasure, can be operated in any weather that the standard airplane can stand," declared Elias Lustig, head of a concern promoting the experiment. "We flew through four thunderstorms and a line squall. It was wet and cold. Over Philadelphia we ran into the bumpiest weather I have ever encountered."

"We are all satisfied, for we know that, with good weather, everything would have been carried through exactly on schedule." The "locomotive" and three gliders left Floyd Bennett Field at 10:45 a. m., August 2. The gliders were strung out tandem behind a 225-horsepower Eaglerock biplane. It was the first time gliders had been towed in single file, train fashion, behind an airplane. In the few other comparable flights, the gliders have been spread out fanwise.

Each glider carried 120 pounds of mail, about 4000 letters, sent by philatelists to be mailed in Washington, Baltimore and Philadelphia. They were stamped with special cachets commemorating the flight. It was the first time a glider train had carried mail, or any useful load on a long run.

Hardly out of sight of the New York skyline, the aerial train ran into strong headwinds and recurrent storms. For many miles, the pilots fought through "tough" weather, and in two hours they landed at Philadelphia.

It had been planned to continue and simply cut off glider No. 3 in passing, to land alone. But the headwinds had reduced speed to 50 miles an hour, and in battling them, the "locomotive" had all but drained its fuel tanks. Jack O'Meara, 1933 national glider champion and "conductor" in charge of the air train, decided that the entire train should land.

At an altitude of 3100 feet, more than a mile from the Philadelphia airport, O'Meara ordered the gliders cut loose, and silently, like gigantic birds, they swooped down over the throngs waiting at the airport.

In eight minutes O'Meara landed, followed one minute later by the second glider pilot and two minutes later by the third. The precision was perfect. It went off so neatly that the pilots decided to go on and—hang the weather! The ship was refueled. The Baltimore and Washington cars lined up and coupled on to continue the flight.

At a signal from O'Meara, "Engineer" Elwood Keim began to taxi the biplane across the field. The gliders moved less than 100 feet across the tall grass of the airport before they took to the air, skimmed a few feet above the ground until the Eaglerock gained flying speed, and in a matter of seconds after O'Meara's signal were soaring above the field.

Near Wilmington they were forced back by a terrific storm. No break came in the weather while they waited in Philadelphia, until the following day. At 8:55 a. m. they resumed the flight. Despite headwinds, it was not yet noon when Stanley Smith of Rochester, N. Y., 1932 glider champion, cut loose the Baltimore car and made a perfect landing before 1000 spectators in front of the hangar on Logan Field.

In less than an hour, the last glider, piloted by O'Meara, uncoupled from the biplane, circled six times above the White House and eased silently down to the grass of the Ellipse back of the presidential residence. The plane went on to land at Hoover Airport. Lustig, who had followed the gliders in his cabin plane, hurried to be among the first to greet O'Meara.

"You have made aviation history," he said. "In the face of the worst possible conditions you did what you said you would do. I am more than ever convinced that the sky train is the future of air transportation."

Returning, the biplane took off from Washington with O'Meara's glider in tow, stopped briefly to pick up the Baltimore and Philadelphia cars, and was back in New York on August 4—two days after the flight began, despite all the obstacles it had to overcome.

Technical supervision was by Prof. R. E. Franklin of the University of Michigan, aeronautical engineer, pioneer builder of gliders, and designer of craft which have been used by the Navy in experimental flights at Pensacola, Florida. Prof. Franklin piloted the Philadelphia car.

The "locomotive" was selected for lifting and pulling power. The cars were standard Franklin P. S. No. 2 gliders. The first was towed on a 400-foot cable, and the second and third on 200-foot cables.

Dragging cables, with the danger of entanglements in trees, high tension lines and the like, were eliminated by reels in biplane and gliders which wound up each cable as soon as it was "tripped" from the glider following.

The maneuvers obviously required two-way communication between the four pilots. It was maintained throughout the flight by 7-watt, 1-meter radio sets, which added about (Concluded on Page 7.)

WASHINGTON, D. C.,

NOW that the first aerial mail train has completed a flight from New York to Washington, with thousands cheering at every landing field, the seers of aviation are looking forward to a day when "locomotive" planes with glider "cars" may transport passengers and freight as regularly and safely as railroad trains on terra firma.

It looked like a strange mother bird with a trailing brood of fledglings as it took off from Floyd Bennett Field in New York. But its sponsors believe the freakish brood presages the next step in transportation—the air train, a powerful "locomotive" hauling a long string of gliders at tremendous speed, letting off the Baltimore or St. Louis "sleeper" in full flight without even slowing down or alighting to hitch on other cars, and carrying many times the load which could be tackled by a single plane.

Essentially, the chief advantage of the glider train is in this extra lifting power. The load of an airplane is inflexibly limited by wing-spread. But the average plane has a great deal of excess pulling power. The train of gliders simply provides the extra wing surface to utilize the excess power of the "locomotive."

Principal objections are that gliders are not yet built for high speeds, rough weather and heavy loads. But the backers of the experimental New York to Washington flight are setting out to overcome these obstacles in the belief that the flight demonstrated they were not insurmountable.

"The flight from New York to Washington proves that sky trains, even composed, as this one was of gliders designed for pleasure, can be operated in any weather that the standard airplane can stand," declared Elias Lustig, head of a concern promoting the experiment. "We flew through four thunderstorms and a line squall. It was wet and cold. Over Philadelphia we ran into the bumpiest weather I have ever encountered."

"We are all satisfied, for we know that, with good weather, everything would have been carried through exactly on schedule."

The "locomotive" and three gliders left Floyd Bennett Field at 10:45 a. m., August 2. The gliders were strung out tandem behind a 225-horsepower Eaglerock biplane. It was the first time gliders had been towed in single file, train fashion, behind an airplane. In the few other comparable flights, the gliders have been spread out fanwise.

Each glider carried 120 pounds of mail, about 4000 letters, sent by philatelists to be mailed in Washington, Baltimore and Philadelphia. They were stamped with special cachets commemorating the flight. It was the first time a glider train had carried mail, or any useful load on a long run.

Hardly out of sight of the New York skyline, the aerial train ran into strong headwinds and recurrent storms. For many miles, the pilots fought through "tough" weather, and in two hours they landed at Philadelphia.

It had been planned to continue and simply cut off glider No. 3 in passing, to land alone. But the headwinds had reduced speed to 50 miles an hour, and in battling them, the "locomotive" had all but drained its fuel tanks. Jack O'Meara, 1933 national glider champion and "conductor" in charge of the air train, decided that the entire train should land.

At an altitude of 3100 feet, more than a mile from the Philadelphia airport,

The Mechanical Monster That Builds the Mississippi's Greatest Navigation Dam

Concrete Pouring Has Begun at Alton, and the River Sounds Play Second Fiddle to the Roar of the Machines

By ELLWOOD DOUGLASS
Of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine Staff

A STEEL monster tall as a six-story building pours out a river of concrete. Glistening under flood-lights, the grey ribbon flows out across a great pit—in which one could bury a dozen city blocks—rolls molasses-like over a little cascade, swings off sharply in another ribbon to the left. Overhead, on the edge of the pit, a yard engine pushes a string of steel gondolas through a maze of special tracks to the maw of the black monster, shoves away an empty car, sets in its place a creaking load of crushed stone.

There is a little light in the sky; somewhere out beyond the rust-brown walls of the pit is the gleam of the river. But one hears no river-sounds, no wash of the eddy against the piles, no splash of leaping fish. Instead there is the clangorous roar of the monster—a cosmic uproar that one feels in chest and spine and ankles as much as hears—the insistent tattoo of an air-hammer driving sheet steel into the river bed, the unhurried, invincible beat of a 5000-pound ram on concrete piling. The geni of steel and steam and electricity, thousands of tons of them, with a few hundred men—mere midgits, crawling on the floor of the great pit, watchful besides the towering machines—are building a new belt of steel and concrete for the Father of Waters, the $8,000,000 lock and dam at Alton.

Carload after carload of stone or gravel and tons of cement are devoured by the monster. Stone is dumped from railroad cars directly on a bucket conveyor which lifts it to one great hopper.

Dry concrete is pumped into another by pipe line from a storage tank 800 feet away. Between the hoppers is a huge tank, from which water is automatically measured out, and, with weighed stone and cement, pours into two drums below. These two-yard hollow cones of steel revolve for two minutes, tilt and empty into another hopper which pours a steady stream of concrete on a belt conveyor. Half-way across the pit, that conveyor is relieved of its load by another at right angles which empties where tolling men swarm about low wooden frames.

INCREDIBLY fast that thick grey stream pours out, two tons a minute, 240,000 pounds an hour, but slowly, slowly, its alluvium builds up where the men toll at the wooden molds. Not for 13 months will its work be finished, for into these locks will go 200,000 cubic yards of concrete—enough to cover the site of the present Federal building in St. Louis with a solid block 110 feet high.

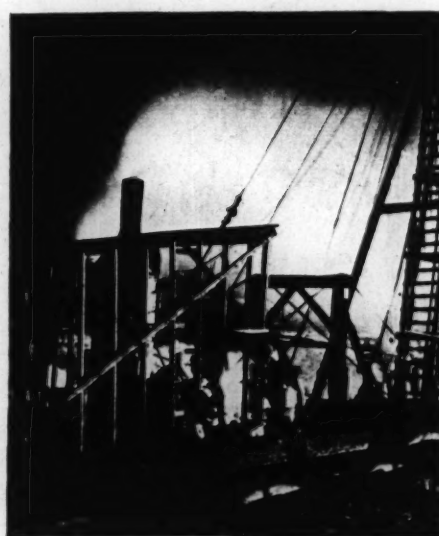

And this 400,000-ton structure is being built literally on the sands. Bed-rock is 65 to 70 feet down, and so, in lieu of a foundation on the solid rock, the 600-foot concrete structure will grip the sands with 650,000 feet of piling—5000 concrete piles and 14,000 of wood—imbedded in the concrete base of the locks and extending 30 to 35 feet down into the sand like so many gigantic claws. The top load runs as high as 54 tons to each of the concrete piles, but they have been tested to carry 100 tons each without shifting. Each of them weighs about three tons. Spun on a lathe as the material "sets," they are hollow, reinforced with steel, 32 feet long, tapering from an 18-inch thickness to 10 1/4 inches. Two feet of the butt, and a similar length of the 37-foot wooden piles, is left above the surface to become an integral part of the concrete floor of the locks.

A great part of that 54-ton stress comes from the land side. Hence, trenches from wall to wall are cut

His Wife Confessed to a Pre-Marital Romance

So Georg Schirmer Hunted Her Ex-Lover for Twenty Years, Found Him, Killed Him and Was Acquitted.

Recent photo of Georg Ernest Schirmer, who killed his wife's ex-lover after a twenty years' search.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

LEIPZIG, Germany. FIRST my two companions threw a rug over his head and overpowered him. Then I hammered on his head with the club and also an iron bar I had brought along. When he could no longer defend himself, sprawled on the ground there in agony, I told him in no uncertain terms why he was being punished. After I had hit him on the skull so that he was almost senseless, I thought I might as well be merciful and I fired a shot from my revolver which finished him. . . .

The courtroom was very quiet. The defendant stood there on the stand, telling all the grim details of his story. It was dusk on a lonely roadside in the outskirts of the city. The auto pulled up at the curb and the brutal climax to the drama was acted right there, with the city's lights beginning to twinkle in the distance. . . . Speaking quite dispassionately of the crime, he convinced the Judges of his own guilt and implicated his wife and the friends who had assisted him in it. He did not plead insanity or sudden overwhelming anger. He explained how he had plotted for 20 years to accomplish what he had just described. And they acquitted him!

Not only was Georg Ernest Schirmer acquitted: high public officials announced their approval of the verdict; public opinion was in his favor. He is living here now, a prosperous merchant and a respected citizen, going about his business unmolested by conscientious doubts and unfeeling of penal reprisals in the future. An acknowledged slayer, he is satisfied with his vengeance and stands upright in the eyes of his fellow men.

What brought about his acquittal? Why was he looked on as a martyr justly avenged and respectable in his guilt? These curious facts are true and their explanation, however improbable it may seem to some who are unacquainted with middle-class morality in Central Europe, lies open in Georg Ernest Schirmer's story.

When the World War came in 1914 Schirmer was a young student at the University of Leipzig. Like many students, he felt called on to volunteer. He did so and was about to go to the front, but he was very much in love with a young woman who was also enrolled at the university. Before he left they were married in a great hurry. It was one of those pledges of faith and love which took place so many times before the armies went into active service. Then Schirmer went away, carrying in his pocket a picture of a smiling young girl in a picture hat and a white turtle-neck sweater. That picture was to have a curious fate long after the armistice.

When Georg Schirmer came back to Frieda, his wife, she made the confession which was to have so morbid an effect on their life together. It had all happened long before 1914, she said. She had fallen in love with a man before she met Schirmer. She had been infatuated with him. She had consented to become his mistress. That was all. It had happened before she knew of her present husband's existence and had ended before their marriage.

THESE details were of no consequence to Georg Schirmer. He was determined to find Dimitrov—that was the pre-war lover's name—and avenge the blot on his wife's honor. He visited all the places which Frieda told him Dimitrov had frequented in the days of their affair. There was no trace of him in Leipzig; Schirmer was told he had left the city.

Such a thirst for revenge as Georg Schirmer possessed is rare. His hunt for the man who had "injured" him went on with growing intensity from year to year. The obsession grew in his mind until it blotted out all other things. He spent days and nights thinking about the fellow, hired detectives to spread the search, invested large amounts of money in it. In the night he dreamed of Dimitrov and in the daytime the fixed idea of his injury made it impossible to concentrate on his business. Despite the fact that the seemingly hopeless search went on for 20 years, the husband never relaxed his determination that the other man would pay in blood for his alleged treachery.

Then, when the man-hunt had gone on for almost two decades, the first favorable report arrived. A private detective had located Dimitrov in Sofia, the little capital of Bulgaria. He was employed by the Bulgarian Government as an assistant in the export office there.

From that point Schirmer took up the work personally. He wrote a letter to the unconscious fugitive, offering him a job in Germany. The salary was much higher than what Dimitrov was likely to be earning in Sofia. The letter was signed with a pseudonym and the return address was a postoffice box. They corresponded for some time. Dimitrov must have felt that he had little to lose by accepting the offer, and he agreed to meet his correspondent in a little park outside the walls of Leipzig, where they could discuss privately the further details of the compact Schirmer had suggested.

They met in the suburban park. Dimitrov apparently suspecting nothing, because he knew no reason to be afraid. Schirmer had with him his wife and two friends who had agreed to be in at the death. They wanted to inspect a factory outside the city, Schirmer said, a factory in which he had business interests. Frau Schirmer wore a veil, so that she would not be recognized. They got into a hired automobile and drove away from the park and the city.

Schirmer was irritated by the fact that his victim failed to recognize his former mistress, despite the veil. To think that an idea which had filled his own mind for so many years was an almost obliterated memory in the mind

Frau Georg Schirmer.

Frau Schirmer drew back her veil, still pointing the pistol at him. "Do you not remember me?" she asked.

holdup? That was incredible; he had no money to speak of; they would not lure him from Bulgaria to get the little he had.

Frau Schirmer drew back her veil, still pointing the pistol at him.

"Do you not remember me?" she asked. Dimitrov could make nothing of it; he shook his head. So far as he could remember he had never seen her before in his life. Schirmer's wrath was mounting as he realized more and more conclusively that Dimitrov—if he had ever loved his wife—had forgotten the incident, their love affair, as completely as if it had never happened.

Schirmer thrust into Dimitrov's hand the little portrait he had been carrying in his pocket since the war. The Bulgarian looked at it for a moment.

of Dimitrov! It infuriated Schirmer to think of the anomaly. Dimitrov sat in a back seat, completely unaware of the mammoth hatred which rode with him; but something in the circumstance of driving at such a time to inspect a factory, or riding with these uncommunicative strangers, made him apprehensive. He made nervous inquiries as to where they were going and what they would do there.

Suddenly the motor seemed to fall and the car came to a stop along the road. Saying he would look at the engine, Schirmer got out and went toward the hood. Dimitrov followed him and Frau Schirmer followed Dimitrov. Then, without warning, the victim was standing there between a stranger with a club and a woman with a revolver. He looked at them. A SUDDENLY he began to comprehend. He stared at the photograph horrified and looked more closely at Frau Schirmer. He snatched at the gun in her hand. He was struck down from behind; it was four against one and he didn't have a chance.

"After that," the defendant concluded his testimony, "we wrapped up the corpse in the rug, weighted it with some stones and dropped it into a shallow pond beyond the city."

When the police came for Schirmer—they had no trouble identifying him as the killer—he made no attempt to deny his guilt. He made no protest at being arrested, told his story and was released on bond. Even as he repeated the tale before a crowded court there was no trace of remorse in his manner. He was still indignant against the man who had won the affections of his wife before he himself had met her. His jealousy was only appeased by a belated revenge.

"I do not consider myself a murderer," he told the court. "I simply avenged the wrong done to my wife." It was a straight appeal to the "unwritten law"—the jury acquitted him.

The Still Unexplained Mystery of Agnes Tufverson's Disappearance

A Successful Woman Lawyer, She Suddenly Felt, at 43, the Belated Lure of Love When Captain Poderjay Crossed Her Path.

Agnes Tufverson.

NEW YORK.
SUCCESS in her chosen field of corporation law neither surprised nor disturbed Miss Agnes C. Tufverson. She had studied and worked hard, and to her,
as an ardent feminist, it seemed not at all unusual that the Electric Bond and Share Company should value her services as highly as those of male attorneys.

But, as in the cases of many professional women, achievement turned out to be a trifle empty and unsatis-fying. There was something to be said for having secretaries and a private office and a good income. A comfortable apartment helped. Friends were faithful. But a void was there. She supposed she would go on being an efficient lawyer until she was retired and then she would travel—alone.

So when romance popped into her life after she had turned 43, it caught her quite unprepared. The courteous attentions of Captain Ivan Poderjay, Jugo-Slav adventurer, went to her head like a delicious, strange wine.
He spoke to her of his patents, his wealth and his estate in England, and she knew then what she wanted. She knew she desired more than anything else to be mistress of this charming man's house, to live in quiet comfort, in cultured surroundings, to have children.

She entrusted to him literally everything she had. She purchased a trousseau a bride half her years would have considered elaborate. She handed over her savings of $30,000, which would have been much larger except for her generosity to her younger sisters in Detroit. She quit her excellent position. On December 4 last she married Poderjay at the Little Church Around the Corner. They took up residence in her apartment at 235 East Twenty-second street, overlooking aristocratic Gramercy Park. From a dominant, masterful lawyer, the middle-aged bride became a meek, submissive wife. Women were that way in England.

On December 20 bride and groom rode in a taxicab to the pier of the Hamburg-American Line for their honeymoon voyage. But the Hamburg sailed without them, for they quarreled at the gangplank over Poderjay's refusal to be carried on the ship's records as her husband.

Why? He told her—it was because he had another wife in England. Stunned, the bride rode back to the apartment with the groom.
Whether he told her on the way of his lies about his wealth and his estate is not known. But the shock of the one terrible fact apparently was enough to unbalance the bride. She had burned her bridges behind her and prepared her family to keep an ocean between them forever.
The dream was shattered.

She was last seen—as far as the police have been able to determine—in the apartment with Poderjay at 11 o'clock that night. Not a trace of her has since been found.
She has vanished as completely as if the earth opened and swallowed her.

Poderjay sailed alone on the Olympic of the White Star Line on December 22, taking along Miss Tufverson's baggage and trousseau and an extra black trunk he purchased just before leaving, the last an object of great suspicion by police of several nations.

MONTHS later he was arrested by the International Police of Vienna and held for many weeks on suspicion of murdering Miss Tufverson. It was an odd charge, for there was no evidence she had been murdered. Recently New York authorities set in motion the machinery to extradite Poderjay. They indicted him for perjury and it was an open secret that this was just a device for getting the former cavalry officer back here for questioning on the fate of Miss Tufverson. The indictment was based on the fact that Poderjay swore he was a bachelor when he and Miss Tufverson applied for a marriage license at the Municipal building.

What happened to the middle-aged bride after her air castles collapsed about her is a question that has baffled police and public for months. Although there is no physical evidence to support the belief, but only suspicion, most observers lean to the theory that she was murdered and disposed of cleverly. To support this position, the scientific crime detectives of the Police Department have literally torn apart Miss Tufverson's Gramercy Park quarters and scrutinized every inch with microscopes and magnifying glasses. They have ripped up the carpets and torn out the plumbing and desecrated the upholstery, but not one trace of blood or of powerful chemicals have they found. They have, with the same thoroughness, gone over the stateroom the bridegroom occupied on the Olympic on his solo crossing. Abroad, Vienna police have examined the trunks which came in for so much suspicion at first. Not a trace of foul play have they discovered.

The other alternative—that Miss Tufverson's wounded pride caused her to seek oblivion either in suicide or disappearance—seems to fit better into the picture of Poderjay's past. Nowhere on the record of his checkered career is there any entry that would indicate he is the killer type. On the contrary, his record shows that he took an easier and more pleasant way of separating ladies from their worldly wealth. He loved them, treated them considerately and—left them.
Apparently he felt that he was entitled to a decent fee for the glamour he brought into the lives of those who hungered for it. To impute diabolic-ally clever murder to such a man in the present case is, it seems, going a little out of the way to find a solution. All he had to do, once his bride handed over the money, was to sail for Europe. Her pride would have prevented any report to police. Liar, bigamist, polite thief—but no murderer. So argue the conservatives.

"The Most Successful Michigan Girl," was the title bestowed on Miss Tufverson in 1930 by a writer for a nationally circulated magazine.

"She looks like a blond heroine of the Siegfried sagas," said the article.
"Here is the story of a girl who met toll, hardship and trouble and conquered them all single-handed. She came from Grand Rapids, where she left school before reaching her teens, to become co-breadwinner for a family of four younger sisters.
But back in her mind, tenaciously was a determination to have a career."

"Her first job was in a store.
Then she worked in an overall factory, eleven hours a day. She was tall and strong for her age, escaping the eye of the factory inspector. All the while she attended night school, studying stenography and bookkeeping. And all the while she helped with the work at home, cleaning and sewing and baking."

During the World War Miss Tufverson got a job in Washington and made contacts which led to her retention afterwards as private secretary to the late Myron T. Herrick, Ambassador to France. She won her law degree going to night classes and the Electric Bond and Share Company picked her up as a likely young attorney.

It was while returning from a European vacation in the summer of last year that she met Poderjay. Neighbors on the boat train to Southampton, they struck up a casual conversation.

Poderjay spoke of lock patents he had sold to the Yale and Towne Company, later discovered to be a lie. He said he was on his way to America to dicker for royalties. They were seen together frequently on the voyage.

Poderjay took a suite at the George Washington Hotel, 23 Lexington avenue, a 45-cent taxicab ride from Miss Tufverson's apartment. The courtship proceeded on the quiet. It was not until almost the eve of her marriage that Miss Tufverson told her luncheon companions about it. Quietly and with firm reserve she described Poderjay's charming manner and the happiness she expected to be hers in an ivy-covered mansion in England.

After her mar-
with her office work for a time.
On December 8, four days after the ceremony, she sent in her resignation as a member of the
New York County
Lawyers' Association, to take effect at the end of the year. The association wrote back urging her to reconsider and keep her membership and she replied: "The only reason for my resignation is that I am leaving very shortly for London, where I expect to reside indefinitely."

To a request that she become a director of the Saturday's Children Club, an organization of professional women, Miss Tufverson replied: "I am sorry I cannot accept. I am leaving the latter part of next week or the week thereafter for London, England, and I expect to live the rest of my life there." This note was signed "Mrs. Ivan Poderjay (A. C. Tufver-son)."

Poderjay had meanwhile moved his things to his wife's apartment. According to an occupant of an adjoining apartment, who listened through open windows, Poderjay's manner changed after the marriage. She could hear his growling monotone every evening punctuated by his bride's mechanical "yes, dear," and "no, dear."

Then came the false start on the honeymoon and the return to the apartment Miss Tufverson thought she had bade good-by to forever.

At 11 p. m. Poderjay summoned Flora Miller, the Negro maid, and discharged her.

"The last I saw of Miss Tufverson," the maid told police, "was when she was sitting there in the apartment.
The table had been set for a midnight snack. Captain Poderjay called me into the room and said: 'Flo, we are going away. We won't need you for some time. When we return, I will send for you.' That was all he said.
He was very bossy. Miss Tufverson just sat there, with her legs crossed and her right hand on her chin, as if she didn't know what he was saying.
She just stared straight ahead." No one has been found who saw her after that. The maid went home and did not return for several days.

TWO days later, in the morning,
Poderjay returned to the apartment, slipping in a side entrance.
After a few minutes in the apartment, he came out and went to an express office across the street.

Here he arranged for transportation of his baggage to the Olympic pier, dropping the remark: "My wife has gone ahead of me. I expect to join her in Europe." This statement allayed whatever suspicions the express officials may have had of Poderjay's appropriation of his wife's luggage.
Before leaving Poderjay bought a cheap black trunk and had it sent to the apartment. When he finally emerged, it was to ride on the seat with the truck driver and show him how to unload the trunks and handbags at the dock. He was unusually solicitous about the luggage.

All the way across the Atlantic he remained in his stateroom with the trunks within eyeshot. Meals were brought to him below decks. To Cecil Churcher, a steward, Poderjay once made this cryptic statement: "I'm married and at the same time I'm not married." He seemed lonesome in his hermitage. "A pleasant fellow he was," Churcher said.

The Olympic docked at Southampton on December 27 and waiting at the pier was Mme. Marguerite Ferrand Poderjay whom the adventurer had married in London a few weeks before meeting Miss Tufverson. Together they went to Vienna where the French-woman had furnished an apartment in the Hinterstrasse. Correspondence later found in this apartment indicated that the Frenchwoman had aided Poderjay's plan to mulct the woman lawyer. Letters referred to Miss Tufverson contemptuously and

What Has Happened to the Children of Presidents

Recent Divorces of the Two Young Roosevelts Bring Into Relief the Set-Backs and Successes That Other Members of White House Families Have Experienced.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine Staff

WASHINGTON, D. C.

ECHOES, even in the pulpit, have been roused by three recent divorces in presidential families—the Nevada decree obtained by Mrs. Anna Roosevelt Dall, the divorce and prompt remarriage of her brother, Elliott, and the five-minute divorce of Mrs. Eleanor Wilson McAdoo from the war-time Secretary of the Treasury in her father's Cabinet.

The stir, not yet abated, directs attention to the question of what becomes of Presidents' children. Are Presidents' sons like preachers' sons? Or, just as Sir Francis Galton punctured the older fallacy of "preachers' sons," will the records show that the capacities of Presidents, as of preachers, are passed on to their children? As in every survey of a limited field, there is evidence on both sides of the question. It required the masterful study of a Galton to demonstrate his thesis—supported by his own kinship with Charles Darwin—that "genius" runs in families.

One President's daughter died in a home for the aged. A President's grandson was arrested for begging on the streets, and another was placed in the care of a guardian because of "eccentricities." But dozens of other White House children have succeeded by every American standard, and a few have become famous in their own right.

Elliott Roosevelt, who remarried five days after his divorce last year at Minden, Nevada, has a full-time job as vice-president of the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce of America. On graduation from a "prep" school at Princeton in 1930 he declined to go on to college, and since then has been executive of advertising agencies and of a West Coast air line, and aviation editor of a Los Angeles newspaper.

Mrs. Dall, until her divorce July 30 at Minden, was the wife of Curtis Dall, a New York broker, who remains a trustee of her mother's estate. She is well known in writing and radio work.

Less than two weeks before Mrs. Dall obtained her decree, the late President Woodrow Wilson's daughter had divorced Senator William G. McAdoo at Los Angeles. Mrs. McAdoo is 43 years old, and he is 70. They had been married 20 years. The hearing was over in 20 minutes after her petition was filed.

Mrs. McAdoo's sister, Jessie Wilson, now deceased, was the wife of Prof. Francis B. Sayre, a member of the law school faculty at Harvard.

Divorce has not been unknown in earlier presidential families. Nellie—favorite daughter of President Grant—in 1876 married an Englishman, Algernon Sartoris, Deputy Lieutenant of Caermarthen and son of a member of Parliament. The marriage ended in absolute separation, and Sartoris died soon afterward.

But in this family, particularly, was evidence that domestic concord is not alone the index of high capacity. The son of the unhappy union, Algernon Sartoris Jr., who died a few months ago, was a Lieutenant of Engineers in the Spanish-American War, promoted the next year to a captaincy.

Ulysses S. Grant Jr. was his father's secretary in the latter half of his administration, and later practiced law in San Diego, California. The grandson, Ulysses S. Grant III, was graduated from the Military Academy at West Point, married the daughter of Elihu Root, served on the General Staff Corps in the World War and on the Supreme War Council at Versailles, and since 1926 has been Federal Director of Public Parks and Buildings.

President Cleveland's daughter, Marion, divorced Stanley Dell and married John Page Amen. Her brother, Richard Cleveland, is a successful Baltimore lawyer. He was selected to present Gov. Ritchie's name to the last national Democratic convention, but he acted only as a friend of the Maryland Governor and has no political ambitions for himself. He has refused, several times, to be a candidate. He prefers his law practice to public office. Another brother, Francis G. Cleveland, an educator, confesses that he has voted but once in his life.

A check-up of presidential children living today indicates that all or most of them are doing well. Herbert Hoover Jr., at the age of 29, became president of the Aeronautical Radio Corporation. He is one of the best-known young men in aviation.

His brother, Allan, recently left a "white-collar" job and turned to the business of "dirt" farming. He prefers to start at the bottom and work up rather than start at the top and work down. He and his associates recently purchased a 500-acre farm, which Allan will manage. He had a position as field man in the land department of a bank. But he sought practical experience as a "dirt" farmer, and even toiled Sundays and holidays to learn the business from the bottom.

John Coolidge is also "on his own." He is a clerk in the New Haven Railroad offices, and recently became the father of a daughter, named Cynthia Coolidge, bearing the same initials as Mrs. William G. McAdoo, daughter of former President Wilson, and her daughter, Mary Faith.

Mrs. Curtis Dall, who was also recently divorced.

her President-grandfather—"C. C."

President Coolidge and his predecessor, Abraham Lincoln, each lost a son by death while in the White House. Coolidge never recovered from his grief over the death of Calvin Jr. while the boy was still in his teens, and President Lincoln mourned for his little Tad to the day Booth's bullet sent him to his grave.

The brilliant daughter of President Taft, Helen, now Mrs. Frederick Johnson Manning, is dean of Bryn Mawr College and the mother of two charming children. Her brother, Robert, is a successful lawyer and was at one time Speaker of the Ohio House of Representatives; also a member of the Ohio State Senate.

The children of President Theodore Roosevelt have all had interesting careers.

Theodore Jr., now chairman of the board of the American Express Company, an affiliate of the Chase National Bank, has been Assistant Secretary of the Navy, Governor of Puerto Rico and Governor-General of the Philippines. His brother, Kermit, is president of the Roosevelt Steamship Company and an author of several books.

"Princess Alice" Roosevelt Longworth has been a brilliant figure in America ever since her debutante days in the White House, when she had the world at her feet. Her late husband, Speaker Nicholas Longworth, was the fifth son-in-law of a President to sit in Congress. But his marriage to the President's daughter in no way aided his political career. He had won his seat in Congress before he even knew her.

sell Benjamin Harrison, has tried his luck in various ventures, as mining engineer, civil engineer, electrical engineer, newspaper man, magazine writer and soldier—Lieutenant-Colonel in the Spanish War.

The Garfield boys have both been a credit to their father. Harry Augustus was president of Williams College, while his brother, James Rudolph, was Secretary of the Interior in President Theodore Roosevelt's Cabinet.

"Mollie" Garfield, President Garfield's only daughter, married her father's former private secretary, Stanley Brown.

In 1926, almost on the day when General Grant's grandson became Director of Public Parks and Buildings, a grandson of President Andrew Johnson was placed in the care of a guardian. Andrew Johnson Stever had played in the White House when a small lad. His mother, the youngest daughter of the tailor President, was a widow when her father succeeded Lincoln. Her death seemed to unbalance the mind of her son. His relatives applied to the court to have a guardian appointed for the care of his estate.

Lincoln's son, Robert T., one-time president of the Pullman Palace Car Company, made a name for himself in

She, like Nellie Grant and Helen Taft, was an only daughter.

Having graduated at a finishing school at Lenox, Massachusetts, she had entered the New York State Normal School while her father was Vice-President, and when General Taylor's death occurred she had scarcely completed the course which was to qualify her as a teacher. It is recalled that she gave delightful musicales; that she played on the piano, harp and the guitar; also that—like Miss Taft and Miss Ethel Roosevelt, the younger daughter of President Theodore—she conversed fluently in French, German and Spanish. Barely more than a year after her father's presidential term expired, Mary Fillmore, at the age of 22, was stricken with cholera and died.

MRS. Letitia Tyler Semple, child of President John Tyler's first marriage, presided for a period as lady of the White House, where she was hostess to many notables. She was widowed in late life. During the Civil War her house was torn down by Union troops. So to earn a livelihood she taught school in Baltimore until her eyesight failed, and ended her days in the Louise Home in Washington, D. C., a refuge for aged gentlewomen.

George Adams Robinson, a grandson of President John Quincy Adams and a great grandson of President John Adams, was arrested for begging on the streets of Bridgeport, Connecticut. Robinson, whose mother had been a belle of the White House and whose father was a physician, graduated from Harvard in 1861, enlisted in the Eighth Regiment of Massachusetts Volunteers and saw service under both Sherman and Sheridan. But after thus serving his country, he became so poor in his old age that he was reduced at the age of 70 to asking alms.

Jefferson Davis figures in the marital history of one White House family.

The President of the Southern Confederacy when a young Lieutenant of the United States Army had sued for the hand of Sarah, daughter of Zachary Taylor, then a Colonel in the army, but was refused by that old soldier. While the Colonel was away on military service, the young couple eloped. A few months later the youthful bride died. She had not received her father's forgiveness.

As a Colonel during the Mexican War, Davis fought three days under Zachary Taylor at Buena Vista without ever having met his distinguished father-in-law. But after Davis' magnificent stand at the head of his Mississippi regiment, Taylor at last received his dead daughter's husband, and the two soldiers wept as they clasped hands upon the battlefield.

the Cabinet and the diplomatic service as well as in the business world. After serving in the Union Army as a Captain, he became Secretary of War under Garfield and Minister to England under Benjamin Harrison.

The studious Mary Fillmore, whose father was suddenly called in the summer of 1850 to succeed President Zachary Taylor, had a very tragic life.

Another presidential family claiming several men of attainment was that of Harrison, the only one comparable with the great Adams line. First there was Benjamin Harrison, signer of the Declaration of Independence; then President William Henry Harrison and his grandson, Benjamin, also Chief Magistrate.

SUMMER HOTEL

By
LUPTON A. WILKINSON

LEE BRALEY had known for a week that her chance-made friend from the Maunloq Palace hovered on the verge of saying the One Big Thing. The Maunloq Palace, stone-and-steel pride of that part of the Maine coast, was so effete that the chandeliers boasted real gold leaf and the male guests, even in August, wore glistening tuxedos to all dances.

Few girls who were registered at the commonplace inn—farther down the beach where the cliff was lower—received invitations to Saturday night dances on Palace Heights.

Lee had reason to hope. In one of the big bedrooms at the Palace, Farrell Johns tugged at a black bow tie. He didn't see in the mirror his own acceptable face—straight nose, clear skin, humorous and sensitive mouth.

He saw instead, through a pleasant haze of anticipation, complexion and lips that dwelt together without quarreling, framed in profuse chestnut curls. And in place of his own hazel eyes, those dark blue ones.

Would he ask her? He, at the Palace, head-over-heels in love with a salesgirl, American-planning her vacation at the unfashionable inn! Dare he ask her—yet? How could—

He punctuated his thoughts by tugging again at the black tie. Results made him push a bell button.

A Palace servitor, looking like an English butler (he was born in Posquottome, Vermont) appeared, and his full dress magnificence made Farrell Johns apologize for lacking a valet.

"Quite so. Quite so." The Posquottome paragon forgave. "If the gentleman permits me to say so, Mr. Johns chauffeur is an excellent-seeming young man."

Farrell came out of his daze. "Nephew of a war buddy," he explained. "Couldn't let him down."

A luxurious Lugano cabriolet purred softly from the Palace to the plain board front of the Maunloq Inn.

Farrell had thought Lee would enjoy being called for in style. He wondered!

Here she was. An inexpensive white wrap, and the chestnut curls, unhatted, set off the charm of a gentleman frock. The frock said, "You are nicest" to the eyes.

Farrell and Lee looked like a page call for Mr. Ernst Lubitsch. Youth outshines the rest of nature, any time—and the car was powerful ballyhoo.

"Whew!" Lee laughed softly, noting how the observers dawdled close. "I'll be getting a wild name at the inn."

"Not you!" Farrell breathed in rapt tone. "You couldn't—not anywhere."

She snuggled comfortably in a corner of the capacious seat. Farrell thought of the ultra-sophisticated girls at the Palace. They might be sisters under the skin cream, but Farrell knew what he liked.

Dinner as well as dance, this date. Pale yellow wine, poured by the maitre d'hotel, made liquid sunlight in a thin-stemmed glass.

"It's very mild," Farrell assured her. "Tokay."

The dinner began brightly. Nevertheless, a strain grew, mounted.

Lee saw the plain message in Farrell's hazel eyes and her heart pounded alarmingly, she wanted so badly to hear him say it. What was the matter?

When he spoke, the words, obviously planned, came in distress:

"Since I first saw you, Lee, I've wanted to say something to you. But—not here. When we are back in New York, you'll let me come to see you. Then I can talk—better."

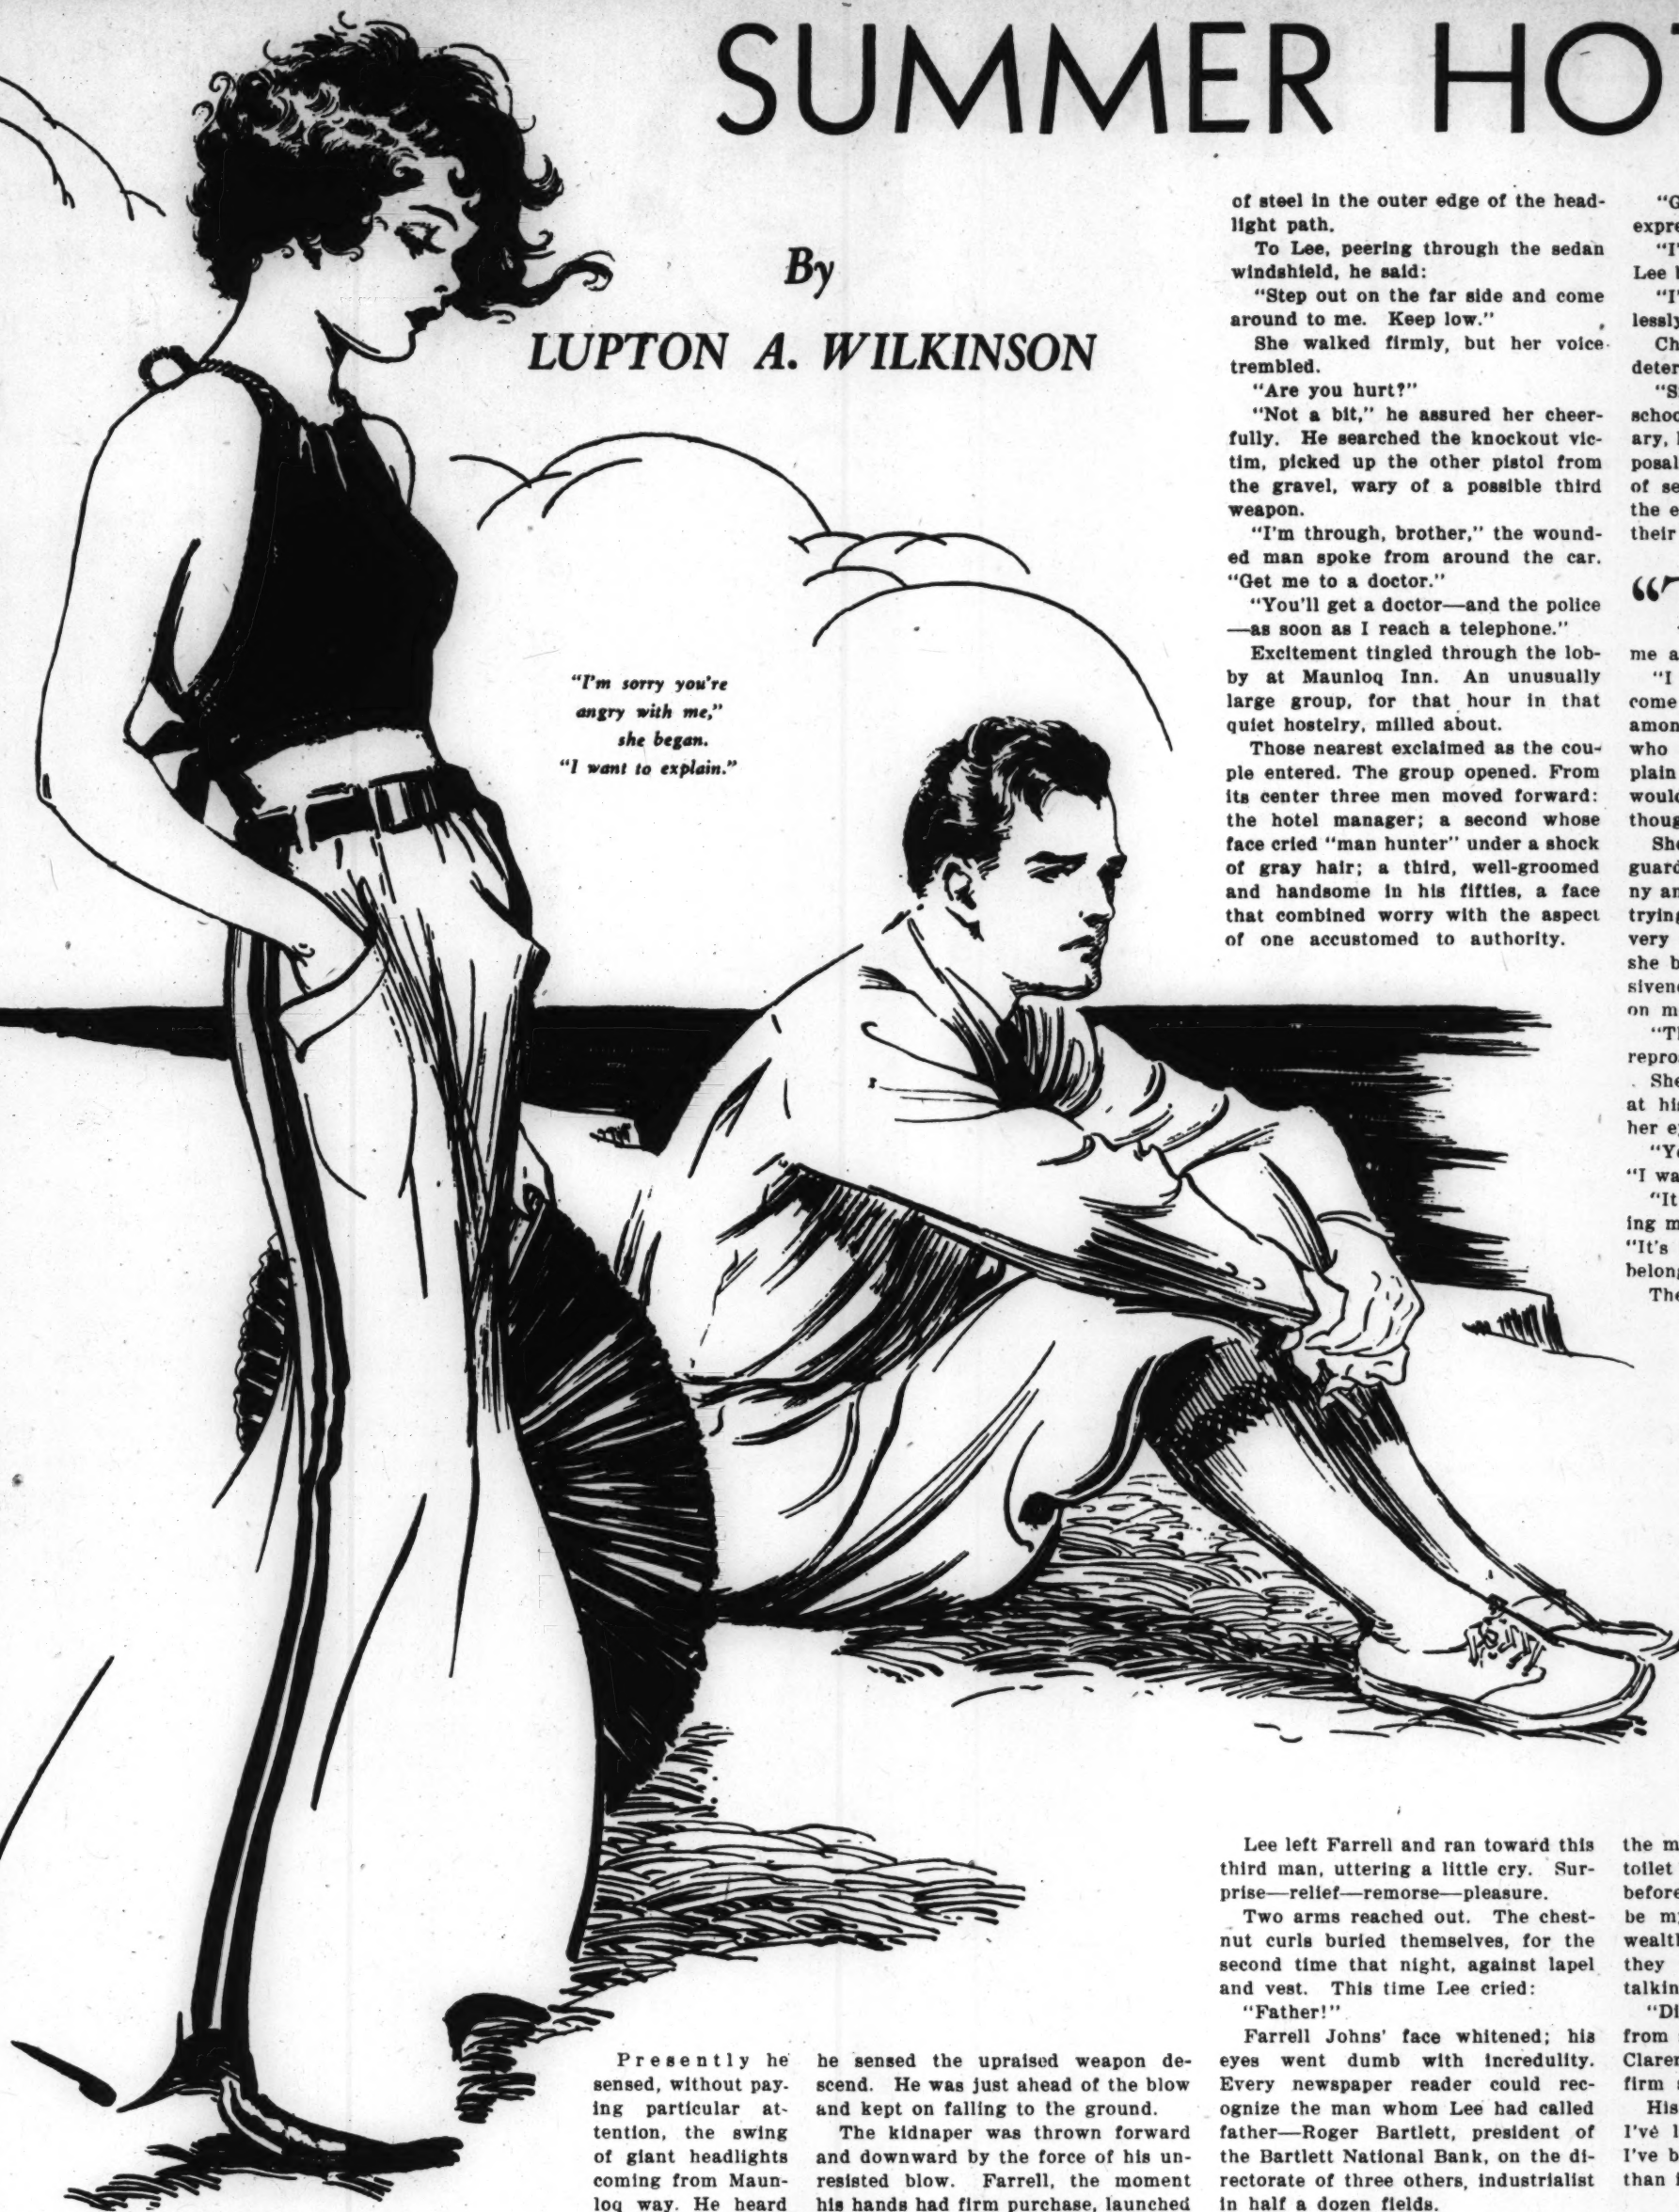

Color drained from her face. She flushed.

"Why—why, of course!" She sipped the Tokay nervously.

"Let's just make Maunloq a special and particular dream," he pleaded, "separate from the rest of the world."

Lee fought a whirl of sick speculation. Was he waiting to make some sort of check on her? That would be priggish, cruel—unworthy. Was there some relative who had to inspect her? Was he—her heart skipped a beat—involved with some other girl, so that he had to wait and free himself?

Or was he unable to make up his mind whether or not she was attracted to him by his money? Knowing the world to be what she knew it was, she could not blame him if he felt that

"I'm sorry you're angry with me," she began. "I want to explain."

Presently he sensed, without paying particular attention, the swing of giant headlights coming from Maunloq way. He heard the cat-like sound of a big car; came to alertness as the purr faded, ceased. A white flood of light bathed the road just behind them. Two men strode swiftly across the narrow space toward the Lugano.

Banditry? Blackmail? Worse? Farrell was unarmed. Real fear—for Lee—clutched at him as the nearest of the two men leveled an automatic.

"Step out, now, hurry, both of you!" "There's no use to be rough," Farrell countered, keeping the fear out of his voice. "You're quite welcome to what money I have with me."

"Out!" the man ordered again. "And make it snappy."

Farrell stepped down. Lee, following, seemed very small and helpless. She exercised a virtue he had thought rare in women. She said nothing.

"What's the idea?" Farrell asked. "I—"

"Shut up! Over to the other car."

The men walked then toward the headlights, Lee and her captor first, Farrell and the other a few paces behind. A capacious new blue sedan loomed in the road.

"Get in, you," one of the men commanded Lee.

"What shall we do with this guy?" the other asked.

"Conk him on the head."

Farrell turned his back to the man with the pistol and let himself fall as he sensed the upraised weapon descend. He was just ahead of the blow and kept on falling to the ground.

The kidnaper was thrown forward and downward by the force of his unresisted blow. Farrell, the moment his hands had firm purchase, launched his feet upward and back, an old gymnast's trick. Those feet were of adequate masculine size; they flew out with the force of a triphammer.

The man went down, groaning, and the pistol rolled, clearly visible, in the headlight glare. Both scrambled for it, but Farrell was in no pain and his opponent was.

He got there first and, as the two half rose, he hit hard with his left

The chestnut curls buried themselves, for the second time that night, against lapel and vest.

The man went down again, heavily. The second man had been about to follow Lee into the sedan. He turned at sound of the scraping on gravel, but he was not prepared for resistance; his body was awkwardly turned; he was a split second slow in drawing his gun.

Farrell crouched in front of the mudguard and fired in time. The man staggered and went down, shooting wildly.

"Throw the pistol out where I can see it," Farrell called, "or I'll let you have the rest of the load."

There was a moment's pause, a groan, a curse; then a click on gravel and Farrell could make out the glint of steel in the outer edge of the headlight path.

To Lee, peering through the sedan windshield, he said:

"Step out on the far side and come around to me. Keep low."

She walked firmly, but her voice trembled.

"Are you hurt?"

"Not a bit," he assured her cheerfully. He searched the knockout victim, picked up the other pistol from the gravel, wary of a possible third weapon.

"I'm through, brother," the wounded man spoke from around the car.

"Get me to a doctor."

"You'll get a doctor—and the police—as soon as I reach a telephone."

Excitement tingled through the lobby at Maunloq Inn. An unusually large group, for that hour in that quiet hostelry, milled about.

Those nearest exclaimed as the couple entered. The group opened. From its center three men moved forward: the hotel manager; a second whose face cried "man hunter" under a shock of gray hair; a third, well-groomed and handsome in his fifties, a face that combined worry with the aspect of one accustomed to authority.

"Good morning," he said, without expression.

"I'm sorry you're angry with me," Lee began. "I want to explain."

"I'm not angry," he denied tonelessly.

Chilled by his listless manner, but determined, she plunged ahead.

"Since I graduated from finishing school, and made my debut in January, life has just been parties and proposals. I grew mighty tired, Farrell, of seeing greed for papa's money in the eyes of 'eligible' young men—and their mothers."

"Then papa came home with a kidnap threat. I just laid it to some crank, but it gave me an idea."

"I made up my mind, suddenly, to come away and spend two weeks among people who would not know who I was—people who were just plain folks, who, if they liked me, would do so sincerely, without the thought of gaining something."

She put a hand on his arm. "The guard papa hired for me was so funny and grim. I lost him without half trying. Foolish, maybe, but it wasn't very terrible, was it? . . . At least," she bridled under his lack of responsiveness, "you won't have to check up on me now, will you?"

"That's a hell of a thing to say," he reproached gloomily.

She had seated herself on the sand at his side. Now she rose, tears in her eyes.

"You needn't swear!" she reproved. "I was only trying to—"

"It hasn't been you that's been holding me back, Lee," he roused himself. "It's been my own situation. I don't belong at the Palace."

The meaning of what he said filtered through her mind.

Her eyes grew cool. "I don't think I like masqueraders," she began; then, as she saw him wince, she stopped and waited.

"Four years ago," he explained, "two boys and I, who thought the depression would be brief, started an advertising agency. Dick had the money—or his father did. Martin and I thought we had the brains. The most I've ever been able to draw from the firm"—he looked shamefaced—"has been $40 a week, and, lately, little or nothing."

"Then, when it seemed we had reached the end, we landed an account—one of the most exclusive and highest priced toilet preparations. We decided that before writing the copy, which would be my job, we ought to learn how wealthy people were living now, what they were thinking, how they were talking."

"Dick borrowed his father's old car from storage. Martin—the one I call Clarence—acted as chauffeur. The firm staked me to two weeks here."

His distress increased. "I'm afraid I've lost out with my partners, too. I've been more interested in—the Inn than in the Palace."

SHE was laughing. The sky and sea seemed cleaner, brighter.

"Don't you think I'm high-class people?" she chided. "Farrell, you're such a goose!"

"You know what I mean," he said. "Listen," she argued. "Papa can—"

"That's just it," he broke in. "I'm not one who wants your father's money—or his help. I want to earn what I bring to the woman I love. Lee, I can't marry you now. It was a bad enough when you were a salesgirl whom I had made think I was rich. Now it's impossible."

Lee took both his hands. "Farrell," she threatened, "do you want me to beat you? Listen! Way back in the bank holiday papa pledged all his personal assets so his banks could reopen and no depositors lose. The original assets of those banks may prove good—maybe not."

"Papa has told nobody. There's an even chance you may be marrying a penniless girl. Farrell, get sensible. Do you love me?"

Up the beach trudged two dowagers taking their before-breakfast walk.

"Just look!" one of them shrieked. "I always knew that young fellow with the foreign car was no good. Isn't that shameless? Right out on the beach!"

Pumping '4,000,000 Pounds of Ice' 8000 Feet Into the Earth

How a South African Gold Mine
Will Be Air-Conditioned

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

by an American Engineer.

NEWARK, N. J.
W HAT with heat waves rolling up and down the country, mercury rising to unprecedented levels and heat deaths reading like the casualty lists in a small war—this summer has heard more than its share of heat talk. But this year there has been a new topic appended to the groans of the prostrate: air-conditioning. Now they propose to do something about it, indoors at least. And one hears almost as much cooled air talk these days as hot air talk.

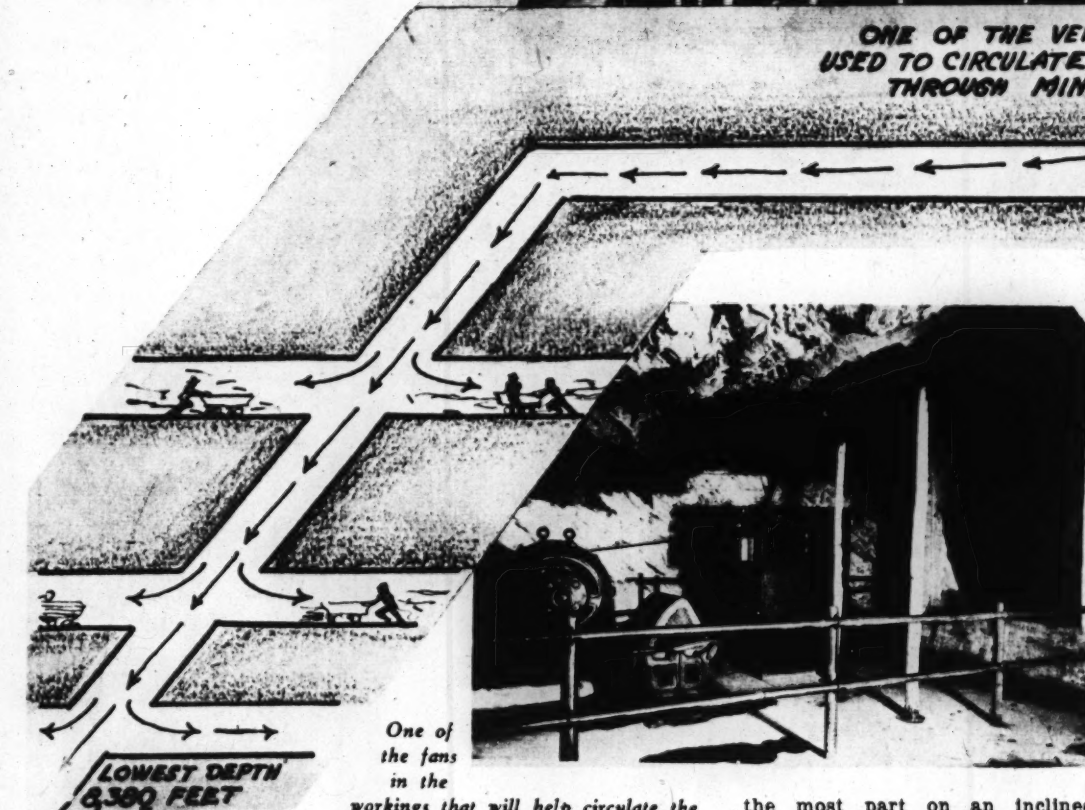

For that reason it is appropriate that the most superlatively hot summer since scientific records began should see the most superlatively big air-conditioning project since air-conditioning began. They have started work here on a cooling system that fairly takes one's breath away. Factories in Newark are now turning out the machines which will give cool and dehumidified air for miners working nearly two miles below the surface of Africa's Transvaal. The scope of the plan is said to be even greater than that of the $1,000,000 system which cools the 70-story R. C. A. Building in New York City, hitherto the largest ventilating project undertaken.

Temperatures in the Robinson Deep gold mine, near Johannesburg, where the installation is to be made, are normally higher than the record heat in cities where records have been breaking this summer. The temperature of the rock at the bottom of the mine is 102 degrees Fahrenheit; the air is frequently as hot as 120 degrees.

It might be added that the barometer is even more cruel down there than the thermometer. Frequently humidity approaches the saturation point of 100 per cent. But the air conditioning project now under way is not being installed for purely humanitarian the most part on an inclined plane. Getting ore out of a pit as deep as that is expensive enough under the best conditions, but with heat and dampness what they are, the efficiency of the miners is at a minimum. Prostrations are frequent; accidents occur owing to fatigue; there is considerable ill health. When the dry, cool air of the new plant is forced down the shaft, the working efficiency of the men is expected to increase 60 per cent. Not only that, but the inauguration of this new plan and its introduction in other mines throughout the Rand district in the Union of South Africa will make it possible to go even farther down and to increase materially the world's gold supply.

But the mere numerical analysis of the new plant is as exciting as a consideration of the effects of the project. The refrigeration will be equal in effect to that which would be gotten by melting 4,000,000 pounds of ice a day. The fans will pour down the great shaft 400,000 cubic feet of cold air every minute—that is, 4000 cubic feet will enter the mouth of the mine every minute. To cool that much air 8400 gallons per minute of spray water will be used. To operate the machinery 3000 horsepower of electric energy will be needed. This will force nearly 12 tons of air down the shaft, about ten times as much weight as the weight of ore coming up, minute for minute.

The engineer who has planned the cooling system for Robinson Deep mine is Willis H. Carrier, one of the pioneers of thermal engineering. Carrier has air-conditioned numerous department stores and office buildings. He was designer of the air cooling systems in the White House executive offices and the Capitol. This, of course, is his biggest commission and it has involved a great deal of work. D. C. Lindsey, one of his assistants, spent a year doing field research in South Africa, working with the consulting engineers employed by the mine company.

The equipment which these engineers plan to put in includes a spray pool as large as a football field and filled with hundreds of jets. The water in this pool will be used over and over again to absorb heat from the air in the dehumidifier. Three centrifugal refrigerating machines of the largest type in use will do the actual air cooling, their effect being

equivalent to that obtained by melting 2000 tons of ice a day. Two huge fans will force the cooled air into an inclined shaft leading into the main shaft at a depth of about 100 feet. Other ventilating fans farther below the surface will circulate the conditioned air through the tunnels. Another shaft will be used to discharge the conditioned air to the surface after it has accomplished its mission.

This machinery will affect more people than those involved in actual mining. More gold affects everyone connected with our civilization.

Whatever may happen to the gold-consuming world as a result of the new project, however, no one will be more immediately concerned than the 250,000 miners who earn a living in the deep pits of the Central Rand gold fields. A difference of 40 or 50 degrees in the temperature of the air they breathe will be significant to them.

The First Aerial Mail Train

"I believe we can prove that present day aircraft are literally flying power houses," O'Meara commented after the flight. "A railroad locomotive, for example, has tremendous power of traction, but it is the cars behind that carry the freight."

"Aeronautical engineering has proved that only so much weight may be loaded per square foot of wing surface in any airplane. Yet the same airplane has enough excess pulling power in its motor to tow additional ships, as already proved in the towing of motorless planes."

Each glider, he calculated, cut the normal air speed of the biplane only 3 1/2 miles an hour.

Glider have been towed singly or in groups repeatedly in the United States in the last six years, but never over long distances carrying useful loads. In 1930 Frank Hawks towed "Duke" Jerigan across the continent in a glider built by Prof. Franklin.

So far in this country the glider has been used chiefly for sport, although its multiple advantages for training have been recognized by many aviators and taken up by the Navy. In the fifth annual contest of the Soaring Society of America, held last June at Elmira, N. Y., Richard du Pont soared to an altitude of 6224 feet and traveled 155 miles. Warren Eaton, president of the society, was towed to 4000 feet altitude and then cut loose—literally and colloquially—in a breath-taking series of spins, loops, whip-stalls, wingovers, just to demonstrate that the glider is not so fragile as it seems. O'Meara participated in the towing of four gliders behind a single airplane for the first time in this country.

Other countries have been more alert to the possibilities of motorless planes. That is particularly true of Germany, bereft of its "wings" by the treaty of Versailles, and Russia, "determined to install into the minds of 160,000,000 people the conviction that the air must be conquered."

On last July 26 at Wasserkuppe, one German piloted a glider on a six-hour flight to a world record of 225 miles. On the next day of the same meet, another German shattered the record with a flight of 234.5 miles. A little less than two months before, the German aviator Boening made a successful flight at Halle with a 120-horsepower plane towing four gliders.

In Russia, where a half-million children are to learn flying by glider, air trains have made successful flights since last May. A biplane with three gliders flew 800 miles from Moscow to the Crimea without mishap except a forced landing in the Ukraine because of bad weather. More recently a flight from Moscow to Batisk in North Caucasus, a distance of 807 miles, was made in six hours.

The Mechanical Dam Builder

in the leveled sand over which the concrete is being poured. These will form reinforced concrete struts, six by five feet, below the 2 1/2-foot concrete floor, to brace the walls.

The land wall of the locks will be 32 feet thick, rising about two feet above the level of the railroad tracks on the bank beside it, and the intermediate wall will be 47 feet thick, alone containing more concrete than the entire locks of other navigation dams on the Upper Mississippi.

B EYOND it another cofferdam is being built in preparation for construction of the auxiliary lock, 360 by 110 feet. The main lock, being built in the 26-acre pit of the big cofferdam, will be of the same width, but with a length of 600 "clear" feet, allowing for inclosure in the locks of two railroad turnbridge piers.

In these automatically operated locks steamers will pass from the upstream level of 419 feet above mean gulf level to the downstream level of 404 feet on the year-round average, 396 feet at extreme low water. Lock construction, employing hundreds of men and stimulating materials industries employing thousands, will consume more than $3,000,000 PWA money, and $5,000,000 more will be required for the 1724-foot movable dam to complete the structure.

The dam will create a pool, never more than three miles wide, reaching 40 miles up the Mississippi to Cap A Gris, Lincoln County, and up the Illinois to La Grange, half-way to Peoria. Three 80-foot roller gates and 30 40-foot "Tainter" gates will open by machinery to allow flood water to pass through with, as shown in extended studies by District Engineer B. M. Harloe, no appreciable effect on high water levels. Extreme high has been recorded as 13.5 feet above the pool to be created by the dam when the gates are closed.

Not power, as in the dams at Keokuk and Bagnell, is the object, but navigation. The Alton dam is one of 27 planned by the Corps of Engineers. The Rock Island dam is complete and in operation. Together, the 27 dams are to provide a nine-foot channel for the reviving river commerce which, by Government estimate, has saved the Middle West $20,000,000 in the ten years' experimental operation of the Federal barge lines, and, its advocates insist, may save billions in years to come.

The Mystery of Agnes Tufverson's Disappearance

one said: "You marry her. Then if anything wonderful should happen—we would have money."

But before leaving the Southampton pier, Poderjay sent this cablegram to Miss Tufverson's family in Detroit: "Bad crossing. Cannot stand fog here. Sailing for India across France. Much happiness to you throughout the year, Agnes."

Not until last June did Miss Tufverson's family become worried. Miss Sally Tufverson, a sister, came to New York to ask the Missing Persons Bureau to check up. Her sister, she said, had never let so many months go by without writing. Even if she were in India, she would drop a line. A check of the records of Atlantic ports showed that Miss Tufverson had not sailed from America after her marriage. The wires cracked and Scotland Yard traced the course of Poderjay and Mme. Ferrand to Austria, where the police found and jailed the pair.

Poderjay declared at first that his American bride had gone to India alone. Later he changed his story and said he had last seen her at 9 a. m. December 20 as she was taking a train for Montreal. The Negro maid's story of seeing the pair together in the apartment that night contradicted this version. In his first story, he denied having married Miss Tufverson. Later, he admitted marrying her to save her from spinsterhood. In his final story, he declared that after the quarrel at the Hamburg-American pier, Miss Tufverson said: "If you do not hear from me within a month, you will know I am dead." As a matter of fact, he said, enlarging as he went along, she would probably have ended her life from disappointment if he had not married her.

Poderjay admitted accepting the woman's savings. Mme. Ferrand was wearing part of Miss Tufverson's trousseau when arrested. The rest was found in the Vienna apartment. Also found were articles which police said showed Poderjay to be an erotic type.

Mme. Ferrand said: "If women were unhappy, Ivan tried to comfort them. He had some business to settle in New York and that was where our friend, Miss Tufverson lived. She was looking for a husband and unfortunately she fell in love with mine."

"I KNEW Miss Tufverson. I met her in Jugo-Slavia when she was there last year. She was a charming woman but hysterical and exalted."

In Belgrade, Mrs. Zelfka Bradaritch Poderjay told how Poderjay had loved and married her in 1927 and then disappeared. She said 450,000 gold dinars disappeared from her safe deposit box at the same time.

"But he was a good husband," she added. "He was easy to get along with. He never abused me and we were very happy until he went away."

In Copenhagen, police said Poderjay had married and left Mile. Ellil Hanses, daughter of a Danish General. He denied it, stating he had simply been engaged to her.

Belgrade police said they wanted Poderjay for a minor swindle of some kind (not the gold dinars case) but did not extradite him, bowing and leaving the path clear for the New York authorities.

While the investigation was on, excitement was created by the finding of a woman's torso in a black trunk in a railroad station at Brighton, England. But examination showed it was not Miss Tufverson's. For a time a body lifted from the Harlem ship canal was thought to be hers but it wasn't. Reports that Miss Tufverson had been seen in Montreal and Boston left through when investigated by New York police. Strangest of all was the case of the woman taken to Bellevue Hospital, a starvation case. She gave the name of Marion Smith but admitted it was false. She resembled Miss Tufverson in many ways and even lapsed occasionally into legalistic jargon. But Sally Tufverson said it wasn't her sister.

In the police circular Miss Tufverson is described as being five feet, six inches tall and weighing 135 pounds. She had dark blue eyes and dark brown hair and an operation scar on her abdomen.

Acting Captain John H. Ayres retired as head of the Missing Persons Bureau while the investigation was at its height. At one time he said, "In sixteen years the department has handled 350,000 cases. This one is the most mystifying of them all."

He added that he had never encountered such a tough assignment of proving the corpse delicti. By a very odd coincidence, Miss Tufverson had stoutly defended this legal doctrine in a conversation with friends over the dinner table a few months before she vanished. She insisted it protected the innocent from unjust prosecution.

MOVIE DRESSOGRAPHS

ALICE FAYE

A different movie star will make his or her appearance in this space every week. Accompanying will be three costumes this particular player wore in various roles played on the screen. Cut out the player and paste on cardboard. Then cut out the costumes. Now dress the star in her proper outfits, being careful to assemble each costume correctly.

This week's star is Alice Faye. The three sets of costumes shown here were worn by her in these roles in the following movies: Jean Legai in "She Learned About Sailors"; Peggy in "Now I'll Tell," and Kitty Donnelly in George White's "Scandals."

Next week: Nils Asther.

HICKORY HOLLOW FOLKS

O. HUM'S STRATEGY FAILS

THE CHARACTERS

O. HUM—A lazy opossum.
MIDNIGHT—A wise old owl.
WALLY WADDLER—A gay old gander.
GRUMPY—A grouchy old bear.
HILDA HOARDER—A mother squirrel.
RED WILY—A wicked fox.

Red Wily is very angry. The last time he paid Hickory Hollow a visit Bill Bunny warned the little folks living there of his coming and when Red arrived he found they had all retreated to some place of safety, so his visit was in vain. To make matters worse, O. Hum, who had climbed a tree to escape Red, chided him as he passed below. Red vowed he would catch O. Hum. And he is on his way to carry out his threat when he is discovered by Wally, who dashes into town, spreading the alarm as

THE PLAY BEGINS

WALLY WADDLER—Red Wily is coming. Red Wily is coming. I just saw him on the other side of the hill.

GRUMPY—Hump, he'd better not let me see him around here.

HILDA HOARDER—I'd give anything if we could catch him and put him in jail.

GRUMPY—I'm afraid Red is too smart to let himself be caught. (So they talk about how fine it would be to have Red in jail and how they would reward the one who would catch him. O. Hum listens for a while then, tiring, walks away. As he passes under a tree he meets Midnight and tells him all about Red and the reward.)

MIDNIGHT—You could catch Red if you wanted to. All you would have to do is let Red catch you, then blow some smoke in his face and put him to sleep. (O. Hum thinks it over.)

O. HUM—I'll do it. If you will get someone to carry him to jail? (Midnight agrees to do this and they both leave to carry out their parts. O. Hum selects a nice shady spot and lies down, pretending to be sleeping, his pipe in his mouth. He doesn't have long to wait, for a moment later Red Wily's leering face cautiously looks from behind the tree.)

RED WILY—Ah, ha. So there you are. Ha, ha. (He comes from behind the tree and laughs at O. Hum.) Ha, ha. And you are sound asleep, too. And how becoming it is. But, what an evil smelling pipe; we'll have to get rid of that. (So Red takes O. Hum's pipe and throws it away. Then he puts the badly frightened O. Hum in a sack, which he throws over his shoulder, and walks off.) I just couldn't make myself wake him up, so I'll carry him. My, won't he be surprised to see me. Ha, ha. I just wish he could enjoy his stay with me as much as I will. Ha, ha, ha.

This is called a campus suit. The jacket is dark brown cut-velvet, and the skirt is a plaid of brown, green and beige. The turtleneck blouse is green jersey.

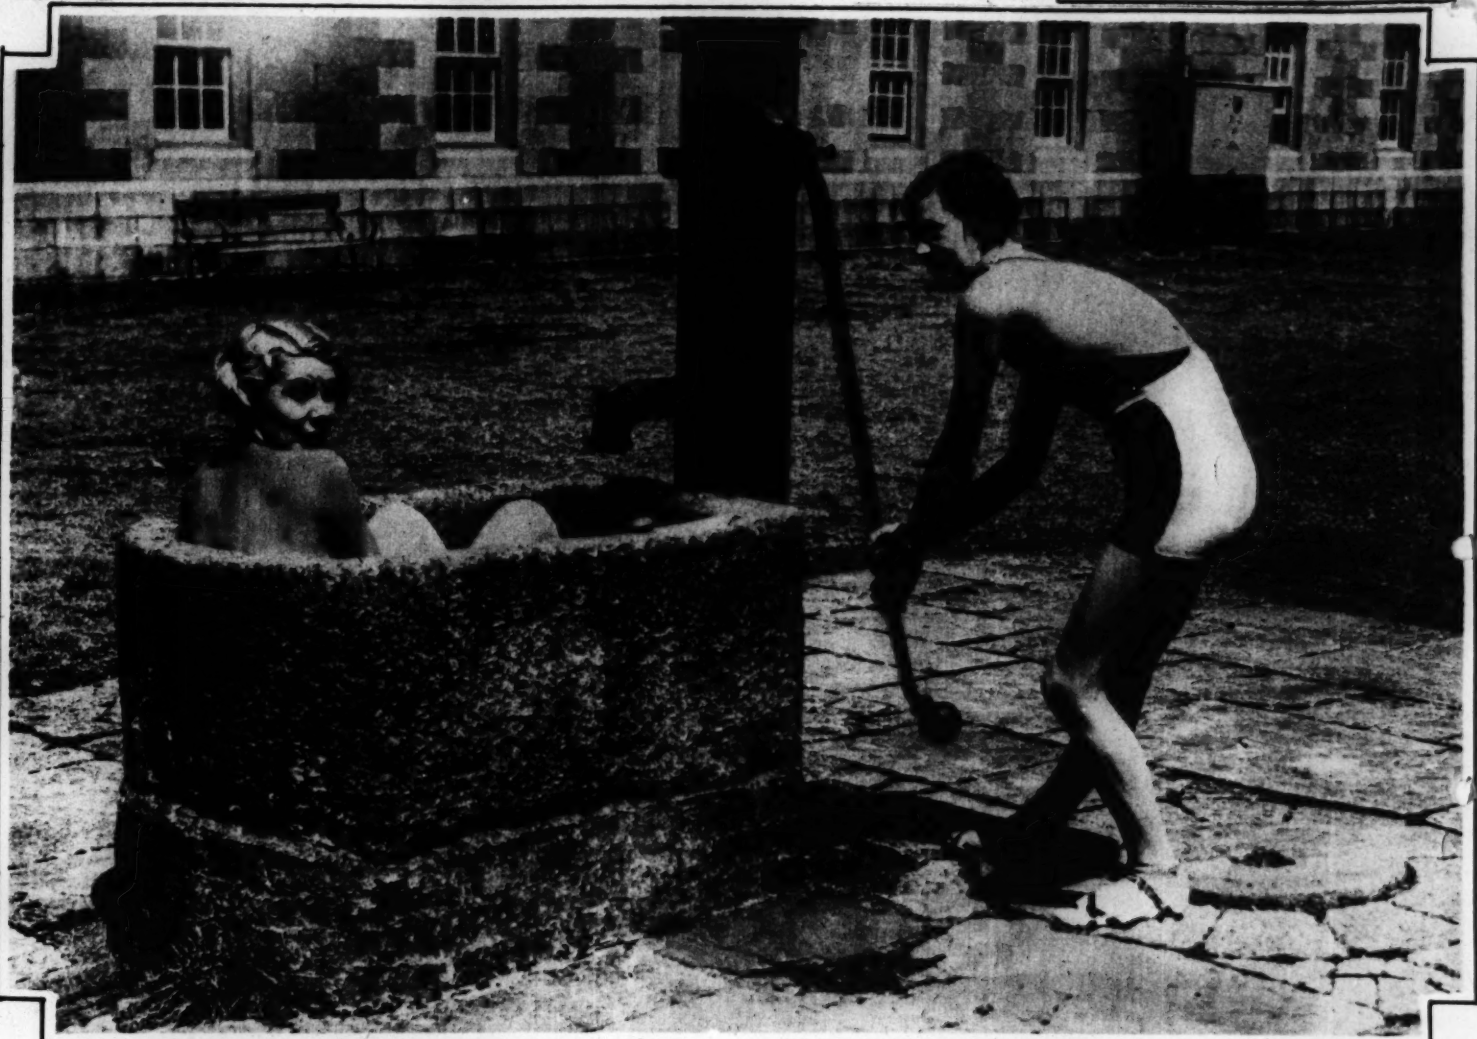

Traveling outfit, the suit and long, mannish topcoat being of brown, beige and red checked tweed. The square patch pockets are intricately stitched.

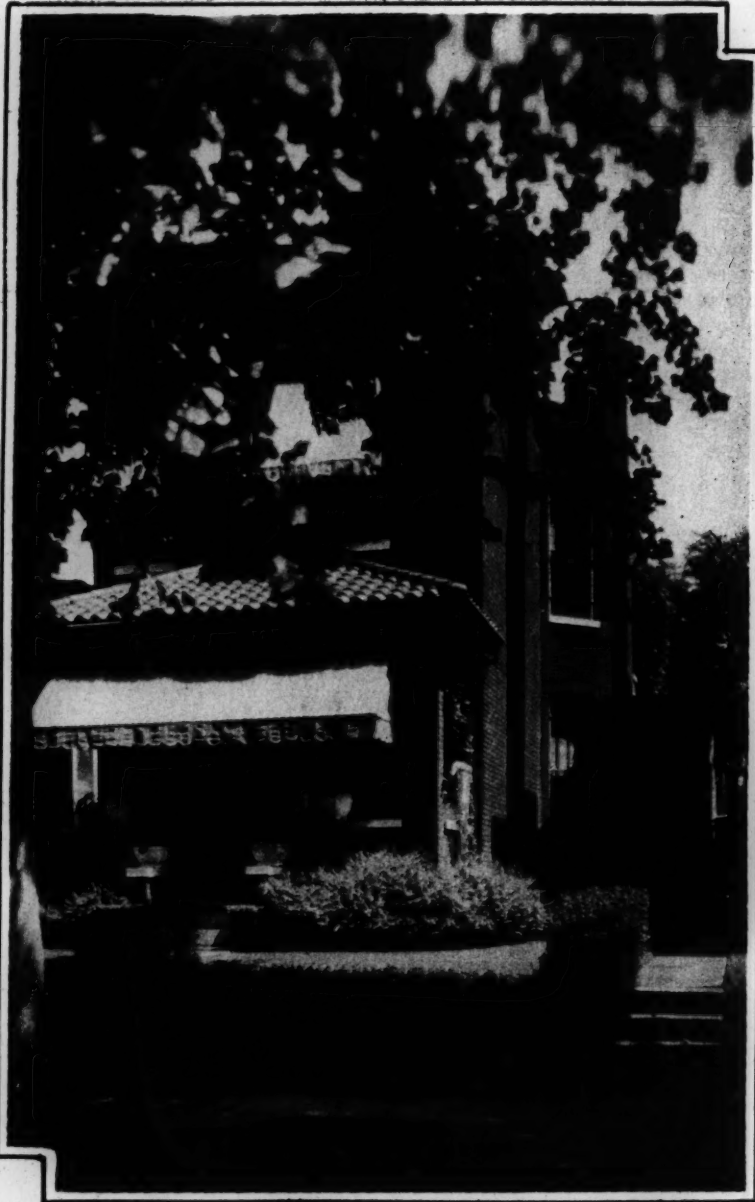

Afternoon suit consisting of black velveteen skirt and scarf and wool jacket of black, green and white plaid. The belt is of black calf.

OLD-FASHIONED, PERHAPS, BUT STILL USEFUL

Icy Wastelands
Little America

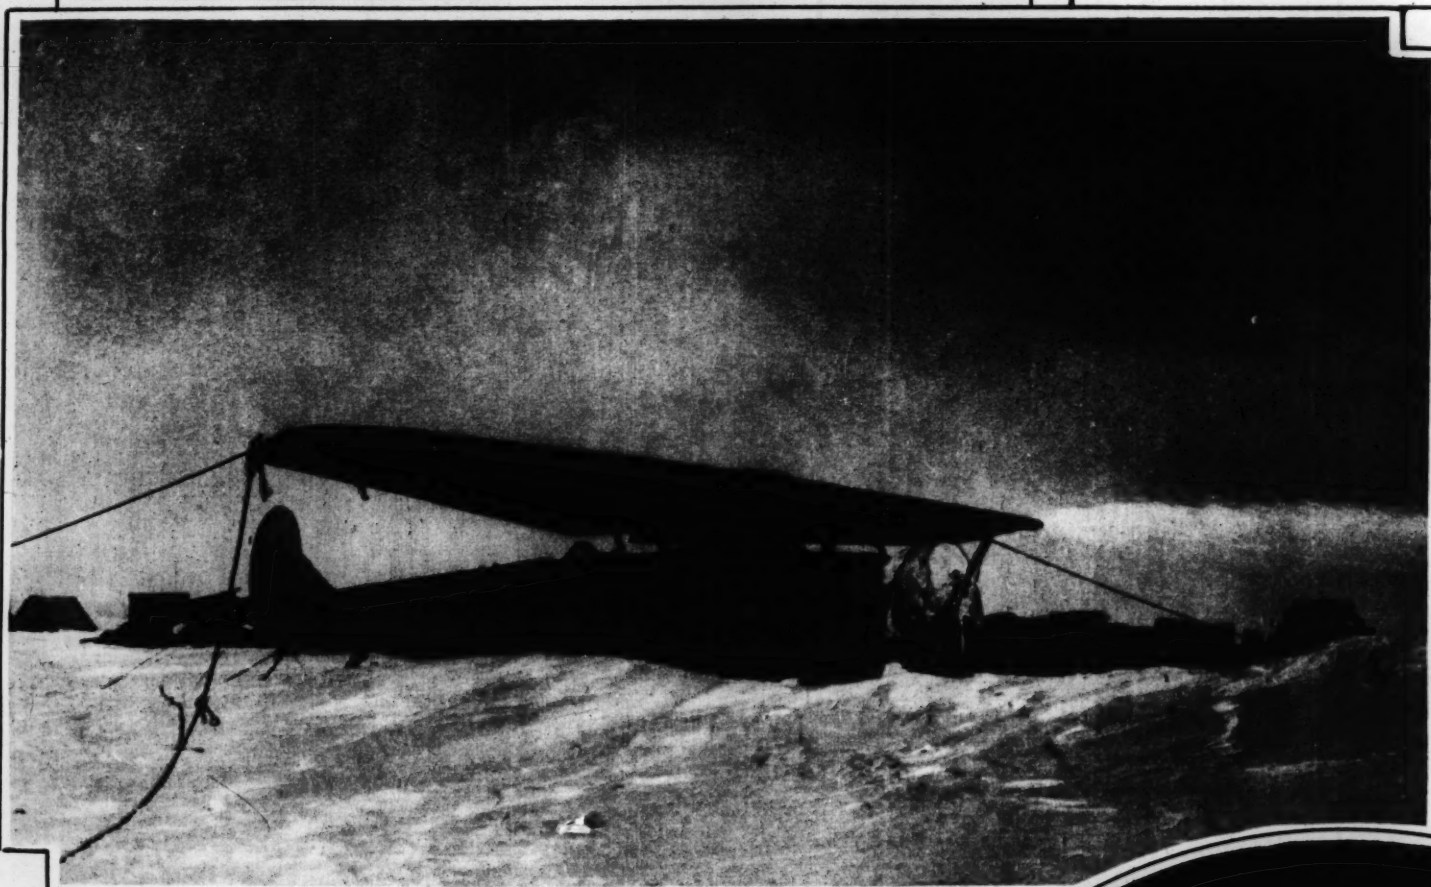

Negotiating a crevasse: Such cracks in the ice as the small one shown above frequently present difficulties in Antarctic travel. Here it is being spanned by a bridge of boards. Below, the same bridge is being used to enable one of the Byrd Expedition's tractors to cross the crevasse.

Trekking across the ice field: A dog sled loaded with supplies arriving at Pressure Camp, which is marked by the same little flags which indicate the safe road to all the Expedition's outposts.

Expedition.

Anchored against the high winds: The Pilgrim, one of the Byrd Expedition's planes, fastened by cables to a pile of packing cases, with its engine shrouded to protect it from the cold.

Planting the stars and stripes in the farthest South: An officer of the Second Expedition sets out the emblem of the Republic in front of the radio station from which broadcasts are made to the United States.

A lesson in skiing: Quinn O. Blackburn, veteran of the first trip to the Antarctic under Admiral Byrd, gives Joseph Pelter, the official photographer, a few pointers on navigating the level snow.

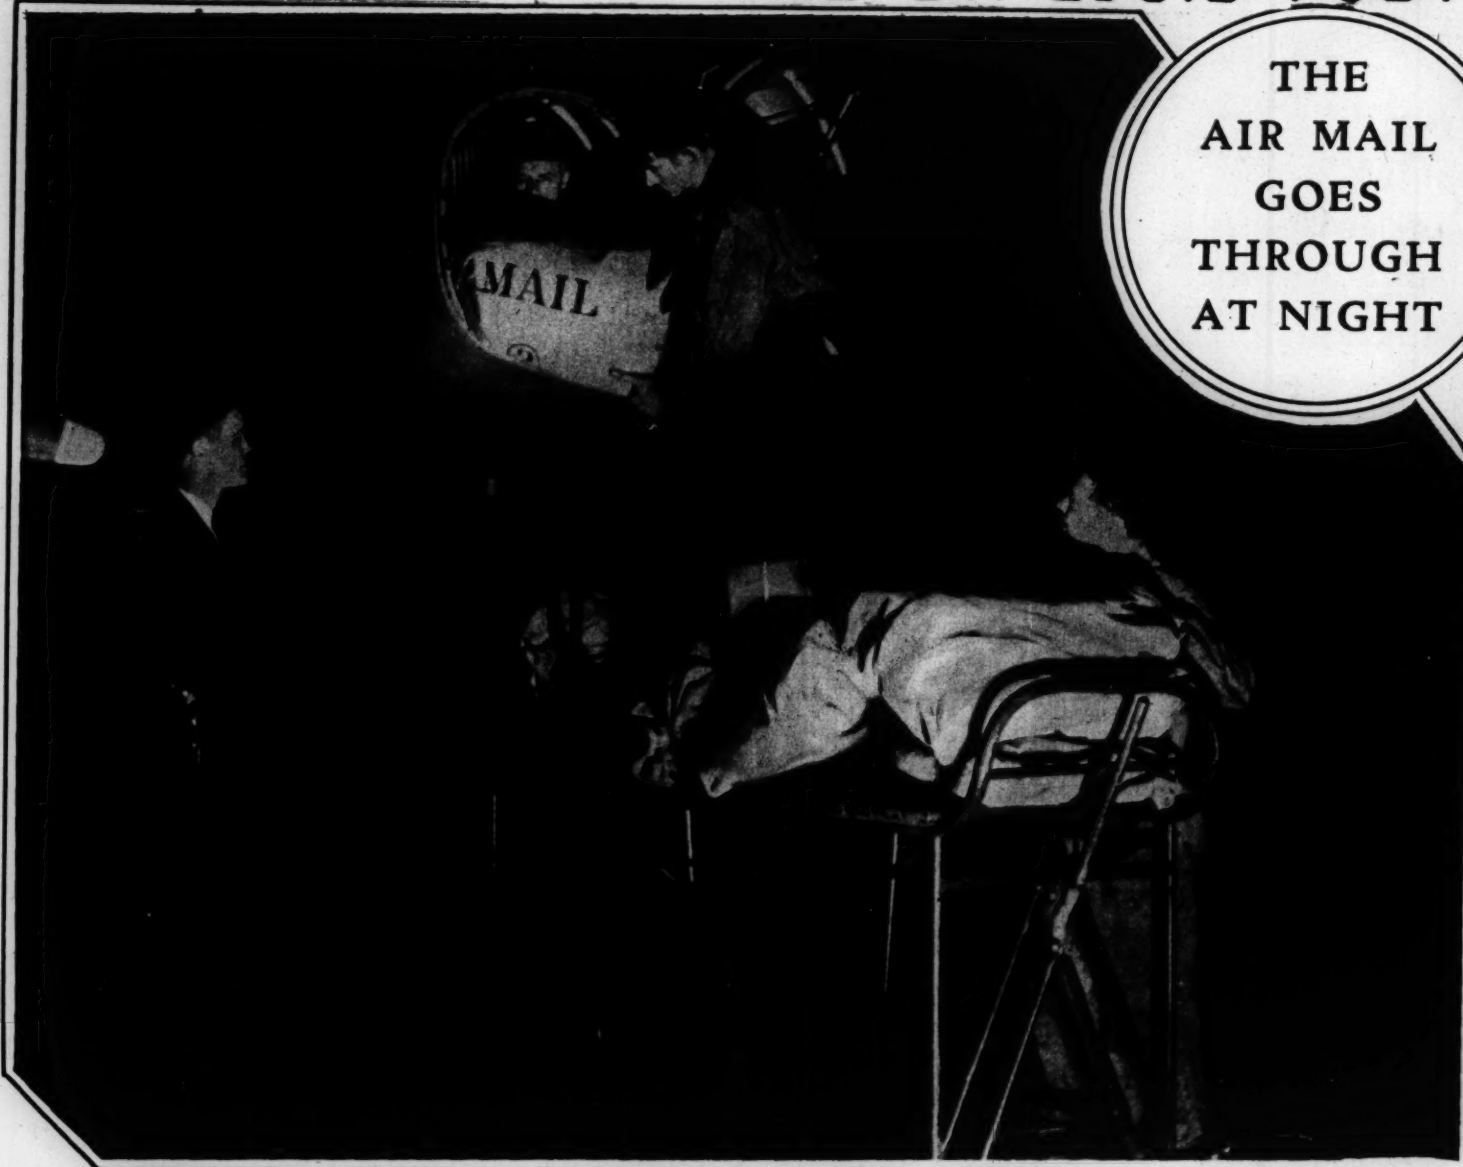

The road to Little America: Starting a dog sled trip over the pressure ice from Pressure Camp to the base camp. The sled carries wireless equipment unloaded from the supply ship.

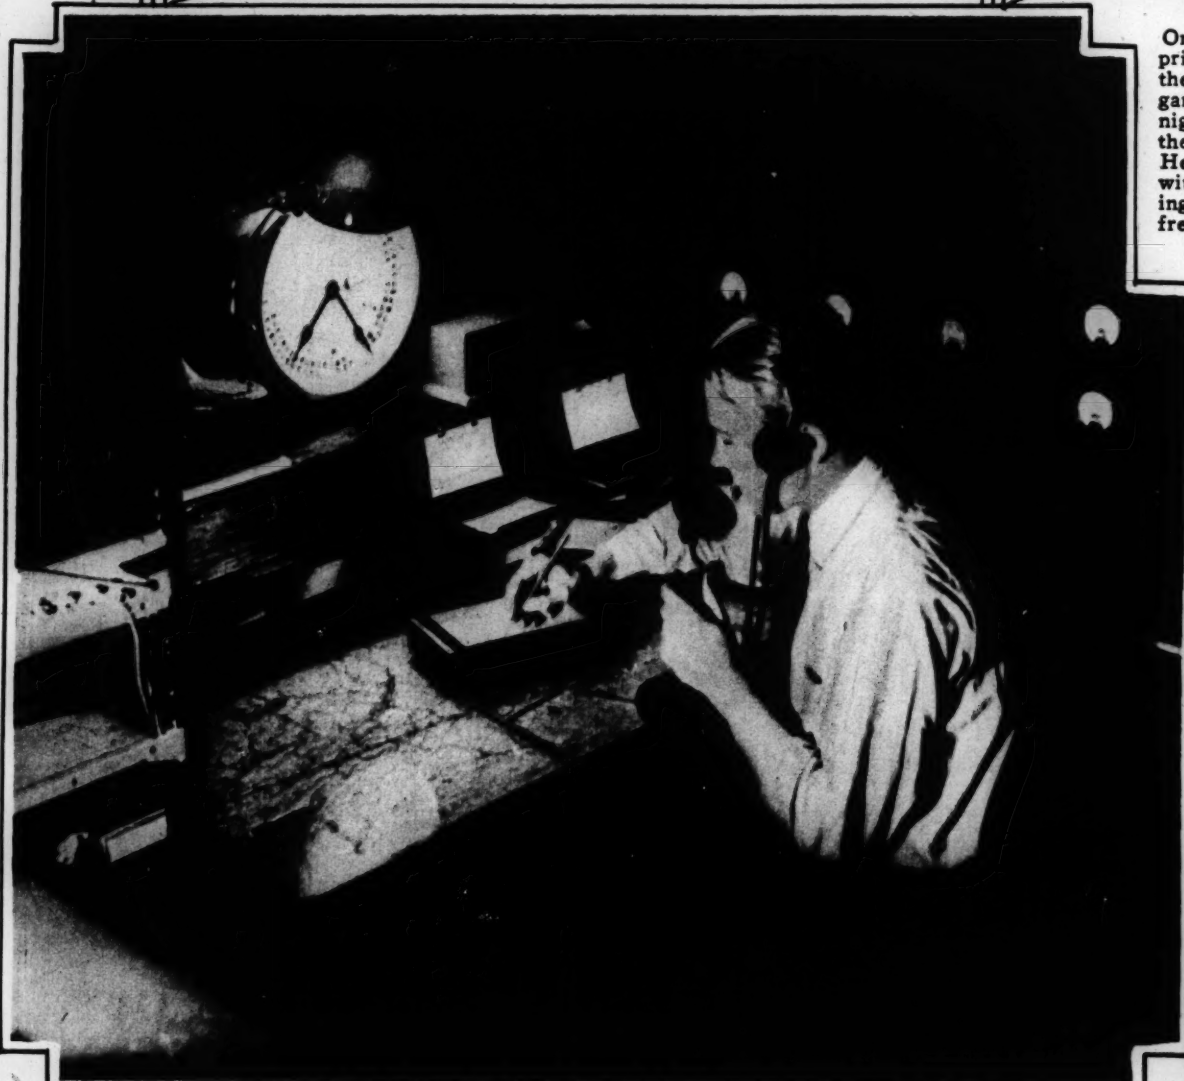

"I'm going milking, Sir . . ." Edgar Cox, carpenter for the Antarctic community, is also the milkman and dairyman. The three cows, one of which gave birth to a bull calf while at sea, produce 60 quarts of milk a day.

AT NIGHT

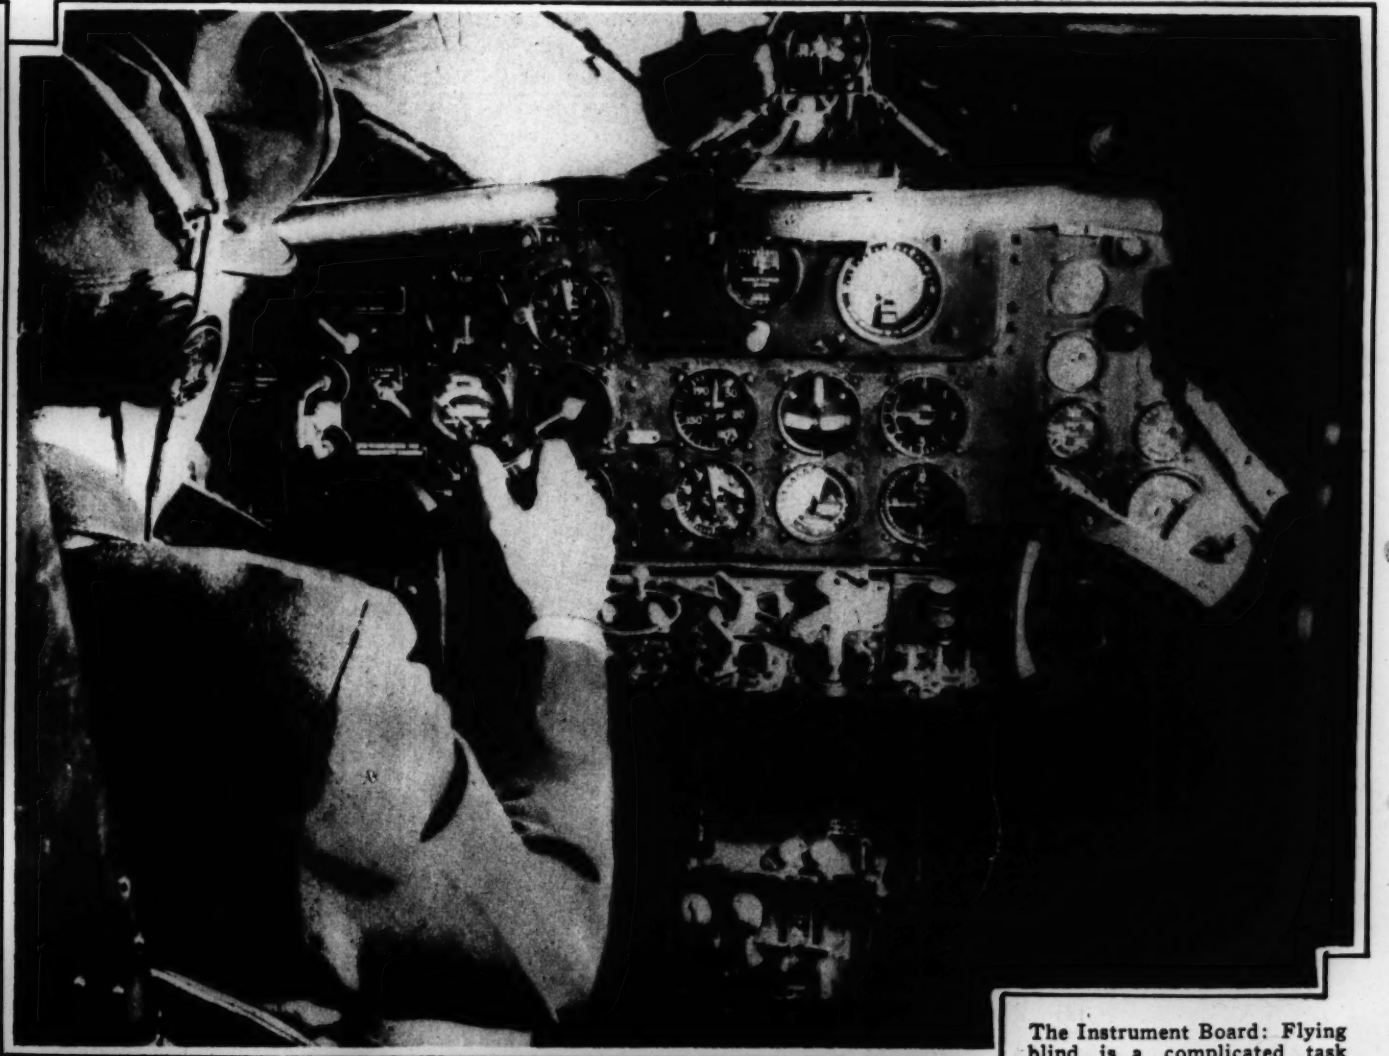

One of the romantic enterprises of the machine age is the efficient and complex organization which speeds the night mail on its way over the sleeping countryside. Here is a scene at the airport, with a great carrier plane being loaded with its valuable freight.

The Weather Chart: A veteran airmail pilot, Bob Dawson, who has more than a million miles of night flying behind him, takes notes from the chart where telegraphic reports of flying conditions on his route are pasted up, before mounting into the darkness.

The Radio Operator: Stationed at Newark, New Jersey, this man is like a guardian angel for pilots flying in every direction through his territory. He keeps up a constant contact with them, sending out weather reports and other information which may be essential to their safety.

The Instrument Board: Flying blind is a complicated task under any circumstances, but it would be virtually impossible without the information a pilot is able to take in at a glance from the constellation of gleaming dials on his board.

The Radio Station: Situated on the roof of a hangar at Newark, this little room is a focal point for the men who must get the mail up and down the coast, over mountains and plains, in all weathers.

At the Controls: Two pilots, equipped with every device that makes for speed and safety, guiding a fast mail plane through the night. Despite every aid which science and the ingenuity of engineers can give them, they are largely dependent on their own skill.
